TILT OVER ANTISEMITISM DISRUPTS HOTEL'S TRANQUILITY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, March 31.—What is declared by one side to have been an expression of anti-Semitism and by the other to have been an attempt to avoid arousing race antagonism, served today to disturb the hitherto happy family of writers, critics, theatrical folk and musicians who make the Hotel Algonquin in West Forty-fourth street a sort of midday salon.

According to Lewis Gensler and Morris Ryskind, younger members of the group, Frank Case, proprietor of the hotel, was actuated by anti-Semitism in declaring to them he would not reserve tables at luncheon for exclusively Jewish parties.

According to Case, only a desire to eliminate a situation resented by desirable Jewish patrons and calculated to creat race antagonism within his hotel prompted him to suggest to Gensler and Ryskind that as a condition of having tables in the main dining room at the busy lunch hour, they include and occasional gentile or two."

Both parties are agreed that Case did declare against exclusive Jewish parties and both are agreed that until Friday noon the relations of all three were friendly to the point of social intimacy.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP IN U. S. INCREASED 1,220,428 IN 1922

Federal Council Statistics Show Gain of 9591 Congregations and 15,252 Ministers, Greatest Growth Known.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—America apparently is growing more religious, according to figures made public today by Dr. E. O. Watson, statistician of the Federal Council of Churches, showing that religious bodies in the United States made their greatest growth during the last year. The membership increase was announced as 1,220,428 over the previous year.

There was a gain of 9591 congregations and 15,252 ministers in the past year. Available figures showed that the present membership of all religious bodies is 47,461,558, approximately 50 per cent greater than the average for the last five years. The total number of congregations is 243,590, led by 214,583 ministers.

Religious constituencies were estimated as follows: Protestant, 78,113,481; Roman Catholic, 18,104,804; Jews, 1,600,000; Latter Day Saints (Mormon), 604,082, and Eastern Orthodox (Greek and Russian), 456,054. The 30 bodies related to the Federal Council of Churches reported a total membership of 20,722,142 persons. The constituency was estimated at 59,021,718 persons.

U. S. ARMY FLYERS, IN AIR DERBY, SET NEW SPEED MARKS

RECORDS FAR ECLIPSE THOSE OF FRENCHMEN

Attempted Endurance Flight Ends in Failure When Pilots Are Forced Down by Engine Trouble.

By the Associated Press.
DAYTON, O., March 31.—In a spectacular aerial derby, army aviators from McCook Field today set new world speed records for 500 and 1000 kilometer distance (approximately 312½ miles and 616 miles), far eclipsing those made this week by French aviators at the Villa Sauvage airdrome. The planes traveled over a 31-mile triangular course.

Unofficial figures tonight showed that Lieut. Alex Pearson completed 500 kilometers in one hour 50 minutes 12 7-10 seconds, making approximately 169 miles an hour, and that Lieut. Harold Harris and Civilian Pilot Ralph Lockwood traveled 1000 kilometers in four hour 52 minutes, 35.24 seconds, averaging around 126 miles an hour.

Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, and Otis A. Porter of Indianapolis, were official timers.

Lieut. Batelier of the French army was the holder of the previous 500 kilometer record with a time of 2 hours 42 minutes 51 3-5 seconds, and Lieut. Currier of the 1000 kilometer distance, whose time was 6 hours 39 minutes 40 2-5 seconds.

In addition to the 500 kilometer mark set by Pearson, Harris and Lockwood also are credited with exceeding the French record for that distance, as are four other McCook Field aviators.

Eleven Planes Participate.

Eleven ships took the air shortly after 1 o'clock today in the effort to best the French records. Seven were to try for the 500 kilometer mark and four for the 1000. Five of the planes finished the 500 kilometer distance and four of the others were forced down.

Aviators who beat the French record for 500 kilometers and their time are: Louis Meister, 2 hours 32 minutes 48.44 seconds; average speed of 122 miles an hour; Lieut. Arthur Smith, 2 hours 32 minutes 31.88 seconds, average speed of 122 miles an hour; Lieut. H. H. Mills, 2 hours 36 minutes 26.69 seconds; average speed 119.2 miles an hour, and Lieut. J. S. Stromme, who went the distance in 2 hours 42 minutes 35.48 seconds, speeding at 114.7 miles an hour.

The time of Harris and Lockwood for 500 kilometers was 2 hours 26 minutes 39.9 seconds, a speed of 127 miles an hour.

The air circus was completed without a serious mishap. The planes that were forced down encountered engine trouble. Smith smashed a wheel in landing, after being forced down by a broken support wire.

Thrills of the day were furnished by Pearson, who flew a Verville-Speary ship. Taking off last, after a "barrel" roll at the start nearly made him crash, Pearson steadily crept up on the leaders and soon was setting the pace.

Liberty Motor Used.

Harris and Lockwood flew a DH-4 with a stock Liberty motor and field officials said the flight constituted one of the severest tests that type of Liberty motor has been put to.

A chill wind swept McCook Field and the cold above was so severe that Pearson froze his gums. The other flyers, however, did not report any great discomfort.

A. P. Verville, airplane designer, at McCeek Field, built the plane Pearson flew, and saw it successfully come through the gruelling test.

The attempted endurance flights of Lieuts. J. H. MacReady and Oakley G. Kelly, ended in failure early today when the T-2, a rebuilt Fokker monoplane, developed engine trouble and the two were forced to land at Wilbur Wright Field. They were seeking to better their own endurance record of 35 hours 15 minutes and 18 seconds.

MacReady and Kelly were forced down after they had covered 527 miles and flown seven hours and 53 minutes. They landed at 12:05. They had taken off at 4:12 yesterday afternoon.

The T-2 had just been outfitted with a new 400 horse-power Liberty motor and it was the same sort of engine trouble which compelled them to land last fall on an attempted transcontinental flight.

Boys Missing 6 Days Found Locked in Showcase, 1 Dead

Indications One of San Bernadino, Cal., Lads May Have Been Drowned—Other Dies in Hospital.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 31.—Evidence that Dean Meacham, 4 years old, and Richard Jensen, 3 were murdered caused the inquest into their disappearance and death here to be postponed from today until Monday, with the arrest of a suspect imminent. There were indications that one of the boys had been drowned and thrust into the box where the bodies were found.

The two bodies lay side by side today in an undertaking parlor. Richard and Dean had been missing since last Saturday.

Found in Old Building.

The boys were found late last night by a policeman in a merchant's display rack in a building being remodeled at Third and D streets, only 250 feet from "Dickey's" own home.

Dean was dead when the policeman removed his body from the case. Richard was still alive, but unconscious. He died two hours later at the Ramona Hospital without telling the story which it is believed would have solved the mystery. Murder is indicated by the fact that the only door on the box, one foot high and 10 inches wide, with a spring latch on it, was hard to close.

It is believed the children were hidden in the display case, shoved away in a corner of the room of the building, by kidnapers, who, in fear, hid them to cover up their deed.

The merchant's display case in which the youngsters were found is a peculiar wooden box. It is of tongue-and-groove construction, 4 feet wide and 3 feet long, and is terraced like a stairway, the space inside being very small.

Door of Box Tightly Closed.

The door of the case, the only opening in the box, has a spring latch on the outside.

When the policeman found the box he found the door so tight that, after trying for five minutes to open it, he gave it up. He went back a few minutes later and got it open.

Dean lay with his head near the door. Richard was back in the corner. Most of their clothing had been removed.

PADDOCK, WITH FLYING START, RUNS 100 YARDS IN 8 AND 9-10TH SECONDS

BERKELEY, Cal., March 31. THE University of California won a track meet from the University of Southern California today, 81 points to 50.

Charles Paddock, the University of Southern California flash, was timed in an exhibition 100-yard dash, in which he had a flying start, at 8 9-10 seconds. The record for this event, 9 1-5 seconds, is held by an English professional named Seward.

Paddock also won the 100-yard dash standing start in 9 4-5 seconds.

BRITISH INTERCESSION FOR PRELATE RESENTED BY SOVIET

"Every Effort to Protect Traitors to Russia Is an Unfriendly Act," Says Foreign Office.

By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, March 31.—The Soviet authorities have not yet carried out the death sentence against Vicar General Butchkavitch, the Commissar of Justice declared this afternoon. The announcement, while clearing away rumors that the prelate already had been executed, gave no further official information as to what the outcome of the case would be.

The Soviet Foreign Office, replying today to a note submitted by Robert M. Hodgson, British representative here, appealing for a stay of execution for Butchkavitch, says: "Russia is an independent sovereign state and has the unedniable right of passing sentences in conformity with its own legislation on people breaking the laws of the country. Every effort from the outside to interfere with this right and protect spies and traitors to Russia is an unfriendly act and a renewal of the intervention which has been succesfully repulsed by the Russian people."

The reply further refers to a telegram from which the Irish Republican representative in France in which it was asserted that the Republicans also were asking clemency, despite the hypocritical intervention of Great Britain, which is responsible for the assassination of political prisoners in cold blood in Ireland."

ENGLISH RACE HORSE'S VICTORY ATTRIBUTED TO BEER RATION

Winner of Lincoln Handicap Given the Drink When She Was Too Nervous to Eat.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, March 31.—Beer with a kick in it was responsible for the remarkable victory of White Bud, a 66 to 1 chance in the Lincoln Handicap, according to the assertions of the mare's trainer. Several weeks before the race, the trainer says, White Bud was given a daily ration of two pints of beer. The mare thrived on it.

An interesting story is now being circulated in the London newspapers of why the horse came to be treated to such a diet. Several weeks before the race, the mare during a trial turn became excited. She clinched the bit and ran away with the jockey, and thereafter was so nervous that she would not eat. After trying numerous foods the trainer finally resorted to beer. It worked.

DEPUTY SHERIFF SLAIN BY BANK ROBBERS

Band Headed by Al Spencer Fights Posse After $1600 Holdup.

By the Associated Press.
MUSKOGEE, OK., March 31.—Ben Smith, Deputy Sheriff of Delaware County, Oklahoma, was killed tonight in a battle with four men who robbed the bank of Gentry at Gentry, Ark., of $1600 this afternoon. Smith was shot down near Row, Delaware County, where posses of several hundred men have the bandits surrounded.

Additional men have been summoned from Grove and other towns and the capture of the robbers is expected at any moment.

Al Spencer, Pupil of Henry Starr, Believed Gang's Head.

FORT SMITH, Ark., March 31.—Al T. Spencer, notorious Oklahoma outlaw and pupil of Henry Starr, who escaped from a posse near Tulsa less than a week ago, after robbing the Mannford State bank, is believed to be the leader of the quartet of bandits who held up and robbed the First National Bank at Gentry, Ark., today. According to Cashier J. N. Covey, attaches of the bank have identified his picture as that of the leader of the gang.

A touring car stolen last Monday at Bartlesville, Ok., from W. C. Smith of that city was used by the bandits and was recognized late tonight when it was abandoned about 10 miles west of Gentry near Jay, Ok.

Longshoremen's and Ship Owners' Arbitrator Says Living Costs Are Higher.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, March 31.—Gen. George W. Goethals, sitting as arbitrator under the wage agreement between the International Longshoremen's Association and the Steamship Owners' Association, today awarded the 40,000 longshoremen employed in this port an increase of 5 cents an hour on overtime pay, effective tomorrow.

The new rates, which will be the basis for all Atlantic ports, calls for 70 cents an hour straight time and $1.07 overtime. Proportionate increases will be given to checkers and others employed on the docks and covered by the longshoremen's agreement.

Explaining his award, Goethals said: "I awarded an increase because of the increased cost of living in the last few months. The records show that the longshoreman's efficiency has increased and has practically reached the pre-war stage."

SAYS MRS. TODD GAVE BIRTHDAY PARTIES FOR CATS

Attorney Declares 87-Year-Old Woman Would Order 20 Pounds of Fish for Pets on These Occasions.

RELATIVES SEEK TO BREAK WILL

Bulk of Estate Had Been Bequeathed to Found Shelter for Dumb Animals in St. Louis or County.

Giving birthday parties for cats was one of the peculiarities of Mrs. Mary Todd, whose will is being contested by eight collateral relatives. Her eccentricities were described in depositions filed in the Circuit Court yesterday. The relatives seek to break the will on the ground that Mrs. Todd was not of sound and disposing mind at the time she executed the document in which she bequeathed the bulk of her estate to found a shelter for dumb animals, either in St. Louis or St. Louis County. It is estimated the amount set aside for this purpose is approximately $50,000.

The depositions were taken at Daytona Beach, Fla., where Mrs. Todd died two years ago. She was the widow of Judge Albert Todd and her home had been in St. Louis for years prior to her removal to Daytona Beach. She was 87 years old.

Had Cemetery for Pets.

Witnesses for both sides gave testimony. Several stated they did not believe the testatrix was rational. Others, including two physicians, testified they thought she was mentally capable.

The evidence is to the effect she was very fond of animals, especially cats. She had a graveyard set off in the back yard of her home at Daytona Beach, where she buried her pets. She had tombstones, set up and faithfully kept fresh flowers on the graves, it was testified.

It was stated by counsel for the plaintiffs, in one of his questions, that it was her habit to give birthday parties for cats, on which occasion she would order 20 pounds of fish for them. Dr. Milton P. Guy of Seabreeze, Fla., who testified that Mrs. Todd possessed mental capacity above the ordinary for persons of her age, admitted that if she gave birthday parties for cats it would indicate a weakness on her part. Mrs. Alma Agnes Randall, organist for the Methodist Church at Daytona Beach, who testified that Mrs. Todd showed superior knowledge of music and pictures, said, "Mrs. Todd thought so much of animals that she had their graves near so she could put flowers on them. It amused her to have people look and comment."

Another mark of eccentricity brought out by the plaintiffs' witnesses was that she insisted on her back yard at Daytona Beach having the appearance of a jungle, refusing to permit the caretaker to remove palmetto, shrubs and vines.

Minister's Testimony.

The Rev. John J. Treadway of St. Augustine, Fla., former pastor of the Methodist Church at Daytona Beach, testified that Mrs. Todd was "superintelligent on some topics—for instance, art—and that on the general run of subjects she knew as much as the average normal person." In her home she had various paintings and other art objects.

Several persons said that Mrs. Todd caused her eyebrows and eyelashes to be removed, after which she employed a beauty specialist to keep the brows heavily stenciled.

Mrs. Todd's alleged habit of hiring a carpenter to work for her and then keeping him in conversation for hours at a time, away from his work, also was cited as an eccentricity.

Rassieur Is Executor.

The estate, under the will, is in charge of former Probate Judge Leo Rassieur as executor. An inventory showed she owned personal property in her name valued at $59,000 and several parcels of realty, including 12 acres in St. Louis County.

Among the plaintiffs are a half-brother and a half-sister of Mrs. Todd. The contestants, the petition states, are the only lawful heirs.

SUES THE MAN SHE "LOVED FOR 18 YEARS"

MRS. MARY T. HILL

For 18 years, she declares, she lavished love and affection upon Fred W. Ziegenhein, son of the late Henry Ziegenhein, former Mayor, and now that it appears to have been "squandered," Mrs. Mary T. Hill, a Chicago dressmaker, wants to be requited in the sum of $5000.

She filed suit against Ziegenhein for that sum in Circuit Court yesterday, alleging that on May 28, 1918, in consideration of her dismissal of a breach of promise suit, he agreed to pay her $5000 if he ever married. He subsequently did marry, but, Mrs. Hill declares, declined to fulfill the agreement, of which she presents a photographic copy. She wants interest, also, at the rate of 8 per cent per annum.

"Loved Him 18 Years."

"I loved him for 18 years," Mrs. Hill told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "I was married in Chicago in 1898, but came to St. Louis two years later, following a separation with my husband. I met Fred then, when he was secretary to his father.

"In 1906, or maybe it was 1905, I obtained a divorce from my husband, thinking Fred would marry me. But he put it off. Then, in 1909, I told him I was going to get married. I had met an army Captain at a boarding house out on Lindell boulevard.

"Fred laughed, and said to go ahead. I did, although I loved Fred all the while. I married Capt. Ferdinand Schmitter on Aug. 17, 1909. Two days later I got a letter from Fred. He was frantic, and threatened suicide if I didn't leave Capt. Schmitter and go with him. And so I left my second husband for him. He still refused to marry, and for nine more years I waited for him.

Says He Bought Bungalow.

"In 1916 he bought a little bungalow for me at 4705 Lewis place. He continually promised marriage that never materialized. In 1918 I brought suit for breach of promise. It hurt me to do it. But I saw nothing else to do. I had left my husband for him."

Capt. Schmitter obtained a divorce in Brooklyn Nov. 16, 1910. Mrs. Hill, never taking the name Schmitter, failed then to make any defense, although in her answer she stated the evidence against her had been obtained by conspiracy and trickery. "I just lived with him two days," she said. "Then Fred spilled tears all over Clayton road, so I went back to him."

Ziegenhein, for his part, denies the agreement mentioned in the suit and states that on April 29, 1919, he settled the matter for all time by paying Mrs. Hill $12,500.

"We aren't paying much attention to the suit," he said yesterday at Hotel Statler, where he is living. "It is just an attempt to get more money out of me. She has been down to my office to see me two or three times this last week. Says she has a copy of our agreement. My attorney saw that purported photographic copy. He laughed at it. It simply isn't my signature.

Denies Buying House.

Ziegenhein denied buying the bungalow for Mrs. Hill. He said he was married July 16, last, and that until now no word had been heard from Mrs. Hill and her purported documentary evidence that he owed her $5000.

"Fred is different now," Mrs. Hill continued. "It's all very different. I no longer love him. He is not the man he was. And I am now happier that it is all over, that part of it, than I ever was before in my life."

5 GERMANS KILLED AND 30 WOUNDED IN ESSEN FIGHT

French Version of Clash at Krupp Plant Says Siren Called Workers to Attack Military Party of Lieutenant and 11 Men Requisitioning Automobiles.

TANKS SENT TO SCENE OF RIOT

Two Engineers Attacked in Auto and Manhandled by Mob — Occupational Forces Plan Penalties for "Premeditated Assault."

By the Associated Press.
ESSEN, March 31.—Clashes between French soldiers and German workmen at the Krupp plant here today resulted in the death of five or six of the Germans and the wounding of about 30 others.

According to the French version of the affair a Lieutenant and 11 soldiers who went to the Krupp works for the purpose of requisitioning automobiles, were set upon by a mob variously estimated to number between 2000 and 3000 which was called together by the factory siren.

The mob swooped down on the soldiers while many of the workmen, armed with revolvers, fired shots. The soldiers returned the fire, shooting over the heads of the mob at first, but, when the workmen refused to disperse, finally aiming to kill.

When the skirmish was at its height an automobile bearing two French civilian engineers came along, and the fury of the workmen was shifted to them. They were attacked, badly beaten and severely wounded. The French also assert that the watches, wallets, passports and identification papers of the engineers were stolen.

Engineers Manhandled.

The automobile was smashed and the chauffeur took refuge among the little group of French soldiers, but not before he was struck with several missiles. The engineers were taken inside the Krupp plant and severely manhandled. One of them, giving the name of Snowden, and speaking English, came off much better than M. Sauvey, the other, whose name and language are entirely French.

The French military command in Essen, informed of the rioting, sent armored cars and tanks to the scene, and the appearance of these machines caused the workmen to retreat behind the walls. The tanks entered and rescued the engineers, then stood by while the Lieutenant and his 11 men went on with the work of requisition, as instructed. The French say all the cars ordered taken are now in their possession.

The retreat of the German workmen in the face of the French reinforcements was conducted in good order, and they succeeded in carrying their dead and wounded into the main yard of the plant.

French to Inflict Penalties.

The French announced tonight that they are positive a premeditated and concerted effort was made to bring their soldiers and the German workmen into collision. They declare that those responsible for the outbreak were former members of the German security police who had been disarmed by the French. The responsibility of the Krupp management, they claim, is also gravely involved through the blowing of the siren alarm which signaled the workmen to assemble. Severe penalties will be inflicted, the nature of which has not yet been announced.

No German version of the affair was available tonight.

London Hears Two Frenchmen Were Among 11 Killed.

POLICE DECIDE ON PROGRAM TO END GANG OUTBREAKS

Vagrancy Ordinance to Be Invoked When No Other Charge Will Apply Against Suspected Men.

BONDS TO BE HELD UP PENDING INQUIRIES

Grand Jury, in Report, Recommends That High Bonds Be Required From Those Arrested.

The police have mapped a definite line of action to deal with future outbreaks of the Hogan-Egan inter-gang war. Disregarding pledges by the leaders of the two gangs that they will discontinue their warfare—pledges made before and broken—and relying solely upon the law and co-operation of courts and prosecuting officials, the police have decided upon a program which, they believe, will put an end to the gang activities which recently became so reckless as to constitute a public menace.

In a conference with the Captains of the various districts yesterday afternoon Chief of Police O'Brien directed them to see that the gangsters were arrested as vagrants whenever no other charge would apply.

The Captains also were informed that, by agreement with the Judges of the Court of Criminal Correction, common law bonds in the cases of gangsters arrested for investigation of specific crimes may be held up at the police stations until the investigation is completed.

Grand Jury Report.

The grand jury yesterday in its final report made the following reference to the gang situation:

"Very recent occurrences in this city, which have come to the attention of this grand jury, in our opinion, demand attention and vigorous action, namely, the conduct of various gangs of lawless men who have been carrying on a warfare amongst themselves and rendering life and property in the city insecure, besides giving the impression that this city stands helpless before these bands of lawbreakers.

"We feel that all efforts at mediation between these warring gangs, either by well-meaning clergymen or public authorities, merely aggravates the situation and tends to exaggerate the opinion that they already hold as to their power.

High Bonds Recommended.

"We believe that it would be quite an assistance to the prosecuting officials and the Police Department, if high bonds, with the very best security be required from this class of offenders. We respectfully request, also, that before a defendant is released on bond that the Police Department be notified and the Judges be furnished with the record of the person applying for bond.

"We mention these matters, because we believe the present condition of affairs in St. Louis demands the attention of the grand jury and we make this statement in the hope that the succeeding grand jury will make a thorough investigation.

"We deplore the fact that too much publicity is given showing criminals in heroic attitudes."

Judge Grimm's Remarks.

Circuit Judge Grimm, to whom the report was made, after reading that portion of it which dealt with the gangsters, said to the jurors:

"I have read with considerable interest your recommendations with reference to the present situation which has become very serious and a menace—almost a disgrace to the city. I may say these matters occurred recently, and I for a time had in mind calling you gentlemen before me and submitting a special charge on the subject. But the aggravated situation occurred only recently, too late for me to expect you to be able, in the short time remaining, to investigate the situation, or take any action, so I left the matter to your own judgment.

"I am very glad my confidence in you has not been misplaced, and that you gentlemen see the seriousness of the situation and made recommendations in regard to it."

Judges Agree on Action.

Before the grand jury's report was submitted the Judges of the Court of Criminal Correction had agreed to demand higher bonds in the cases of gangsters, and promised to abide by any recommendation of the Circuit Attorney might have regarding the amount of bond to be fixed.

Isadore Londe, a member of the Egan gang, was the first to feel the effect of the new policy. He was required to give a bond of $2500 on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Previously the bond for that charge had been fixed at $800, but when the Circuit Attorney recommended that Londe's bond be fixed at $2500 Judge Hochdorfer complied.

Londe now is at liberty on bonds totaling $7800. His other bonds include one of $2500 on a charge of second degree burglary, $1000 on a charge of possessing burglar tools, $800 on another concealed weapon charge and a common law bond of $1000 in connection with the case of the schoolboy who was run down at Grand boulevard and St. Louis avenue the night of March 24 by a coupe occupied by Egan gangsters who were fleeing from a shooting affray with Edward J. (Jelly Roll) Hogan, Deputy State Beverage Inspector and former member of the State Legislature, the leader of the Hogan gang.

Peace Bond Proposed.

A former Circuit Judge has suggested that the gang warfare might be controlled under sections 3746 to 3758 of the Missouri statutes, which provide that when a court has reason to believe any person is about to commit an offense against the person or property of another, the court may require the suspected person to give bond to keep the peace. Although the amount of the bond fixed by statute is limited to $1000, the common law, which is not supplanted by the statutes, permits the bond to be fixed as high as $3000.

This law applies to persons "not of good fame," and requires the person under bond to keep the peace under penalty of having the bond forfeited. The carrying of concealed weapons, engaging in fights or threatening of other persons would stamp the offender as a person "not of good fame."

"That is a good law," said President Brockman of the Police Board, "but how could it work in the case of gangsters? The same degree of proof would be required in making a case against them under the common law as is required in making a case of concealed weapons or any other felony they might be charged with. The gangsters will not 'snitch' you know, and as far as having them identified in connection with holdups or burglaries it is impossible now to get witnesses to do it. However, I will take the matter up with the Circuit Attorney."

CHUKRI BEY, TURK DEPUTY, REPORTED ASSASSINATED

Missing Anti-Nationalist Said to Have Been Slain "for Political Reasons."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 31.—A Constantinople dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. gives a message from Angora, which states that Ali Chukri Bey has been assassinated "for political reasons."

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 31.—Several arrests have been made in connection with the mysterious disappearance from Angora of Ali Chukri, Deputy from Erzerum of the Turkish National Assembly. One of Chukri Bey's colleagues hinted in a speech before the assembly that the Deputy had fallen a victim to his political opinions, and the case has caused a sensation in political circles. The ministerial council met in special session today to consider the matter.

Chukri Bey was one of the founders of the newspaper, Tan, which has been a consistent opponent of the policies of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Nationalist leader. The Angora newspaper, Yeni Gun, says: "What now means the liberty of the press?"

"FROZEN BY COAL BARONS"

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Gen. George Goethels, whose office of State Fuel Administrator becomes nonexistent at midnight, declared today that the people of the United States have been "frozen, gouged by extortionate prices, and have suffered from unequal division of fuel supplies because there wasn't enough courage in official Washington to dictate to the coal barons of Pennsylvania."

FIELD AT BRIDGETON CHOSEN AS NATIONAL AIR MEET SITE

Additional Leases of Ground Acquired to Add to 183 Acres of Field—Permanent Equipment to Be Installed.

St. Louis Field, at Bridgeton, St. Louis County, has been officially selected for the 1923 meet of the National Aeronautic Association including the Pulitizer Trophy airplane speed race, by the army, navy, the Aeronautic Association and the St. Louis Air Board and Race Committee. The meet will be held Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

St. Louis Field formerly was called Lambert Field, and the name was changed to St. Louis Field at the request of Maj. Albert Bond Lambert. It is accessible by automobile on the Natural Bridge road and by the St. Charles cars.

Final selection of a field in the last 10 days awaited only action by the local race committee, which was taken Friday, following the acquirement of additional leases of ground to add to the 183 acres of the St. Louis Field. In this decision, Scott Field, near Belleville, which was spoken of as a place to hold the meet, has been eliminated from consideration and the meet clinched for the field on this side of the river.

Corporation Proposed.

The General Race Committee at its conference Friday decided in a general way that a desirable plan to finance the undertaking would be to form a corporation. This proposal as a means to acquire land, permanent equipment and defray all expenses of the meet was discussed at length and met the approval of most of those present. A final decision will depend upon further conferences.

That part of the plan contemplating the purchase of most of the land now under lease and permanent equipment is certain to be adopted, as the race committee intends that St. Louis shall have a permanent and modern aviation field and plant after the October contests.

The St. Louis Air Board, of which W. Frank Carter is chairman and members of which compose the race committee and various subcommittees, has authorized that arrangements for the meet be started at once, now that St. Louis Field has officially been selected and the various units have been instructed to work constantly in development of the plan to make the St. Louis meet the greatest ever held.

In this connection a special meeting of the St. Louis Flying Club will be held at 7:30 p. m., April 13, at the Washington Hotel, for the discussion of matters of exterme importance concerning the meet.

Improvement Plans.

Preparation of St. Louis Field contemplates extensive grading and leveling, so as to provide a maximum factor of safety to the pilots, who must land at a minimum speed of 75 miles an hour; the erection of pylons around which turns will be made, and the construction of permanent hangars, machine shops and a clubhouse. There will be, of course, gas filling stations and other necessary equipment to bring the field up to modern standards, all of which will be included in any plan that is adopted, while the United Railways will begin surveys with a view to handling pedestrian traffic to and from the field.

The meet will bring together in contest most of the premier airmen of the world, including all who have world's records to their credit, and besides the Pulitzer Trophy race, which will be the feature event, there will be other contests, including water events on the Mississippi river, of great importance to the advance of aviation and to the maintenance of America's prestige in the air.

United States Army aviators now hold the world's record for speed, which is above 240 miles an hour, and planes now being planned for the St. Louis meet are being designed with the idea of setting up more remarkable records.

THREE SHOE STORES ROBBED OF $1203

Apparently the Same Four Men Concerned in Two; Other Holdups Reported.

Shoe stores appeared marked by holdup men last night, three of them being made to yield a total of $1203. In two of the robberies, apparently four men operated.

They appeared first at the store of Edgar L. Brockhan, 3227 North Newstead avenue. One man remained at the wheel of an automobile. A second stopped at the door to take up a watch. The other two entered and with revolvers compelled Brockman and two clerks to face a rear wall. One kept guard over them while the fourth man took $2 from one of the clerks and $100 from the cash register. The four escaped in their automobile.

Fifteenth minutes later four men appeared at the shoe store of Oliver Gerland, at 2601 North Taylor avenue, where, pursuing similar methods, they obtained $325 from the cash register and $7 from a clerk who was in the store with the proprietor.

At about the hour of the first robbery, two men entered the shoe store of Samuel, Phillip and Manual Newman, brothers, 1637 Tower Grove avenue. The latter two were counting more than $759 in money. The robbers took the money, compelled the two brothers to join the third in a rear room, ran out and escaped. Whether in an automobile the brothers were unable to say.

The receipts of his two poultry stands in public markets, amounting to about $500, were taken from Herman Epstein, 934 Park avenue, last night at 9:15 o'clock as he was driving a truck along Rutger street, near Seventh. Two young men, one with a revolver, boarded the truck and searched him. They then shut off the truck engine and took the key so that Epstein could not pursue them.

Charles Sachaer, 36 years old, a cabinetmaker, of 3737 Laclede avenue, suffered a fracture of the jaw when beaten and robbed of about $55 by two negroes on Vendeventer avenue near Market street at 9:45 o'clock last night. He was taken to the city hospital. Sachaer told the police the two men approached him and asked for a cigarette, then struck him on the back of the head with a blunt weapon, and after he had fallen hit him in the jaw with it.

Auris Lee of 2924A Olive street was robbed of $37.22 as he stepped from the C. B. & Q. freight platform at Main and Carr streets at 8:15 o'clock, by two armed young men who wore handkerchiefs over their faces.

ARREST OF SUSPECT IN KEENAN CASE EXPECTED SOON

Story of Movements About Time Model Was Slain Not Satisfactory to Police and District Attorney.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—After an investigation of more than two weeks of the murder of Dorothy King, chloroformed in her apartment, March 15, a suspect is under surveillance and may be arrested early next week, it was learned tonight.

His movements have been checked by the police and do not correspond in important particulars with statements he has made to Acting District Attorney Pecora and Capt. Arthur Carey of the Homicide Bureau. In addition he has no alibi for the hours between 2 a. m. and 8 a. m. of March 15.

The facts concerning the suspicions of the police became known following the resumption today of Mr. Pecora's investigation to "ascertain, by a process of elimination, of all persons so far named in the case, the murderer of Dorothy King."

It began Friday, with the re-examination of all the members of the Keenan family. They were questioned as to their relations with Dorothy in the matter of monetary gifts and their knowledge of the identity of "John Marshall." John Keenan, the chauffeur, brother of Dorothy, was again questioned today by Capt. Carey. It was said he would be questioned again.

For the third time since the murder of Dorothy Keenan, J. Kearsley Mitchell, Philadelphia millionaire and son-in-law of E. T. Stotesbury, was questioned today by Acting District Attorney Pecora.

Mitchell, who visited the young woman in her home the night of the murder was accompanied to the Criminal Courts Building by his chief counsel, Nellson Olcott, and Warren H. Cunningham, John H. Jackson and William H. Moore, attorneys.

Pecora, it was said, ignored his previous examinations of Mitchell and questioned him in detail as to his relations with the model and reviewed the affair from its inception.

Five Men Arrested in Brentwood and Webster Groves.

Five men were arrested last night in seven raids made in Brentwood and Webster Groves by Federal prohibition agents, assisted by Fred M. Tate, special investigator for Attorney-General Barrett, and Deputy Sheriffs of the county. In two of the places raided slot machines were found in operation and Tate said warrants would be requested for the proprietors.

L. W. Berry, wealthy landowner, was arrested in a saloon, owned by him on the North and South road. His bartender, Frank Miller, was also taken. Hugh S. Byrne, proprietor of a place near Berry's, was arrested with his bartender, Bert S. Hurt. Frank Biller, proprietor of a place on Shady avenue in Webster Groves, was arrested when a quantity of liquor was found in his icebox. The men taken into custody were assembled in an inn on the North and South road, and held until they were removed to police headquarters in the city. Byrne walked out of the temporary jail, but after looking after the closing of his own place a few hundred yards distant, came back and placed himself again in custody.

FIVE GERMANS KILLED, ABOUT 30 WOUNDED IN ESSEN FIGHT

the occupied zone must either return to work or be expelled, finds the allies in possession of all Ruhr and Rhineland rail lines except those in the British area.

Enforcement of the order, it seems, will offer the transportation officials something of a problem, for approximately half a million persons, including the families of the men, may be affected.

The 10,000,000,000 marks and 400,000 French francs which French customs officers seized in an automobile at Hoechst yesterday will be used toward defraying the expenses of French troops on the left bank of the Rhine. The money was being shipped to Wiesbaden by the Frankfurt branch.

The proclamation ordering all the striking railroad officials and trainmen to resume work, under the penalty of expulsion, was posted throughout the Ruhr and Rhineland yesterday.

The task of expelling the strikers and their families will require several weeks. It is said the German Government has anticipated the expulsion order and arranged for distributing the men and their families throughout the country.

Under a decree by the Interallied Rhineland Commission, the railway workers were notified a week ago by the French that those who refused to serve under the French and Belgians would be expelled from occupied territory the first week of April. It is said that 1843 Germans have agreed to return to work.

The sum of 368,000,000,000 marks has been sent into occupied territory up to date by the Berlin Government for the striking railway men and those who have been prominent in passive resistance although not on strike.

POLICE DO NOT ABUSE PRISONERS, GRAND JURY FINDS

So-Called Third-Degree Methods Are "Fantastic Creations" of Criminals, Report to Judge Grimm Says.

The February grand jury, which was instructed by Circuit Judge Grimm to investigate alleged "third-degree" methods by police in obtaining confessions of crime from prisoners, yesterday, in its final report, exonerated the police.

The text of the report dealing with this particular subject follows:

"Pursuant to the charge of the Court, we have spent considerable time and devoted some efforts to an investigation of the alleged cruelty on the part of police officers in securing confessions from persons under arrest, and beg to report as follows:

"We interviewed prisoners both at Police Headquarters and the city jail, and the majority of the prisoners did not complain as to treatment received. However, several habitual criminals did claim that they were beaten and forced into a confession. It is our opinion that these criminals are taking advantage of this alibi to prevent their conviction, being aware that public opinion has accepted the Third Degree Method.

Accept Police Statements.

"There appeared before this body the president of the Police Board, the Chief of Police, the Chief of Detectives and the rank and file of the Police Department, who, in sworn statements, assert that no force is used to obtain a confession from a prisoner. He is even told that he need not give any information which might be used against him in his trial. We must accept the statements, made under oath, by the officers of our metropolitan police force. Public opinion should reassert itself in St. Louis and give support to the Judges, prosecutors and the Police Department and give backbone to the juries. It should convince criminals that they cannot escape punishment by sentiment nor appeals to prejudice. These factors should not interfere with justice. Juries should not close their eyes to evidence, to corroborated evidence, to cumulative evidence.

"Our experience and contact with the many officers of the various districts of the metropolitan police force appearing before this body impressed us that the force is properly supervised and directed, and should have the confidence of the public generally.

Aid by Citizens.

"We believe that the condition of affairs in St. Louis could be remedied in a large measure, if the men of St. Louis who believe in law enforcement would rise to their full duty when summoned as jurors in criminal cases and serve as such.

"Having had full opportunity, during our service as jurors, to observe the conduct of the Circuit Attorney's office, we are certain that Mr. Sidener and his assistants have been discharging their duties capably and efficiently.

"The Police Department should at all times co-operate with the prosecuting officials and make arrests and secure and produce evidence of crime to such officials. We feel that it is not conducive to the successful prosecution of important criminal cases that confessions be solely relied upon. We would suggest to the Police Department that it would be far better for the officers to investigate and procure evidence corroborative of and additional to the confession.

The report declared the police force to be inadequate, pointing out there had been no increase since 1910.

So-called "third degree" methods were termed a "fantastic creation, due to publicity of acts of criminals in stories and pictures and we know from our investigation that the officials of the Police Department are the ones who should handle all criminals in such ways as they see fit and use methods which will make the criminals fear the duly constituted authorities and give St. Louis a wide berth."

Methods of handling property held as evidence was criticised, and recommendations made that four lists of property be made, to go to the property office, the property room, the prisoner and prosecuting official. Evidence should be kept in sealed cloth receptacles, the report stated, these seals to be opened in the courtroom.

George Minch, custodian of property at police headquarters, who was the center recently of a controversy over handling of property seized by the police, resigned Friday, announced he was going to manage a saloon.

Recommendations were made for segregating white and negro women at the city jail, and separating of first offenders from "old timers."

BRENTWOOD RESOLUTION URGES JONES BE CITED FOR CONTEMPT

Forty residents of Brentwood, St. Louis County, in indignation meeting assembled last night at Rock Hill School, adopted a resolution requesting Police Judge Charles Meyers to cite Prosecuting Attorney Jones of St. Louis County for contempt of court, on account of his action Tuesday night in appearing before the court and advising persons charged with driving automobiles without 1923 licenses to pay no attention to the court.

Ten persons driving with 1922 licenses had been arrested under a Brentwood ordinance. Court had just convened when Jones appeared and declared that the ordinance was invalid.

F. W. Schiereck was chairman of the meeting last night. Alfred W. Henry made the principal address. He said the town had been insulted and the court walked upon by Jones, who had taken it upon himself to defend persons charged with violations of an ordinance. He declared that the real reason for Jones' action was that Brentwood, with 700 voters, had given him only seven votes. He proposed to teach Jones a lesson by fining him for contempt.

Judge Meyers said after the meeting that he would cite Jones to appear before him tomorrow night.

ONE SUSPECT IS HELD AFTER $164 PAYROLL ROBBER

Clerk for St. Louis Poster Advertising Co. Pursues Three Fugitives in Automobile to Shop They Enter.

O. L. Bryan, cashier of the St. Louis Poster Advertising Co., was held up at 9:30 a. m. yesterday at the company's office at 2920 Olive street by three young men, armed, who fled in an automobile with the week's payroll, $1645.

The robbers held handkerchiefs over their faces when they entered the place. Bryan, just had come from the First National Bank and had placed the money in packets on his desk. The leader of the trio ordered him to "stick 'em up," while his companions threatened four men and three women employes who were in the room. After the robber near the desk had stuffed the money into his pockets, all three ran out and started the machine east on Olive street.

Theodore Goldman, a clerk, who had driven Bryan to the bank after the money, chased the bandits in his machine down Olive street. He saw them just miss a passing automobile and turn north into Jefferson avenue. They abandoned their car in an alley between Locust and Olive streets and ran on foot east in the alley to the rear door of the National Pet Shop, 2335 Olive street.

Police Surround Store.

With Traffic Policeman Gordon, who had observed the fugitives from his station at Locust street and Jefferson avenue, Goldman made sure that they had entered the place. Reinforcements arrived and the store was surrounded.

When Sergeant Lange of Laclede District entered he found William Crowe, a police character, with a coat off working industriously. The Sergeant asked a clerk if Crowe was employed in the shop. The clerk said he wasn't, that he had rushed in with several other men and had taken off his coat to pretend he was an employe. The first arrest was made right there.

Loaded Revolvers Found Hidden.

Officers rummaged about the shop and found two loaded revolvers hidden behind stacks of bird cages. Searchers went to the second floor and found John Crowe, brother of William, and Robert Sumner. Gaston Haflin, proprietor of the shop, said that John was his employe. John and Sumner were taken to a police station and later released.

The automobile used by the robbers, a Hudson touring car, belonging to Louis Kohldry of 2819 South Thirteenth street, had been stolen Friday night when standing on Olive street, near Grand boulevard.

William Crowe is an associate of Elmer Rurge and Isadore London Egan gangsters, and is under bond on another robbery charge. At Carondelet police Station yesterday afternoon Cashier Bryan said he was unable to identify any of the suspects. William Crowe is held for investigation.

ROBERTSON IMPRESSES WITH WORK AT THIRD

Williams' Home Run With Two On in Seventh Inning Gives Browns Victory.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 31.—Kenneth Williams' seventh home run of the Spring exhibition season brought the Browns a 5-3 victory over the Fort Worth Panthers this afternoon in the third consecutive game, featured by the brilliant work of Cedric Durst at first base and Gene Robertson at third. The two youngsters apparently have the two jobs tied down. Durst's tenure of the position depending only on how soon George Sisler returns to duty.

Raymond Kolp again displayed mid-season form. The sturdy right-hander started the game and held the Panthers to two hits and one run in five innings. Both of the hits came in the same inning, one of them being an infield scratch. A walk preceded the two hits which accounted for the only run off the North Canton flinger. Only four men reached base, while Kolp was pitching, one on a walk, two on singles as told, and another on an error by Marty McManus.

Kolp is ready to start a championship game. He is throwing hooks and his fast ball is sailing over the plate better than it ever did before. Kolp will be one of the first pitchers to work when the American League campaign opens unless the dope goes all awry. Ray also helped win the game by hitting a two-bagger with two on in the second inning.

Dangerous Dave.

Danforth pitched the last four innings and though he was touched for only three hits, his work was not impressive. He found the plate with great difficulty and it took some fast fielding to prevent the Panthers from running away with the game.

The two runs off Danforth were scored in the sixth inning, his first on the hill. He walked the first batter without putting over a strike and after the next batter had fouled out, Stellbauer, a pinch hitter, drove one of Dave's fast ones over the left field fence.

In the eighth Dave walked two batters, struck out the next and then a lightning double play, McManus to Gerber to Durst, saved Davie's bacon. In the ninth, Danforth again was in trouble. The first hitter singled to left and the next struck out. Haley hard-hitting Fort Worth third-sacker, doubled to left and a walk to pinch-hitter Irvin Wimer, St. Louis boy, filled the bases. The next batter popped to McManus and another pinch hitter ended the game with a line drive to Williams.

All through the game the Browns fielded cleverly. The most spectacular play was one in the second inning, in which a runner was nailed at third trying to advance from first on a single to right. Johnny Tobin made a perfect throw and Gene Robertson neatly tagged the runner coming in. Nobody was out at the time, and it stopped the only dangerous rally while Kolp was on the hill. In the same inning Jacobson ran almost to the center field fence for an awkward beautiful catch. Jake never would make a gazelle envious, but he certainly can go and get 'em.

Walt 'Em Out.

The Browns faced some good pitching, though the Fort Worth hurlers were a bit wild. Four of the five St. Louis runs were scored by men who had reached first on bases on balls.

Durst has improved so rapidly that in the course of the remaining exhibition games he is going to start many of these beautiful double plays if the opportunities present themselves. In fielding practice today he was taking hot grounders, sailing them to second and racing back first in time to take snappy throws. His progress has amazed the Brownie players. The men are

Champion Scullins Defend Soccer Title Against Paterson Eleven

Final Game of National Championship Cup Series Today Brings Together American Team and Imported Stars.

NEW YORK, March 31.—For the fourth time in as many successive years, St. Louis will be represented in the final match of the United States Football Association championship series. Tomorrow afternoon, at Harrison Field, Newark, N. J., the Scullin Steel soccer team of St. Louis will oppose the Paterson Football Club of Paterson, N. J., for the national championship and the Dewar trophy, now held by the Scullins.

Four years ago the Ben Millers represented St. Louis in the national final and won the title by defeating the Fore River team of Fore River, Mass., 2 goals to 1. It was the first time St. Louis had ever been represented in the cup competition.

The next season, 1920-21, brought the Scullins to the fore. They reached the final to be defeated by the Robins Dry Docks, 4 goals to 2.

Last season the Scullins again finalists and they won the national title by defeating the Todd Shipyards team, 3 goals to 2.

Played Seven Cup Games.

This season a record entry of 132 teams engaged in the elimination series. The Scullins played seven cup games, one a replay of a tie, defeating the best teams in the Middle West to reach the final. The Paterson club had a comparatively easy time in advancing through the earlier rounds of the draw, but for the past three Sundays they have been engaged in bitter struggles with the New York and the J. & P. Coats teams.

Capt. Tate Brady did not put his boys through their paces by way of limbering up exercise today as had been anticipated. When he got the force of the northwest gale that blew in with the dawn and noted its wintry iciness he decided the boys would do better for a day's rest, so they spent most of the day around the hotel, or at picture shows. They went to bed early tonight, declaring that they were feeling fine and would play the game of their lives tomorrow afternoon. Nolan will not

St. Louis Boxers Win Six Titles in W.A.A.U Show

Kinney of Kansas City Only Out-of-Town Boxer to Figure in Award of Championships.

St. Louis amateur boxers won the championship of the Western division of the Amateur Athletic Union in six of seven weight classes at Jefferson Barracks last night in the final round of the three-day boxing tournament. Two bouts were won on forfeits, three by decision and one by a knockout.

Karl Kenney of the Kansas City A. C. was the only out-of-town entrant to survive. He defeated Walter Roland, South Broadway A. C., in the feature bout of the evening and won the featherweight title of the tournament.

The winners in the various classes are now eligible to participate in the National A. A. U. tournament, which will be held in Boston April 9 and 10. If receipts of the tournament just closed permit it, all champions will be sent East. Five hundred persons attended last night's show.

Kenney Injures Thumb.

Kenney's victory was an impressive one. He injured his right thumb in the first round of the bout, but insisted upon continuing, although visibly handicapped. He boxed well and was hard pressed at all times by Roland, who made an exceptional showing in the tournament.

Charley Wurtz, who won the lightweight championship last year, won the welterweight title last night by defeating Oliver Mohata of the Business Men's Gymnasium. It was a hard-fought bout, with some clinching, but Wurtz proved his superiority.

Following are the results:

112-POUND CLASS—Mickey Mazer, St. Louis A. A., won judges' decision at end of three rounds over Frankie Clark, South Broadway A. C.

118-POUND CLASS—Eddie Reith, unattached, defeated Ledger Foster, Co. G, Sixth Infantry, by knockout in second round.

135-POUND CLASS—Lester Martin, South Broadway A. C., won judges' decision at end of three rounds over Bill Johnson, Business Men's Gymnasium.

147-POUND CLASS—Charley Wurtz, St. Louis A. A., won judges' decision at end of three rounds over Oliver Mohata, Business Men's Gymnasium.

HEAVYWEIGHT CLASS—Urban Groebel, National A. A., won on a forfeit when Private John Adams, Scott Field, failed to appear.

Leaders Retain Their Places in Bowling Event

St. Louis Teams Fail to Attain High Scores in Five-Men Division.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 31.—While bowlers from various parts of the United States and Canada competed in the singles and doubles events of the American Bowling Congress tournament today, none of the scores rolled was high enough for a place in the list of leaders. Alea of Chicago made the best showing in the singles event when he rolled games of 200, 246 and 235 for a total of 681.

Palace Alley teams of St. Louis, rolling on the early squad, failed to amass totals which will put them in the prize list. Individual scores: Palace Alley No. 1: Deen 535, Syl Heibert 507, Cassin 559, Schmitz 489, Cohen 571. Total 2661. Palace Alley No. 2: Putzier 531, McGoogan 529, Burtt 513, Powers 513, E. Shaefer 544. Total 2630.

The best mark of the day in the doubles was made by E. Krems, and F. Ferrarini of Chicago, with a total of 1253. Krems scored 622 and his teammate counted 631.

Hauser's Error Gives Cards 2 Decisive Runs

MACK'S HURLERS IN EXCELLENT SHAPE

Rickeymen Fill Bases in Sixth With None Out, but Fail to Push Run Over.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., March 31.—Three runs in the first inning, two of them coming as a result of an error by Joe Hauser at first base, proved enough for the Cardinals to defeat the Athletics, 3-2, in an exhibition contest here today. While the Mackmen donated a pair of tallies to the Cardinals, Rickey's men reciprocated as the two markers for the Philadelphians were the result of a wide throw by Rogers Hornsby when he had a double play in sight. The score should really have been 1-0 in favor of the St. Louis entry.

After that first round, the pitchers held sway. The batters, who have been idle for two days because of rain, showed the effects of the layoff more than the flingers. Both teams had chances after that initial round, but the hit in the pinch was missing.

The Hitless Hitters.

Such sluggers as Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals and Walker, Hauser and Miller of the Mackmen failed to come through when they had chances to add to their team's total.

Because of the chilly weather both nines used three pitchers. Bill Sherdel, Bill Pertica, and Lester Sell did the flinging for the St. Louis club, while Rolla Naylor, Ed Rommel and Fred Heimach labored for the A's. For the first time in a long while, the Cardinals were outhit, the American Leaguers getting 10 safeties to nine for the Rickeymen.

After one batter had been retired, Dyer and Stock singled. Dyer took an extra base on Hauser's error. Then Hornsby doubled, scoring Dyer. Bottomley hit a roller straight at Hauser, which the Athletic first sacker let roll through his legs, and both Stock and Hornsby tallied, with what proved the decisive runs of the battle.

The A's made merry with Sherdel at the start. Wid Matthews and Sammy Hale, two of the team's new comers, started with singles. Walker flied out, but Hauser hit to Hornsby and with a double play in sight, the second sacker threw wildly to Lavan on second. Matthews swung on past from second and scored, sliding around Ainsmith. Then "Bing" Miller tallied Hale with a safety. Right there the scoring for the day ended.

The best chance for the Rickeymen to add to their total came in the seventh, when Southpaw Heimach started to pitch. Ainsmith opened with a single and Clemons, for Pertica, doubled. A pass to Blades filled the corners. Firegau, batting for Dyer, was called out on a bad third strike, while Stock missed the third one. Then Hornsby popped weakly to Hauser and Heimach was given an ovation from the small crowd which turned out to view hostilities.

A great play by Lavan saved Sherdel in third. The little shortstop made a throw while off balance from short left to Stock to catch Walker trying to take an extra base on Miller's short hit. It was a good piece of work, and showed that there is nothing wrong with Lavan's whip.

Pertica Pulls Through.

The A's threatened against Pertica in each frame the right-hander labored, but he always managed to pull through. In the sixth Galloway and Scheer opened with singles and later Matthews walked, but Hale, who looked mighty good, both at bat and in the field, lined to Hornsby and Pertica was out of the tightest pinch he got into during the afternoon. Pertica walked three men and allowed three safeties in the trio of frames he was on duty.

Lester Sell, who has been wild in his last few outs, found no trouble with his control in his fling on the Barnes Third, Hutchison Fourth, in Field of Noted Golf Professionals.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 31.—Slumping during the last round of the tournament today, Walter Hagen, British open golf champion, let his lead of seven strokes melt away to two, but won the North and South open championship with 289 for the 72 holes of play.

On the 18 holes of the morning, Hagen maintained his seven-stroke advantage. In the afternoon, however, Cyril Walker of Englewood turned in a 69 and jumped from fourth to second place with a total score of 291.

Jim Barnes of Pelham, who took third place, wound up five stroke ahead of Walker. Jock Hutchison of Chicago, who had been closer to Hagen than any of the others, dropped to fourth place with 293.

Kilbane-Criqui Match May Be Forced on New York by Weight of Public Opinion

Record of American Champion Such That Disbarment by New York Commission Appears Quixotic—French Champion Has Made Remarkable Record Since War's Close.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

One of the most interesting fight situations in history has developed since the arrival in this country of Eugene Criqui, French and European featherweight ring champion.

Interest centers about the personality of Criqui, and around the squabble that has arisen as to Kilbane's right to defend a title that has been taken from him by the boxing commission of New York—the only State in the country that can afford to pay fabulous purses demanded for such a boxing contest.

Kilbane's case, from all angles, is without parallel. In 1912, at the age of 23, he won the featherweight title by decisively defeating Abe Attell in a 20-round bout. Since that time he has had the field so entirely to himself that he has virtually been without an opponent worthy of merit in his class.

In 1916 Baltimore admirers of the "Knockout King," George Chaney, thought he would be able to dispose of Kilbane; but Johnny clipped George on the chin in the third round and put Chaney out of it for good.

Later the situation became such that Kilbane had to oppose lightweights, in order to remain active. To his sorrow, he agreed to meet Benny Leonard, then lightweight champion. Kilbane then suffered the only knockout of his career, due to the fact that he was trying to go out of his class against a champion in a higher division.

Nobody to Fight.

Kilbane for several years has been practically inactive. He has not fought since 1921, seriously. In that year he battled twice and once he defended his title seriously. That was when he met Danny Frush. Kilbane carved him up as ably as when he was in his prime.

Today, age 34, Johnny no longer is considered champion in New York, although some 47 other states scoff at the idea of displacing him until he is beaten.

Johnny won the title at the 122-pound weight limit. For years there has been no one able to extend him at this figure. But the New York Commission established a weight limit of 126 pounds eight hours before the bout, which makes the ringside figure for this class about 130 pounds.

The commission then asked Kilbane to defend his title against Johnny Dundee, and when Kilbane insisted that he wanted to fight when he himself elected, the New York Commission took his title away from him.

Today, so far as New York and perhaps New Jersey are concerned, Kilbane is dethroned.

Therefore, he is not eligible to meet Criqui for the $100,000 guarantee offered Kilbane by O'Rourke, the New York promoter. Yet the pressure of popular opinion may force the New York Commission to permit this bout. Already it has agreed to reinstate Kilbane if he will fight Johnny Dundee.

Kilbane Popular Favorite.

If popular vote were taken the public would doubtless ballot in favor of having Kilbane fight Criqui directly, and with the title at stake. Johnny Dundee, while a tough boy, has always lacked ability to put a definite finish to a contest.

Criqui Said to Have Knocked Out 21 Foes in 21 Fights, Since World War

Criqui's side is scarcely less interesting than the muddle involving Kilbane. Criqui was a war hero. Not only that, he is a post-war hero, from a ring standpoint. Fighting with a sheepskone grafted on to fill out a jaw shot away during the war, the French featherweight has won 21 fights out of 21, all by knockouts. It is said that a destruction of nerve centers caused by the jaw replacement has rendered him immune to a knockout blow on the one side of his face.

Criqui is 30 years old, four years younger than Kilbane. He has cleaned up Europe decisively, if that means anything.

Criqui says he is 5 feet 6 inches tall, but a record book says he is 5 feet 4½ inches. He has been in the ring 13 years, has had 104 bouts and has won 40 with knockouts. He lost eight or nine bouts, of which seven were on points. He retired in the fourteenth round of a bout with Memphis Pal Moore, in London, on Dec. 26, 1919, claiming he was fouled. He also retired in the twelfth round of a bout with Charey Ledoux, French bantam champion, in 1914, but he knocked out Ledoux in one round on Feb. 14 of last year.

Criqui is neither a four-flusher in conversation nor a false alarm in action. He served in the French army as pollu until he was retired from military service forever by a fragment of shell, which took away his left jaw. He is one of the marvels of the reconstructive surgery which has played such a brilliant part in restoring savagely maimed men to the world. Describing Crique after an interview a New York correspondent of the Post-Dispatch wrote:

Criqui Physically Fine.

"Criqui has a slightly triangular face, with a perpendicular and strong chin and thin lips. He has a good forehead, a broad, almost rounded head, dark hair and eyes and the thinnest ears ever seen on a boxer. The ears are rather large, with the lobes, and, in fact, the whole ear flattened. His nose was originally sharp and straight, but it has filled out just a trifle from stopping wayward punches in his 13 years of pugilistic endeavor.

"Criqui has a remarkably fine development around the chest and shoulders and has rather thin legs. The same is true of Johnny Kilbane, who is famous for his thin legs. Thin legs with powerful shoulders and arms frequently mean that a boxer who can hit worthy of one class can weigh into the class below.

Fists Small, but Deadly.

"Criqui's hands are small for a boxer. We doubt if his hands are as large as those of Frankie Genaro, the American flyweight champion, but he certainly can hit with those small fists. A record book credits Criqui last year with 10 bouts. He won eight by definite knockouts and the other two by technical knockouts, i. e., his opponent either quit or the referee stopped the contest to save the other fellow from punishment."

Thus we have two men, champions beyond dispute of two continents, who because of technical differences are being kept apart by the arbitrary stand of one State boxing body. There is little doubt that if a national organization were in control of the game these two natural rivals would be permitted to meet first, and all challengers be given a hearing later.

The public wants this match whether the New York Commission does or not. The unfortunate part is that no other state than New York can stage the match except New Jersey, which has agreed to abide the rulings of the New York Athletic Commission.

Olympia Club To Play Vespers

Exhibition Soccer Game to Be Played at High School Field This Afternoon.

The Olympia Club of Chicago, said to be the strongest soccer eleven ever assembled in the Windy City, will be the principal attraction in a double-header at High School Field this afternoon. The Vesper-Buicks of the St. Louis Soccer League will oppose the visiting eleven.

In a preliminary contest, the Hoovers will meet the DeLuxe club. The first game is scheduled to start at 1:50 p. m.

There is no championship significance attached to the Olympia-Buick game. The St. Louisans were held to a 1—1 tie by the Chicago men about two months ago. The game was played on a snow-covered field in Chicago and the speed of the Vesper players was necessarily absent.

There are several players in the Chicago lineup who are more or less familiar to St. Louis soccer enthusiasts. The three Bromley brothers, Dixon and Vidano have all appeared here. At outside right there will be one Caldwell who, according to reports, is a veritable sensation. He is a young man, 6 feet 2 inches tall, exceptionally fast and an artist at passing and crossing the ball.

Arrangements have been made by the local officials for announcing the score of the Scullin-Paterson national championship game which will be played this afternoon at Harrison, N. J. The score at the end of the first half and the final score will be announced.

The probable lineups:

VESPERS.	Position.	OLYMPIA.
LaBarre	Goal	J. Schwartz
Black	Right full	C. Dixon
Burke	Center half	Art Bromley
Fink	Right half	Joe Schwartz
Brannon	Center	Rabin
Ostar	Inside right	H. Bromley
Boyer	Outside right	Caldwell

Time of halves: 45 minutes.
Referees: Bassom and Murphy.

CHICAGO COMMISSION SAYS HEADLOCK IS O K

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—The City Athletic Commission today ruled that the headlock is a legal hold in wrestling matches and will be allowed. The decision removes any doubt regarding the right of Ed Lewis, heavyweight champion, to use the hold in his match with Ratano Gardini here next Tuesday night.

Osner is Offered Bout With Kaiser Here, on April 11

Management of the Business Men's Athletic Association Expects Answer Soon.

By J. E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Frankie Osner, the St. Louis bantamweight boxer who, with Flanagan and Kid Bandy, makes up a little army of Mound City boxers now campaigning in Chicago, may be seen here again on April 1, at the First Regiment Armory.

It was stated at the Business Men's Athletic Association headquarters today that Osner had been offered a match here with Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser, for the date named above and that a favorable answer was expected.

Osner returned to Chicago, following his fine showing here against the clever and shifty Mike Kramer last week. No decision was rendered then, but Osner had an advantage on points.

It was stated that Kaiser was willing to meet Osner and that Osner had written from Chicago, prior to the telegram sent by the B. M. A. A., asking for a match with Peewee.

It is assumed, therefore, that his consent to terms is all that stands in the way of arranging the affair.

The "Form" on Mound City Boys.

Osner showed great improvement, and his clean style of boxing particularly impressed ringsiders. Kramer is considered a shifty boy. In the gymnasium, where the cognoscenti disouss inside things about boxers, it has long been understood that Kramer was being privately prepared to go after both Peewee Kaiser and Patsy Flanagan. The railbirds who watch 'em work out, were of the opinion that Kramer would not come off second best with either boy, if given a chance. However, as an amateur, Peewee "had it on" Kramer and beat him more than once.

Osner having shaded Kramer, the club matchmakers thought it logical to match Frankie with Kaiser rather than Kramer. The winner as between Osner and Kaiser, if the match is arranged, will then be pitted against the winner of the Mike Kramer-Kid Sparks contest, which will be part of the double bill on April 11. Sparks is little known here, but he comes with the best of references and is said to carry a real surprise for the local boys.

Flanagan vs. Kramer?

The Angelica Club is also working toward another show at the Coliseum, but further than that Mike Dundee is one boxer being considered nothing could be learned.

It is assumed that the matchmakers of the club are trying to make a return match between Dundee and Patsy Flanagan, who fought such an attractive contest at Chicago in one of the all-star bouts on the card with Joe Lynch and Joe Burman. Flanagan was outpointed by Dundee, but it was close. Dundee is a hard nut to crack.

Flanagan, Osner and Kid Bandy are in Dan Keefe's string of Chicago boxers and doing well. Bandy, with his usual hard luck, sprained a hand—his left this time—and is temporarily on the shelf. Flanagan gained considerable popularity in Chicago, where he is considered a real "prospect." He has met several capable boys and is said to have made a lot of money. All of which he has managed to get rid of.

If Flanagan and Bandy can show as great an improvement since quitting St. Louis as did Osner, Flanagan ought to be a real drawing card for our biggest arena.

How About Kaiser vs. Flanagan?

Incidentally, isn't it about time Peewee Kaiser and Flanagan were brought together? This has been lying around for somebody to pick it up for two years. Now that Flanagan is as much of a drawing card as Kaiser there is no reason why they should not battle on a 50-50 basis. This is considered by promoters here the best local match that could be arranged.

Frankie Weiss, who is doing business for Kaiser, said that "Peewee" was particularly eager to box Osner and was about ready to oppose Flanagan.

Peewee was grilled for fighting a purely safety-first bout against Midget Smith, a boy who lacks a damaging wallop.

Weiss blames it all on Midget. He said:

"Peewee never holds unless the other fellow starts something. If an opponent will fight clean, break clean and quit holding Peewee will do likewise. We want the Osner bout because we think it will prove my case. Osner fights cleanly and you will see that Peewee will come through without the slightest criticism."

Donges, Roughly Handled in 1922, Has Derby Chance

Son of Celt Competed in 20 Races on 9 Tracks and Won $31,323.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 31.—If anyone thinks John S. Ward, the Louisville turfman and member of the racing firm of Ward and Goose, isn't holding an "ace in the hole" for this year's Kentucky Derby, they may be badly fooled. They should see his candidate Donges take to his preparatory work for the blue ribbon classic.

Donges is a chestnut colt by Celt out of the good mare Bessie Melton. He is bred to run all day, at any distance and under any weight. If breeding counts for anything he should be on the front end the afternoon of May 19.

Donges was a stake winner last year and in the first flight of two-year-olds. He started 20 times as a two-year-old. He was first three times, second twice, and third three times.

Donges Earned $31,323 in 1922.

In all he earned $31,323 in purses for his owner. He met the best two-year-olds last year and this included Enchantment, Blossom Time, Sally's Alley, Out Out, Better Be All, Messenger, Picketer and Cartoonist. One of his best performances was to run third to Enchantment and Picketer in the Kentucky Jockey Club stakes.

There were few tracks that Donges was not campaigned over last year. Pimlico, Latonia, Lexington, Louisville, Belmont, Saratoga, Kenilworth, Devonshire and Windsor saw Donges in action. Fact is, Donges was the most kicked-about colt on the American turf last season. He would race in Louisville one day and the next he would be on a train to fill an Eastern engagement.

Cost $25,000 as 2-Year-Old.

His present owner parted with $25,000 last spring for the colt, which was the property of Will Perkins, when he won at Churchill Downs at 100 to 1 in the mutuals.

Donges is receiving his preparation for the classic of Churchill Downs under the supervision of Roscoe Goose, who rode with such success a few years back, and one season led the Jockey list for the year. Goose rode Tom Hayes Donerail to victory in the 1918 Derby and he paid the highest price ever returned on a winner of that event. His price was 91.45 to 1. Those believing in alphabetical superstitions will take this as a hunch and string along with Donges in the Derby. Donges is in as forward in his condition as his owner and trainer deem it necessary for him to be at this time, and Roscoe feels the old-time thrills of the jockey as he breezes the son of Celt in his morning trials.

Donges Quoted at 30 to 1.

While the colt is training splendidly it will take one or two races to get him in his best condition. He is not much for work in the morning, but he is a true running horse in races. Owner Ward plans to ship to Lexington and he will run him once or twice there, while the week intervening between the opening of the local meeting and Derby Day will give him further opportunity to get another race under his belt.

The future books here opened this colt at 30 to 1, but the price has been cut into. Ward and Goose are smart handlers of horses and if Donges trains on as he is expected to he is likely to give a good account of himself in the Derby.

Col. M. J. Winn returned to Louisville after an absence of several days at Latonia to rush the improvements under way at Churchill Downs.

Winter Book Odds On Kentucky Derby

Few important changes are to be found in the following quotations on the Kentucky derby candidates, as prepared by Tom Kearney. Enchantment is still 8 to 1 favorite. Sally's Ally is quoted at the liberal odds of 20 to 1 while Donges has been cut slightly from 30, to 20 to 1.

The open character of this race ought to result in one of the heaviest plays in several years, widely distributed among many entries.

It is now thought possible that at least 20 starters will go to the post and it is felt that the winner will very probably be a surprise.

be able to play. His injured knee failed to respond sufficiently to treatment, and Capt. Brady announced tonight that Danny Murphy would go in at right halfback.

All of the indications point to ideal weather for the game, as it is anticipated the gale will have blown itself out by morning and that the sun will bring the temperature to the right spot. The field will be fast, just the condition the Scullins want, and none of the St. Louis boys is willing to listen to even a suggestion of losing.

Likewise did the Paterson club spend their last day before the struggle in resting up. Like the Scullins, they had a hard season, with a sequence of cripples, and they have been chary about risking aching joints and sore muscles in practice work.

Injuries have reduced the strength of the St. Louis team to such a degree that it is generally expected that they will meet with a reverse in today's classic. Among those players who have been taken from the Scullins through injury are Tommy O'Hanlon, a wonderful halfback; Jimmy Nolan, O'Hanlon's successor at left half and an equally brilliant player; George Bentley, right fullback, the best young back the Scullins have had since the club's organization five years ago; Cliff Brady, judged by experts as the equal of any forward in America. Further, Emmett Mulvey, regular outside left, will miss the final because of the demands of professional baseball.

Paterson will present a truly all-star team. Owner Adolph Busilk purchased his players from the best teams in and around New York. Seven of the players are native Scots, four are English born, one is a Belgian and but three Americans. Two men on the roster played last year in Scotland.

Scott Is Suspended.

James Scott, last year of the Third Lanarks of Scotland, is on the suspended list and will not be at his accustomed position at right halfback for Paterson. William Murray, inside right, is injured and "Rabbitt" Heminsley will be in his place. Peter Sweeney, regular outside left, has been out of the lineup for several months through illness. Irvine has replaced him.

In the matter of substitutes, Paterson has much the better of the situation. Irvine, Heminsley and Adams are all excellent players, very nearly the equal of the men who are missing.

Municipal Links in West Surpass Those in East

Champion Sarazen Surprised at Number and Excellence of Public Courses.

LOS ANGELES PROGRESSIVE

Golfers Subscribed $50,000 to Establish New Public Links.

By Gene Sarazen,
World's Champion Golfer.
(Copyright, 1923.)

One of the things which greatly surprised me on my recent tour with Jock Hutchison was the remarkable growth of municipal golf courses in the West. In this respect the West is setting an example which the East, and New York City especially, could follow.

Golf is a comparatively new game in the West, but of late years it has become very popular and the people in that section are doing everything in their power to promote the game and to make it possible for all to play.

I have the city of Los Angeles in mind as I write this. We gave an exhibition on the public links there early in January. Despite the fact that these links, in Griffith Park, are in an outlying district, some 10 miles or more from the heart of the city, and that the exhibition was put on on a week day, there was a big crowd.

Where they all came from I do not know, but each individual was keenly enthusiastic about our show and asked us a number of questions concerning the stroke.

After the show was over, Gerald Thomas and Mrs. Trabue took us in tow. Mrs. Trabue is one of Los Angeles' most enthusiastic public links golfers.

An Excellent Course.

"We have a new public course over here that is completed and which will be ready for play in June. We would like to have you look over the layout and tell us what you think about it."

Mr. Thomas laid out the course and I must say he has certainly made a good job of it.

The course has been designed so that the good player can enjoy it as well as the duffer. The type of holes is excellent—in fact, the course is so well planned it's good enough for a championship.

But more remarkable than the layout of this course is the story of how the money was raised. It seems that Los Angeles public links players, wanting a suitable course to play on and having failed to induce the city authorities to build a new one, under the active leadership of Mrs. Traube, raised the money themselves—something like $50,000. Having completed all their plans, they went to the city authorities and petitioned them for a tract of land on which to build the course.

At first the city was reluctant to grant even this petition, but Los Angeles has a lot of land and city officials eventually gave these golfers permission to go ahead and build a course.

Why Not Elsewhere?

It occurred to me here was a good idea for New York public links players to work on. The people in the metropolis—those who play over Van Cortlandt and Pelham courses—are crying for new and better courses.

All through the West and the South they are doing more for municipal golfers than the East is.

Chicago especially is making tremendous strides in this matter. There are nearly a dozen courses in that city where a golfer can play for a nominal fee.

Denver, our first stop on this tour, San Francisco and San Diego are all following the example of Chicago. San Francisco has one fairly good municipal course—much better, at least, than Van Cortlandt Park—and work has already been started on another links that will compare with any in the country.

San Antonio has a snappy little public course that is interesting and pretty. New Orleans has a good municipal course; Jacksonville is about to start building a public course, as is Miami; Atlanta has a couple of good ones already laid out. Washington and Baltimore have fine public courses, but Boston and New York remain conservative in this matter.

Speaking of courses and enthusiasm for the game, I must tell you about Tucson, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N. M. Each of these hustling little towns boasts of a country club and golf course.

The clubhouse at Tucson is a splendid building. And considering the soil and the topography of the land, the golf course is not so bad, except that there isn't a blade of grass over the entire 18 holes.

I was dumbfounded when I played over these links—not so much at the course as at the enthusiasm of the people who play over the course with all of the interest a member of Garden City Golf Club plays his magnificent course.

You would think the obstacles that confront the people in that section of the country would discourage them from playing the game—but they don't.

It is the same in Albuquerque, Phoenix and El Paso. Despite the condition of the land in those places, they play the game with all of the spirit and with the same fine sportsmanship that any of the golfers in the various Eastern clubs display.

Browns Hurling Staff Now Ranks With League's Best; Pruett a Real Sensation

Green Collegian of Two Years Ago Is Expected to Prove First-Rank Star—Manager Lee Fohl's Good Work With Young Men Big Aid to Pitching Squad.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sporting Staff.

FT. WORTH, Tex., March 31.—As the American League opening draws near, it is safe to predict that the Browns' pitching staff will compare favorably with any in the circuit and in that statement is contained a high bit of praise for Manager Lee Fohl. It is largely due to his methods with pitchers and catchers, that the Browns are so well-equipped with battery men.

Fohl, like many baseball managers, started in the game as a catcher and his knowledge of that department of the game is largely responsible for the success of the St. Louis club.

First among the prizes developed by the Brownie manager comes Hubert Pruett. Fohl took him when he was a green college boy and utilized his natural talent and added to it until today Pruett is considered one of the sensations of the American League. Even in the South, where the fans do not read many big town papers, the fame of young Hubert has spread until stands yell for a chance to see the little left-handed lad in action.

Fohl Saw Pruett "Coming."

Fohl decides quickly in the matter of pitching talent. Last spring, early in the training period, he told the writer that Pruett would make a big ripple in the major league puddle. In the heat of the pennant race Fohl against his better judgment, permitted Pruett to start games. In New York 'Shucks' went five innings, wilted and had to be taken out. That was the day 'Shucks' was permitted to stay in, though shaky, until he struck out Ruth. Pruett was still weak and hardly able to walk after the game.

"I'll never start him in another game this year," Fohl said. He had decided to let Hubert finish an occasional game, but not to risk his future by putting too much work on his shoulders. Later in the year, during that terrible September series with the Yankees, Pruett begged and was permitted to start. He beat the Yanks, but Fohl was watching every pitch, ready to relieve him if he showed signs of fatigue.

This year Pruett is ready to take his turn. Fohl does not pay much attention to how other players prepare for the campaign, but in the case of pitchers he always is on the lookout. If a hurler is not working hard enough Fohl gives him a special taskmaster. Lefty Leifield is the Simon Legree. Lefty's favorite stunt is to put several pitchers in the outfield and chase them far and wide after fly balls. This has been done steadily this year, and all of the pitchers are in the best physical condition they ever were in. Their arms have developed with their bodies, and by the time all the exhibition games have been played the pitching staff, without an exception, will be ready to deliver it's best.

Fohl Credits His Catchers.

Fohl is not inclined to blame the pitcher always when the opposition pounds him. Being a catcher he should know whereof he speaks and he declares that Hank Severeid and Pat Collins should have much of the credit, when a pitcher hurls a fine game. For, no matter how much stuff a pitcher may have, he almost always pitches under direct orders from the catcher. If a pitcher fools a batter with two curves and the catcher signals for him to groove one, or if the catcher calls for a fast ball with the count two balls and no strike, the catcher is as much to blame as the pitcher if the batter knocks it out of the lot.

Pitching and catching have changed a great deal in the last few years, Fohl declares, to meet the change in batting tactics. In the old days the batter rarely struck at a ball with the call two balls and no strikes, or three and one; and the first ball usually went by without a swing. In these days of slugging, however, the batter is likely to swing any time. Batters like to pick on a cripple and the catcher who calls for a fast ball just because it is the first pitch, or because the call is such and such, is putting the pitcher in danger.

Fohl believes that new systems of batting is largely responsible for the great increase in the number of .300 hitters in the major league. The lively ball has something to do with it, but the new tactics, the inclination to strike at every good ball, makes the task of the pitcher and catcher a much more important one than it used to be, and in Hank Severeid and Pat Collins, Fohl thinks he has two of the best backstops in baseball.

Brownies Radio S O S For Sisler; Also Send Greetings to Friends

ST. LOUISANS who happened to be tuning in on the Fort Worth (Tex). Star Telegram broadcasting station, Friday night at 10:30 o'clock or near that time, were probably surprised to hear several members of the Browns expressing their views about the Browns and the American League race, or sending greetings to fans and friends.

Ezzell, Jacobson, Durst, Pruett, Kolp and others made talks. The tenor of all was that everything was well with the team except for the absence of George Sisler, who is badly wanted.

The messages all bespoke the confidence and team spirit of the Brownies. With Sisler they would almost count the pennant "in."

with him and everybody wants to help. When George Sisler does return to duty he will find a most promising understudy. Many members of the Brownie squad believe that before the Browns reach St. Louis Durst will be a better first sacker than some of the men covering that position in the American League. His showing has dispelled much of the gloom which was created by the news that Sisler would be late. If Durst doesn't suffer stage fright in front of the crowds which are sure to attend the Browns' spring games with the Cardinals, St. Louis fans will be convinced when they see "Cedric, the Texan," perform.

As far as pitching, fielding and general physical condition are concerned the Browns are a most promising ball club. At bat they have not yet struck their normal stride. However, batting practice will constitute most of the work for the regulars from now until the season opens. And, no one in camp is worrying over the Browns' hitting strength.

John Schulte, catcher, obtained from Mobile, suffered an attack of influenza last night and was confined to bed today. However, he said he wanted to continue the trip with the Browns and unless physicians advise against it, he will accompany the team to Shreveport and New Orleans.

Sell was equal to the occasion and Walker, Hauser and Miller, the chief sluggers on Connie Mack's payroll went out on long hoists to the outfield. Myers caught one and Blades two. Blades took Miller's fly for final out of the game close to edge of the playing field. South Americans Show Increased Tennis Interest

Miniature Davis Cup Series Between Five Nations a Fixture.

By Davison Obear.

There has been a great increase in tennis interest in the South American countries during the past two years. Five nations, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay have taken up the game with much enthusiasm, according to reports from the Southern continent.

Argentina took the lead by entering the Davis Cup International matches two years ago but was forced to default without playing in the opening round. However, this South American country entered the 1923 Davis Cup contest and elected to play in the European zone. Judging from previous ability of play the Argentines will make a favorable showing against any of the present European teams.

In South America there is a miniature Davis Cup event which is played for by the five above mentioned countries. It is known as the Mitre Cup contest. This international event was inaugurated in 1921. Argentina's representatives won it that year and successfully defended the title in 1922 against a tennis team from Chile.

Play at Buenos Aires.

Brazil did not enter the Mitre Cup play in 1921 but competed last year. The 1922 event took place in Argentina last October, which is springtime in that country. All matches were played on the courts of the Buenos Aires Tennis Club and the competition was very successful from both a playing and financial viewpoint. Time is not far distant when there will probably be from eight to 12 nations taken part in the Mitre Cup play.

Seventeen players represented five countries in the contest and some of them were fully a month's traveling distance away from their homes. Argentine was forced to travel at top speed to win from Chile in the challenge round. Four singles and one doubles contest comprised each match, the same as in the Davis Cup play Argentina won, 3 to 2.

The players who represented Argentine in the Mitre cup play are C. Morea, L. H. Knight, A. J. Villegas and A. Hortal. No doubt these same men will be considered for the Davis cup team this year. Villegas is an exceptionally fine doubles player. He was mainly responsible for the victory of Argentina over Chile in the Mitre cup contest.

Honduras Tourney.

Further north, in Central America, another nation has taken up the game of tennis with enthusiasm. Honduras recently held its first annual championship tournament. The event took place in Tegucigalpa, the capital city. Eighteen players took part and doubles was the only event played.

Members of the diplomatic corps of Great Britain and the United States were listed as entries. The consular service of Spain also had an entry. A Honduran team, Jose Guitierez and Alfred Medrano, however, won the championship. All matches were played on the La Leona Tennis Club courts.

Maj. Douglas Macduff of the United States army has been partly responsible for the interest in tennis in Central America. He has played on tennis courts in several Central American countries. Four of the countries have courts of tile construction, something new to most players.

FIVE ST. LOUIS TENNIS OFFICIALS SERVE ON NATIONAL COMMITTEES

Five local tennis officals have been selected to serve on the various committees of the Unted States Lawn Tennis Association. The selections were made by Dwight F. Davis of this city, who is president of the national tennis body.

C. Drummond Jones was given the chairmanship of the committee on the 1923 National Municipal Championships which will be played in St. Louis this year. Membership on a national tournament requires not only responsibility but active work. Jones is president of both the Missouri Valley and St. Louis District tennis organizations.

Another national committee which is recognized as an absolutely essential branch of the United States Lawn Tennis Association is the National Tennis Umpires' Committee, headed by Clifford Black of New York. Fred A. Gardener, in charge of the local chapter of umpires, has been appointed by Dwight Davis as a member of this committee. Gardner is a member of the Triple A Club and active in local tennis affairs.

Cubs' Prospects Much Improved Over Last Year

Four Southpaws Added to Pitching Staff and Infield Strengthened.

By Harry Neily.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Prospects for the Cubs for the National League season of 1923 are much improved over last year.

Manager Bill Killefer has adopted a policy of surrounding himself with a galaxy of sprightly youths whom the Cubs' scouts have delivered. Last spring the so-called "experts" felt sorry for the boy manager, but he almost ran the Cubs into the first division his first season as a major league pilot.

The Cubs have four veteran pitchers in Alexander, Aldridge, Osborne and Cheeves, the latter a powerful right-hander who did pretty well last season, in spite of illness.

Four southpaws have been added in Fussell, a semipro from Nebraska; Hodges of Joplin, Mo., and the Dumovich brothers of Los Angeles. Fussell beat the Pirates last fall, holding them to three hits when they were right on the heels of the Giants. He appears to be the best of the lot, having speed, a curve and control. He is working on a change of pace.

Two Dumovich Brothers.

The elder Dumovich, Nick, won 20 and lost 11 games for Los Angeles last season, and seems ripe for the big leagues. His brother, Martin, is only 18 years old.

Stueland, Keen, Stauffer and Kaufmann are young right-handers who may or may not stick. Stueland and Kaufmann were with the club in 1922, but were not alarmingly successful.

Grimes will be the regular first baseman. George Grantham will perform at second base. Zeb Terry is on the voluntary retired list to engage in the real estate business in Los Angeles, but may join the club later. Grantham is rangy and bats left-handed. He is developing rapidly.

Hollocher will continue to shortstop. Third base is an open fight between Barney Friberg, utility player for two seasons, and Bobby Barrett, late at Little Rock. Eight major-league clubs were after Barrett, who is six feet high, has a powerful arm and handles himself as a natural ballplayer. However, it is likely that Friberg will start at third.

There will be no changes in the outfield. Hack Miller continues in left, Statz in center and Heathcote in right. Callaghan and Fitzgerald, who were with the club last fall, also are candidates.

Johnny Kelleher, who alternated at third base with Marty Krug, will be retained as utility infielder. Back of the bat Bob O'Farrell will do the bulk of the receiving, with Harnett and Wirts in reserve.

BOWLING

National Women's Tournament Opens Here April 14—Jerry Ameling High Average Bowler — National Biscuits Shoot 3090.

No estimate of the number of teams entered in the sixth annual National Women's Bowling Tournament could be given last night at midnight when the entries closed, but it is expected that the record number of 82 will be surpassed. The event will open on the Washington Alleys on April 14. Entries for teams from New York City, Syracuse, San Francisco and other points have been received. It is hoped the final tabulation will show 60 teams entered from St. Louis.

The tournament was held in Toledo last year, where 52 teams competed. The Birk Cola team of Chicago won first prize with a score of 2531. The doubles event was won by Sneider and Sneider of Detroit with a total of 1094 and the singles by E. Jaeger of Toledo with a score of 666. R. Abraham of Milwaukee had the best total for nine games, 1659. No St. Louis woman or team finished within the first five.

Teams made up from the Order of the Eastern Star have arranged to open the tournament at the Washington Alleys and it is expected that Gov. Hyde and Mayor Kiel will be on hand to give the affair an appropriate start.

National Biscuit Team Totals 3090.

By winning three games from the Fort Smith and Western team the National Biscuits went into a tie with the Union Fuels for the leadership of the Business Men's League last week on the Washington Alleys. The National Biscuits broke the league record when they totaled 3090 for their three games. Tavenner led the team with 650, all of his games being over 200; Smith was next with 621, Meyers 616, third; Ed. Schaefer, 602, fourth, and Kennedy was low with 601. The team shot 1043 for their first game, 1049 for the second and 998 for the third.

Roy Huitt of the East St. Louis team had the best individual game of the week, 278, also the individual high three, 687.

Handicap Entries Coming In.

Entries are coming in for teams to bowl in the City Handicap Tournament to be held at Stein's Alleys, 4112 Chouteau avenue, beginning April 19. Entries close on April 6. Ziegenhein Bros.' team was the first to enter. One hundred and ninety-six teams rolled in the tournament last year and with the City Association membership increased to 582 teams this number should be exceeded.

Handicaps will be figured on a 60 per cent basis. Jerry Ameling's average of 197 will be the medium by which the individual averages will be handicapped. Ameling is a member of the Witter's Razz team in the Major City League and of the Old Judges in the Coffee Roasters' League. He has been bowling for more than 20 years, and captain of the same organization, though under many names, for the past 14 years. The Witter's Orange Crush team, captained by Ameling, broke the world's record for a single game scored in a tournament at Peoria, Ill., in 1917, with a scare of 1113.

Central States Next.

More than 24 teams from St. Louis will roll in the Central States Tournament, to be held at Peoria, Ill. April 21 has been set aside as the St. Louis date and local teams will have possession of the alleys for that day. Jerry Ameling is handling the entry for this city and is drafting a schedule for St. Louis men to be submitted to them before he files it with the tournament association at Peoria.

Vols High in Stein League.

The Green Tree Dairy team of the Stein Scratch League won three from the A. C. Blums and totaled 2754 last week, which places the Dairy team within four games of first place. The Don Julians, however, seem to have a safe lead as there are but a few games left to bowl.

Vols of the Julians totaled 645 with a high game of 236 and led the league last week.

Major City Results.

Rothwell of the Cabannes in the Major City League rolling at the Washington bowled the highest individual score last week when he totaled 678. The Cabannes also had the high team total with 2858. Results: Cabannes 2, Jack Helberts 1; Palace Alleys 2, Big Four Autos 1; Lamberts 2, Victor Drugs 1; Witter's Razz 2, Budweisers 1.

Winning two games from the Urban Hardware team gave the Tower Grove Banks a safe lead in the Grand-Juniata League last week. Two teams from that league made up on the 10 high average men are at Milwaukee to bowl in the A. B. C. Tournament.

State Tournament Play to Open at K. C. on June 13

Richard Bockenkamp of Midland Valley Country Club, State Champion, Will Defend Title.

The Missouri State golf championship tournament will be played June 12 to 16 inclusive, over the links of the Milburn Golf and Country Club in Kansas City, it was announced yesterday by Bonner Miller, secretary of the Missouri Golf Association. Richard Bockenkamp of Midland Valley Country Club holds the title at present and Eddie Held, another St. Louisan, was runnerup last season.

The Trans-Mississippi tournament, in which a large number of St. Louis players usually participate, will be held at the Minikahda Country Club, Minneapolis, Minn., June 25 to 30.

The Western tournament, which was held at Kansas City last year, will be held at Cleveland, O., July 23 to 28 on the links of the Mayfield Country Club.

These three events, together with the St. Louis District Association championship, the date of which has not yet been set, represent the competition which St. Louis golfers will enter this year. Jimmy Manion, Dick Bockenkamp, Clarence L. Wolff and Eddie Held form a quartet of steady players upon whom local golfing circles are building hopes for season.

Those Greens Again.

Roger E. Lord of Algonquin, expresses fond hopes for better greens and better courses generally in and around St. Louis because of the successful formation of the St. Louis green section, a branch of a nationwide organization made up of "greens" committees of golf clubs. The United States Government lends aid in the study of grass and landscape problems and the various sections of the national organization exchange ideas relative to the building and upkeep of fairways and greens.

In the St. Louis green section, clubs of the St. Louis district are represented by members of the green committees. In the past year 12 meetings were held and appreciable benefit derived by a mutual exchange of ideas. Eberhard Anheuser is president, Sam Plant, Vice president and B. Greensfelder secretary-treasurer.

Reds, Minus Roush and Daubert, Regarded as Real Contender in National League Pennant Race

Team Confident Despite First Baseman's Illness and Failure of Outfield Star to Sign—Pitching Staff Promising.

This is the first of a series of sixteen articles which will discuss the pennant prospects of teams in the American and National Leagues. The second article will appear at an early date.

NO. 1—THE CINCINNATI REDS.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

One of the striking features in the Reds' training camp at Orlando, Fla., is the confidence of the players. The athletes figure that the club will be a real flag contender. And there is reason for it. Pat Moran's men came like wildfire during the last half of the 1922 season and nosed out the Pirates and Cardinals for second place in the final series of the campaign. It is the consensus of opinion that the nine will start just where it left off a year ago.

Moran has just about the best-looking aggregation training in Florida. The team is equipped with a first-class infield, outfield and catching staff. The pitching can be improved, however, and that is the main reason Garry Herrmann is making such a strong fight for Rube Benton, the southpaw, who was with St. Paul a year ago.

Judge Landis has decided that Benton is eligible to play with the Reds. Subsequently President Heydler of the National League interposed an objection but was later quoted as saying that he would not oppose the ruling of the baseball commissioner.

Players Who Will Aid Manager Pat Moran in Cincinnati's Flag Race

PITCHERS—Rixey, Dnhonue, Luque, Benton, Couch, Keck, Schnell, Abrams, Harris, Hargrave, Roberts, Dever, Austin, Clark and Rodriquez.

CATCHERS—Hargrave, Wingo, Lutz and Sandberg.

INFIELDERS—Daubert, Fonseca, Caveney, Pinelli, Bohne, Kimmick, Fowler, Reistenberg, Taylor and Harding.

OUTFIELDERS—Roush, Burns, Duncan, Harper, Bressler and Hock.

However, the acquisition of Benton is of doubtful value. He is 33 years old, which is far down the valley of a pitcher's baseball life. Last year in the American Association as a member of the St. Paul club he won 23 games. Herrmann evidently believes he can come near duplicating that performance in the National League circuit. It is quite a leap, however.

Quite a Staff.

Not counting Benton, the Reds have five pitchers, who were with the club a year ago. There is Eppa Rixey, the left hander, who had just about the best season of his career in 1922. Rixey is not getting any younger. He was born in 1891 and may be unable to repeat his performance of a year ago. But Rixey is still one of the best left handers in baseball.

Then there is Pete Donohue, the young right hander, considered by many a real star. Donohue was out a part of last year, but nevertheless he hurled great ball for Moran. So did Johnny Couch, from the Coast League. Couch was hit hard and often in many of his games, but he managed to win. Then there was Adolfo Luque, the Cuban, who, despite his good work, was unable to win many contests.

Frank Keck, the Kirkwood boy, who was brought up toward the close of the campaign, is expected to take his regular turn on the firing line this season. He looked mighty good in some of his starts in 1922. These will be Moran's regulars.

There are nine youngsters working out with the club from whom Moran will pick his reserve mound stars.

Two veterans will do the bulk of the catching. They are Ivy Wingo and "Bubbles" Hargrave. Last season was Hargrave's first in the league, but he showed that he is of major league caliber. The pair will again alternate with Wingo working against right handers and Hargrave against the southpaws. Lutz, who was with the team last year, and Sandberg, from the International League, are fighting it out for the place as third catcher.

Daubert Is Ill.

At present the makeup of the infield is somewhat in doubt owing to the illness of the veteran first sacker, Jake Daubert, who is down with pneumonia. Daubert undoubtedly will again be the regular in spite of his 37 years. Taylor and Fowler are the recruits who are striving for the place. Moran also has Rube Bressler, who can be used at the position. Another way would be to move Fonseca over from second.

Right now Fonseca is down to play second. He is being given a battle by Sammy Bohne, a mighty good player. Caveney is booked for short and Pinelli for third. Should Fonseca or Caveney slip, Bohne will get the place. Kimmick with the team a year ago, Fowler and Reistenberg are the other candidates.

That chronic holdout, Eddie Roush, is still among the missing, and if he does not report before the opening of the year, Burns, Duncan and Harper will make up the outer defense of Moran's team. That's the way the Reds played in 1922 until Roush finally came into the fold. Bressler and Hock are the other meadowmen with the team.

The talent is there and records show that Moran is a mighty good manager, so the Reds will be in there making it tough for all the rival clubs, unless something unforeseen occurs. Then the players will have added confidence because of the good showing the club made a year ago, with two new men, Caveney and Pinelli working on the infield.

PRIZE LIST MAY REACH $10,000 IN RYE TOURNEY

It is rumored that the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club at Rye, N. Y., is planning to stage a "monster" open golf tournament for professionals, the prize list to total over $10,000, first award to be $5000. Some time since this club asked the secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association to set aside the week of July 23 to 27 for a "tournament carnival," and this was done. It is understood that this will be the time chosen for the big meeting.

Municipal Soccer Final at Stake

St. Matthews Meet Ben Millers in Final Game of Series at Fairground.

The 1922-23 championship of the Municipal Soccer League will be decided at Fairground Park this afternoon when the Ben Millers and the St. Matthews clash in the third game of their final series. The Matthews won the first contest and the Millers evened the score last Sunday. The score in each contest was 2 to 1.

A preliminary game between the St. Leos of the local league and the St. Elizabeths of East St. Louis has been announced by Rodowe H. Abeken.

Although a speedier and more attractive team, the St. Matthews do not maintain as strong a defense as the Ben Millers, and there is no assurance that the faster team will win. The Millers played greatly improved ball last Sunday in coming from behind in the second half, and if they can contipue in that form the Matthews will find themselves hard pressed. Several of the Matthew players were injured last Sunday, and it is probable that they will present a crippled lineup.

The first game is scheduled to start at 1:15 p. m. An admission charge of 25 cents will be made.

CURRIE WARNS OF "RAIDS" ON CITY FUNDS BY 'MACHINE'

Democratic Candidate for Aldermanic Board Presidency Attacks Republican Actions.

SEES OPPORTUNITY TO OUST PARTY IN POWER

Declares Opposition Fears It Will Be Deprived of Power Over Expenditure of Money.

Fear that the Republican "machine" would be deprived of absolute power over expenditure of many millions, and forced to cut down its topheavy list of political jobholders, is the sole reason the Republican organization is opposing minority representation in city government, Dwight D. Currie, Democratic candidate for the presidency of the Board of Aldermen, declared last night in two campaign addresses.

He spoke at Rodenberg's Hall, 6312 North Broadway, First Ward, and 1629 North Fourteenth, Fourth Ward.

"The citizens have a better opportunity in the election Tuesday to overthrow the 'machine' than they ever will have again," Currie said, "because, if the 'machine' stays in the payroll will increase annually and the task of ousting this entrenched power will become more difficult.

"Raid on Treasury."

"We are just starting on the expenditure of the $87,372,500 bond issue, and we find at once that a raid is planned on the treasury in the way of increased salaries for those already in office."

"The Republican City Central Committee takes good care of its members and their relatives with jobs," he asserted, "and the members of the Board of Aldermen see that their relatives land soft jobs with the city. The following members of the Republican City Committee hold political jobs:

"Gus Oetting, Second Ward, City Supply Commissioner.

"Nicholas Polito, Fourth Ward, superintendent in Street Department.

"Gabriel Roth, Fifth Ward, Constable.

"Anton Schuler, Sixth Ward, City Marshal.

"Louis (Tub) Becker, Eighth Ward, Deputy Circuit Clerk.

"Richard Smart, Ninth Ward, Deputy Circuit Clerk.

"Fred Pape, Eleventh Ward, Park Commissioner.

"Herman Meuser, Thirteenth Ward, Deputy State Pure Food Inspector.

"George Hohmann, Twenty-second Ward, Deputy State Pure Food Inspector.

"Willard F. Smith, Twenty-fourth Ward, Deputy Marshal.

"Charles Kallman, Twenty-fifth Ward, chief clerk in Jury Commissioner's office.

"Frank Slater, Seventeenth Ward, does not hold a job himself, but his brother, Joseph, holds a $5000 job as Street Commissioner.

"The committee and the Board of Aldermen thus indicate the creed of the 'machine,' which is that of the spoilsman. With them politics is a strictly business affair. They are in it for the profit they can get out of it, and to their minds nothing good can come from anything which is not at all times 100 per cent partisan."

Predicts Greater Deficit.

Referring to the bond issue and an ordinance increasing salaries in a department, he said: "No doubt the bond issue work will require employment of experts, but the party in power is now laying the foundation for increasing the salaries of present officers and employes, in addition to employing additional help for temporary requirements. These increases in salary, if approved, will be permanent and in force after the bond issue work has been completed. When have we heard of any city hall salaries being reduced, once they are raised? If we have a deficit now, what will be the condition of the treasury when present jobholders get increases and hordes of new employes are put on the payroll?"

Currie recalled that his Republican opponent, Walter J. G. Neun, had held up the baby clinic, psychiatric clinic, health measures and the city hospital as Republican "achievements."

"Neun thinks because the city administration spends some of the taxpayers' money for such work, and does not devote all of it to payrolls, that it is entitled to high praise," Currie said. "Why shouldn't we have good hospitals and institutions? We pay in enough money."

These clinics and measures are not due to any benevolence or initiative of the city administration, Currie stated, pointing out that the Post-Dispatch and public spirited citizens made a long fight for passage of the measure requiring pasteurization of milk. The clinics were obtained, he recalled, only after citizens and the press had made a campaign for them. "If it had not been for the press and citizens, who receive and push such things, we never would get them from the administration," Currie said.

Reference was made to the fact that relatives of two Aldermen were appointed as milk inspectors, after an aldermanic committee made an extended trip to the East and came back with approval for a Government report that already had been made from a survey here.

"They 'point with price' to an expected saving in the cost of garbage disposal," Currie said. "If this method is so good, why was it not adopted long ago? Mayor Kiel has been in office 10 years with no one to oppose any improvement he may have conceived. Neun seems to think that whenever the taxpayers' money is spent for a needed improvement, that we should fall down and worship the 'machine' for giving us a crust of our own bread.

"McKelvey, one of Neun's prompters in a recent speech, reminded him not to forget the 'Indians,' Currie continued. "They are trying to raise a straw man to knock down. I hear no songs of praise from contractors who do business with McKelvey's Department of Public Safety."

He expressed the belief that many Republicans with the interest of the city at heart "will join us in electing our ticket, so there will be a minority representation in the Board of Aldermen and Board of Estimate and Apportionment that will combat the raids on the city treasury for increased salaries and additional employes—raids that already have been inaugurated. If we do not win this election it will be due solely to the apathy of the citizens."

AMENDMENT WOULD PERMIT ELECTION OF ALDERMEN BY WARDS

A CONSTITUTIONAL amendment which would permit election of Aldermen in St. Louis by wards, instead of by city-wide vote as at present, will be submitted on a state-wide vote in the State election in 1924.

Senator Kinney, Democrat, of St. Louis, is the author of the joint and concurrent resolution providnig for submission of the constitutional amendment. It was passed in the Senate, then passed in the House March 24, with no debate or opposition, when St. Louis Republican representatives were absent. The Governor is not required to approve a joint and concurrent resolution.

The State Constitution now provides that a municipal legislative body must consist of at least one house, to be elected by general ticket. Amendment of the City Charter would not be necessary if the consttlutional amendment is adopted.

Only a majority of the vote on the constitutional amendment is necessary for adoption.

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE FOR EASTER PARADE

Mild Temperature Predicted, but Pedestrians May Find Use for Umbrellas.

The expression "partly cloudy," which is the Weather man's way of hinting that it may rain at some time during the day, is more than balanced in the Easter weather forecast by the encouraging word, "warmer." Mild temperature is, after all, the chief requirement for an Easter parade; umbrellas and side curtains can take care of a little rain.

If it is warmer and there is not too much concrete and liquid "partial cloudiness," the annual procession of automobiles may be expected on King's highway, Lindell boulevard and other thoroughfares, and the pedestrian display, which has not been wholly eliminated by the motor's vogue, will be visible at the Lindell entrance of Forest Park and at points west and east thereof.

The motor and pedestrian turnouts, weather favoring, are at their height from 3:30 to 6 p. m.

Easter Egg Distribution.

At 8:30 this morning in 36 parks and playgrounds candy Easter eggs will be distributed to children by the Papa Club, otherwise the Parks and Playgrounds Association. Sunday school authorities have objected to having this bit of festivity on Sunday morning, and the Papa Club will probably hold such distributions on Saturday afternoon in future, to meet this objection. The time was advanced from 9 o'clock, the hour first set, so that children can get their eggs and still get to Sunday school on time. Sunday school time being 9:30 or 10 at most churches.

Elaborate programs of Easter music are announced by most of the churches. Easter attendance is, with most churches, the largest of the year. The number of special meetings which have been held by the churches during Lent is expected to add to the usual large attendance at this Easter. Afternoon or night services, with special musical programs are also scheduled by many of the churches.

CINERARIAS IN FULL BLOOM

Easter Finds Botanical Garden Show in Full Glory—Open at 2 O'clock Today.

The cineraria show, which has been in progress in the Missouri Botanical Garden for the last three weeks, has reached maximum bloom for Easter.

Approximately 2000 plants are in the display, the blooms ranging in color from white, through pinks and cerise, into blue and deep purple. The garden will open at 2 p. m. and will remain open until sunset. Vandeventer street cars run to the main entrance.

ADAM SUFFERED MUCH, SCIENTIST DECLARES

Dr. Charles W. Stiles Sees Complications for First Man in Unevolved World.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—If William Jennings Bryan's denial of the theory of evolution be correct, Adam must have survived for 930 years all the germ diseases which afflict man today; Eve must have been created by vivisection; the Garden of Eden must have been China and a lot of other startling things must have followed in consequence. In addition to all that, Noah must have been not only a capable ship's captain, but the world's first successful public health officer, because he must have taken all the germs into the ark and taken them out again without losing a single elephant.

So declared Dr. Charles W. Stiles of Wilmington, N. C., noted zoologist and scientific research worker, before the Washington Biological Society here tonight. Describing himself as "Mr. Bryan's self-appointed attorney on germs," Dr. Stiles argued to his fellow scientists that if one doesn't wish to believe all these things, one cannot agree with Mr. Bryan.

Complications Without Evolution.

"According to Mr. Bryan," said Dr. Stiles, "all germs which cause disease must have been created in the beginning as they exist today. If it is to be conceded that those germs were originally created in some form other than as disease germs, the theory of evolution stands admitted. Obviously, since Adam was the last animal created, and since the animals were not created until after the plants, it is unthinkable that any of the numerous germs which cause disease were created after Adam. Since disease germs are dependent for their existence upon animals and plants, in which they cause disease, it is clear that those germs could not have been created or existed prior to the creation of their victims."

Therefore, said Dr. Stiles, if Mr. Bryan's challenge is to be accepted, "we must conclude that Adam harbored every germ disease which is characteristic of man or dependent on man for its life cycle."

Says Adam Had Them All.

According to that, said Dr. Stiles, Adam must have had among other trouble various species of cootiei, typhus fever, hookworm, pneumonia, tapeworm, Jacksonian epilepsy, three kinds of malaria, sleeping sickness, typhoid fever, tuberculosis, mumps, whooping cough, yellow fever, scarlet fever, measles, meningitis, infantile paralysis and smallpox.

From that deduction, and admitting that Adam survived all these, Dr. Stiles said it further must be deduced that the Garden of Eden was in China, because that is the only place where man is known to survive some of the afflictions.

Moreover, Adam likely had a boil on his nose, Dr. Stiles further reasoned, and an abnormal appetite.

"No wonder he ate the apple," concluded the biologist. "The wonder is he did not eat the snake also."

PRESIDENT ENDS FLORIDA STAY; WILL SPEND WEEK IN GEORGIA

Is Said to Consider Predictions That He Will Be a Candidate Again Premature.

By the Associated Press.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPECIAL TRAIN, March 31.—The special train carrying President Harding and his vacation party from St. Augustine to Augusta, Ga., reached Jacksonville at 8:35 o'clock tonight and left 15 minutes later. It will reach Augusta early tomorrow.

Attorney - General Daugherty changed his plans to leave St. Augustine for Asheville, N. C., in advance of the presidential party and traveled on the same train to Jacksonville. Just before reaching Jacksonville, President Harding went up to Attorney-General Daugherty's car and spent some time with him. The President and Mrs. Harding will spend a week at Augusta before returning to Washington.

The statement of Attorney-General Daugherty at Miami brought about some political discussion, but the President did not enter into this to any considerable degree of feeling as he thinks that predictions that he will be a candidate for renomination are premature and that political consideration should be withheld until later.

PARADE TOMORROW IN AID OF "NONPARTISAN" TICKET

School Board Campaign Committee Names 247 Precinct Captains to Work at Polls Tuesday.

The Non-Partisan School Board Campaign Committee yesterday appointed 247 precinct captains to direct work at the polls Tuesday for election of the six members of the committee slate to the Board of Education, and announced many other volunteer workers would be at the voting places.

Tomorrow an automobile parade will be held in the downtown district, headed by a band, as a public demonstration for the six candidates, who are Robert H. Ballman, Dr. Walter H. Fuchs, Alexander S. Langsdorf and Joseph Woracek, for full terms; H. F. Fahrenkrog, four-year term; Mrs. Elias Michael, two-year term.

The committee selected this ticket Feb. 5 and has been making an intensive campaign since that time.

GLEE CLUB CONCERT BROADCAST BY K S D

Thousands Entertained by Excellent Singing of Westminster College Organization.

Station KSD broadcast a concert given in its studio last night by the Glee Club of Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., and entertained thousands of radio enthusiasts with some of the best choral music sent out by radio in some time. The Glee Club, which is under the direction of William Sims Rixey, a student of the college, sings with spirit and precision, and the individual voices are far above the average to be found in such organizations. That much care and attention has been given to the training of this chorus was evidenced by the manner in which it sang all its numbers last night, especially the stirring "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust, and Bullard's "Winter Song."

Two soloists, Galt Schrader and William Sims Rixey, demonstrated decidedly good baritone voices, and the orchestra, which played a set of popular numbers programmed as "Novelty Selections," undoubtedly set the feet of their unseen hearers to tapping. Miss Anne Henderson of Fulton, who came to St. Louis as accompanist for the Glee Club, added much to the success of the concert by the excellently sustaining background which her piano gave the singers and instrumentalists.

The Glee Club concert formed the second part of last night's program. The first part was presented by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Brandon and Joseph Funkhouser, vocalists, and Miss Veronica Hill, pianist. A series of popular numbers were given by these performers.

An interesting feature of the first part of the program was an address by Mrs. Victoria Booth-Clibborn-Demarest, granddaughter of the late Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Demarest gave some of her experiences as an evangelist, a career which started in Holland in her eleventh year. Mrs. Demarest and her mother, Mrs. Katherine Booth-Clibborn, have left the Salvation Army, she said last night, and now are devoting themselves to general evangelist work.

INCREASE IN WORLD SUGAR CROP FOR YEAR ESTIMATED

Production for 1922-23 Will Be 20,450,000 Short Tons, Agriculture Department Figures.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31. — In announcing today that it estimates the world production of beet and cane sugar for the crop year 1922-23 at 20,450,000 short tons, the Department of Agriculture said it was not prepared to estimate the probable consumptive demand.

The Department also pointed out that in estimating the world supply, stocks of sugar on hand should also be taken into consideration, and added that statistics of stocks for many countries are incomplete or unreliable.

"World production of beet and cane sugar for the crop year 1922-23 is estimated at 20,450,000 short tons," the statement said. "This is 200,000 short tons more than the 1921-22 production and 2,000,000 tons more than the 1912-13 to 1913-14 pre-war average.

"Beet sugar production in Canada and the United States is estimated at 754,000 tons, compared with 1,102,000 tons in 1921-22 and with 654,000 tons in the two pre-war years. Although beet sugar production in the United States is estimated at 347,000 tons less than last year, increased European production of 506,000 tons more than makes up the shortage."

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 31.—Six workmen were killed and six others seriously injured today when the central tower on the New Windsor avenue factory of the Fuller Brush Co. collapsed.

The weight of a 50,000-gallon tank of water at the top of the tower, which had been filled for a test, was the apparent cause of the crash.

MAN FATALLY INJURED IN COLLISION OF AUTOS

August Kleinschmidt, 50, Was Passenger of Truck That Was Struck by Sedan.

August Kleinschmidt, 50 years old, of 5112A North Broadway, died at the city hospital at 11:30 o'clock last night from a skull fracture suffered at 7:45 o'clock when an automobile truck on which he was passenger was struck by a sedan automobile which emerged from Fairground Park at Prairie and Kossuth avenues.

The driver of the sedan, Sidney E. Mohlman, 32, of 4547 Harris avenue, a salesman, was charged with felonious wounding and released on bond. Later an order was given for his rearrest.

Kleinschmidt's nephew, Howard Marsh, 23, who lived with him and who was driving the truck, suffered internal and back injuries. He declared that Mohlman was speeding. Mohlman denied this and charged that the truck was speeding. Its lights were dim, he said, and he did not observe it until a collision was unavoidable, though he swerved sharply. His car struck the rear end of the truck. He said his sedan was new and that a statement that he was speeding was not plausible as he would not be inclined to push a new engine.

Pedestrian, Run Down by Truck Friday, Dies of Injuries.

Injuries suffered in an automobile accident at 6:40 p. m. Friday caused the death at the city hospital at 2 a. m. yesterday of Frank Goodson, 36 years old, 836 North Sixth street. He was knocked down at Seventeenth and Locust streets by an eastbound truck driven by Walter E. Schwandt of 5089 Geraldine avenue.

Goodson ran in front of the truck from in front of a westbound machine. His injuries were a possible fracture of the spine, fractured ribs and internal injuries. His widow resides in Little Rock, Ark.

Girl, Injured When Street Car Hit Auto, Dies.

Miss Helen Boeggeman, 25 years old, 2864 Wisconsin avenue, a Western Union telegraph operator, died at Barnes Hospital at 1:10 this morning from injuries suffered when the automobile in which she was riding with Harry E. Leonard of 2524 Glasgow avenue, was struck by a Kirkwood-Ferguson street car at the Clayton road in St. Louis County at 4:15 Friday evening.

Alcohol and Crime? Not Related, Says Ex-Chief of Scotland Yard

Sir Basil Thomson Declares Habitual Criminal in England Does Not Drink, Because, If Successful, He Needs Nerves and Clear Head—Liquor Factor in Sexual Offenses.

Theory About Relation Between After-Effects of War and Crime Declared Myth; Expresses Opinion That England Will Never Have Prohibition, Despite Spread of Movement.

No one can speak more authoritatively on crime than Sir Basil Thomson. The enforcement of law in England is world famous. Scotland Yard is a synonym for police efficiency. For eight years Sir Basil Thomson was the head of Scotland Yard. During the war with Germany he was in charge of Great Britain's secret service. Prior to his connection with Scotland Yard he was prison warden for 12 years, and for five years secretary to the Prison Board and Chief Inspector of Prisons, in all 25 years close contact with crime. He has an intimate knowledge of more criminals than perhaps any other police official in the world.

By GEORGE MACADAM,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, March 31.

WHEN I asked Sir Basil Thomson to talk on the relation between alcohol and crime he at first declined.

"No," said he, "it would be an ungracious thing for me to do. You Americans are a very hospitable people; you have given me a very cordial reception. I do not want to play the part of the visitor who turns critic."

The ex-Chief of Scotland Yard laughed. "I have boasted that I am going to be the first Englishman who, on his return home, does not write a book on what he saw, or fancied he saw, in America."

On being urged to talk on liquor and lawlessness, limiting his observations to his experiences in England, Sir Basil finally consented.

"There is no relation between alcohol and crime," adding quickly, "in England. And when I say that, I mean serious crime—felonies, not misdemeanors; the offenses that constitute the real danger to society and that give the police their real problem.

"It is the habitual criminal who wars with society. Our experience is that the habitual criminal does not drink. If he takes to drink he ceases to be an habitual criminal, for the simple reason that he fails in business. The successful burglar needs steady nerves and a clear head.

"This statement concerning the temperance, often total abstinence, of the professional criminal needs no qualification. But my other statement, that there is no relation between alcohol and crime in England, must be modified slightly. We have found that alcohol has an influence on sexual crimes—rape, etc. Though we have more sexual crime in England than you have in America in proportion to population, still, it does not bulk large in the total of criminal offenses in England. On the other hand, we have a tremendously smaller number of murders. Last year, in England and Wales, with their population of nearly 40,000,000, there were 63 murders. As a rough estimate I would say that in about 10 of these murders alcohol played a part, though I do not recall a single case of which I would say that if there had been no alcohol there would have been no murder.

Denies War Breed Criminals

"If I may be understood to be talking philosophically and not critically, talking as one seriously interested in a grave problem, I think that a comparison of the crime statistics in England and America will show that we must look to something other than alcohol as the true cause of crime. To make the comparison apposite, let me repeat: Last year, in England and Wales, population 40,000,000, there were 63 murders; in the United States, population 100,000,000, there were 9500 murders. In the latter country, according to figures given by the American Bar Association, burglary has gone up 1200 per cent in the last 10 years. England has more petty crimes of dishonesty in proportion to population; the United States more serious crimes.

"We hear a good deal of talk about the relation between the after-effects of war and crime. That is a handy theory, but it is myth. War has not proved to develop criminal tendencies in the soldiers. An examination of crime statistics proves this. The United States did not have a crime wave after the war. The increase in crime in the United States began in 1900, the increase being greater between 1910 and 1916 than it was between 1916 and 1921. In England we had our highest crime rate in 1908-13. It was higher in 1913 than during any year of the war or since. One reason for this was that 1100 of our professional criminals enlisted voluntarily and conscription took the rest. But after their release there was nothing in England that could be called a crime wave. The figures have been going up slowly, but they have not yet reached the 1913 level.

"It is true that after the Napoleonic wars there was a crime wave. That was due to economic reasons. If a man becomes hungry enough he steals. That holds good at all times, entirely independent of the fact whether there has been a war or no war. There is now a crime wave in Germany. That is because living is hard and the Government has broken down.

"Living also has been hard in England, but we have had a strong enforcement of the criminal law and—just as important in time of economic crisis—we have helped the hungry. Our unemployment dole and old age pension have been big factors in keeping the hungry from becoming amateurs in crime.

"As a matter of fact, out of 63 prisons we have been able to close 16. These 16 had all been kept going by seven-day prisoners—vagrants and drunkards. Because of the strict enforcement of the law and the fact that a man cannot get his unemployment dole unless he is in his own locality, vagrancy in England has gone down to almost nothing. Drunkenness also has shown a very satisfactory decrease.

"Though we fully recognize the evils of intemperance, at no time during the war, even when we were hardest pushed by Germany, did we attempt prohibition. If for no other reason, we knew that it was and is unenforceable in England. We tried what we thought was a rational limitation, and not only did it work during the war, reducing war-time intemperance and thereby increasing industrial output, but it also has proved to have been constructive legislation. It has resulted in more temperate habits. During the war, for instance, treating was strictly prohibited. This restriction has since been removed, but treating has gone out of fashion. The mutual obligation to buy a round of drinks has been recognized as an evil and largely dropped. The war-time restrictions on hours of sale and the strength of liquor have been modified. Neither the liquor traffic nor the habit of drinking is what it was in old England.

"Here is a thing that may be of interest in America: We always found that when labor showed unrest, if the war-time beer restrictions were relaxed the unrest subsided.

England Will Never Go Dry

"This twentieth century saw a movement toward temperance that I think was world-wide. England felt it. I believe it was very strong here in the United States. The movement is growing in strength in England. But, in my opinion, we will never have prohibition in England. How can you enforce prohibition so long as fruit juice insists upon fermenting? An army of police and an army of spies and a house-to-house espionage might possibly accomplish it; but unless we change our national characteristics we will never have that sort of thing in England.

"I will say just one thing about prohibition in America. If it is true that prohibition has abolished the saloon, and has brought no greater evil, then prohibition has been an excellent thing. Back in 1882 I ran a farm in Iowa. It was a prohibition State and I saw the saloon at its worst. America should be congratulated if it has rid itself of such places. That Iowa statute was a farce. It was violated openly, shamelessly.

"Our system of legislation is quite different from yours. A great deal of your legislation, I believe, is introduced on the individual initiative of the legislator. There is a tremendous volume not only of legislation but of laws passed. In England, on the other hand, legislation is nearly all introduced by the Government of the day. Practically all parliamentary bills are prepared by an expert, a parliamentary draftsman. We hate to have legislation that cannot be carried out. If a certain department of the Government will be affected by contemplated legislation or will be called upon to enforce it, the head of that department or an expert from it is called in consultation before the bill is offered in Parliament. The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police was called on for his opinion concerning legislation that would in any way involve the police. If he said: 'We cannot enforce that,' his reasons being such and such, the bill or clause would be dropped. In England we have much less legislation introduced than you have here in America, and we have very few dead laws.

Must Maintain Respect for the Law

"Any nation other than an autocracy can protect itself against lawlessness in only one way—it must maintain respect for the law. If there is not respect for the law an army of police is needed and the nation is on the high road to autocracy.

"Four things are essential if respect for the law is to be maintained. First, only such laws should be passed as are enforceable and as are intended to be enforced. Second, the judiciary must be above any suspicion of political or other influence. Third, the police must be efficient. Fourth, punishment must be quick, certain and definite.

"In England it is the policy to keep the judiciary and the police out of the political arena. Our Judges are not elected but appointed, holding office for life. These are positions much coveted by distinguished barristers. In recent years a number of labor men have been appointed Magistrates, and their administration of the law has been up to traditional standards.

"Our heads of police are paid, but otherwise they are like the judiciary, being appointed and holding office for life. You cannot expect to have an efficient police unless there is continuity in office for the head man. If a good man is appointed, it is inevitable that he will make enemies by tightening things up, putting inefficient men off the force, etc. If a discharged policeman can run to the Mayor and complain, or have a politician carry his complaint for him, the head of the force will worry more about holding his job than he will about efficiency.

Punishment Must Be Definite

"I have said that punishment must be quick, certain, definite. It is because it is all three of these things in England that, just to take one class of crime, I believe our murder rate is so low. Of the 63 murders committed last year in England the police brought to justice 56 of the murderers. Only the shortest time consistent with justice is allowed to elapse between arrest and trial and between conviction and punishment. Quick punishment for the guilty is more repressive than severe punishment. It brings home the relation between cause and effect. There is only one appeal in England. And punishment must be definite. I believe that the so-called 'prison-reform' movement may be an influence on the great increase in crime in this country. It is my observations on the matter that I am going to speak about plainly when I return home. We have well-meaning fanatics in England and unless their activities are properly directed by public opinion the 'prison-reform' movement will do great harm.

"I have noticed that in America this movement is largely in the hands of women. They brim over with humanitarian sentiments, but they have little real knowledge of the criminal classes.

"Aside from my eight years' experience in Scotland Yard, I served 12 years as prison warden and five years as secretary to the prison board and chief inspector of prisons. I know, and know well, more criminals than the majority of people, let us say.

"It is most important that the criminal class know that if they are sentenced they shall not have their sentence watered down by boards of laymen.

"As yet we only have the indeterminate sentence in England for those committed to the Borstal Institutions, reformatories for offenders between the ages of 16 and 21, and for criminals sentenced to preventive detention. I have there seen time and again how people who have no professional knowledge of criminals are impressed with smooth talk. If we developed that system in England we would find that the convicts who would be the most persuasive with boards of pardon would be the men most dangerous out of jail, the men with the smooth tongue, the crafty men.

Alcohol Blamed in Sing Sing Survey

"Consciously or unconsciously, the maximum sentence always has its influence on the Judge's mind. It makes him fix a sentence as the minimum lower than he would do if the sentence were determinate. Yet in the majority of cases the

Seeing St. Louis With King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium

OBSERVATIONS IN SOUVENIR BOOK OF TOUR OF AMERICA

"No City Loved Us More Nor Came More Liberally to Our Aid," Belgian Writer, Who Accompanied Royal Party Asserts in Narrating His Impressions of Their Welcome to the City.

Procession in Which Thousands of School Children Greeted the Visitors, the Scene at Washington U. and Banquet at Hotel Statler, Among Subjects Dealt With in Detail.

ST. LOUIS members of the Reception Committee which had charge of the visit of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium to this city in October, 1919, are hoping to be favored with copies of the handsome souvenir describing the American tour of the royal party.

This book, entitled "The Tour of the King of the Belgians Through the United States of America," was printed by G. Van Oest & Co. of Brussels and Paris. The book was written by Franz Ansel, a Belgian writer, who accompanied the royal party in the official capacity of "reporter and chronicler."

The following translation from the French is part of a chapter entitled "From the Banks of the Mississippi to the Shores of the Susquehanna," and follows a chapter describing the Southwest, from which King Albert came to St. Louis:

ST. LOUIS—"CITY OF RED BLOOD AND BLUE BLOOD."

Tuesday, Oct. 21.—The great plains and deserts are behind us, in the West; the special train now brings us back to the thickly settled districts. Sheds, immense warehouses, great mountains of coal and enormous piles of wood come without interruption, one after the other, as though there were heaped up there the entire production of the mines and forests of this great country. Here, apparently, is the knot of the threads of the railways and water routes which stretch out through the United States, the hub of that giant wheel whose many spokes reach out to Chicago, New York, San Francisco and New Orleans.

Name Recalls Distant Shores

Everything announces the approach of a great city and a powerful inland port, and the sky of this clear morning is mottled with ripples of smoke. St. Louis! This name recalls to us distant shores, those of the old "Meschacebe," extolled by Chateaubriand, those of the mighty river whose muddy waters carry along floating islands, peopled only with rose-colored herons.

Now that we are returning from California and New Mexico, St. Louis seems to us to be very near to Europe, and on entering the city we return at once to a land whose customs we have not encountered for about three weeks. The landscape, the atmosphere, the physiognomy and other things—all take on a new appearance, less strange, more in conformity with Occidental standards; for the Mississippi cuts America in two, and this water boundary sharply separates from the East the young and less-developed Far West. This is a phenomenon which certain Europeans have been wrong to overlook; they have ever been too eager to generalize, when passing judgment on the United States.

St. Louis owes its origin to the French colonists, and if the old "Meschacebe" has lost that proud solitude which Chateaubriand exalted, if the large, straggling village of 5000 souls which one saw there three-quarters of a century ago has become a tremendous city, the fourth (sixth) in the United States, St. Louis retains none the less from its French origin a certain gaiety, alertness, amiability and generosity, which blend without discord with its fresh and robust youth, its determined character, adventurous and daring—briefly, the harmony of characteristics which one sums up in two words, "red-blooded Americanism." This red blood, which still circulates in the arteries of St. Louis, comes by way of the Missouri River; but the railroads which come from the East mix with it the "blue blood" of the old races, and this happy fusion gives the city a unique character.

City One of the Most Generous

The great city of Missouri is distinguished by the earnestness with which it came to relieve our distress. No city loved us more, nor came more liberally to our aid. War organizations here were many and flourishing—Liberty Loan drives, Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Belgian Baby Day, Red Cross Motor Corps—in fact, it would take a page to enumerate them all. Among our war godmothers this metropolis was one of the most generous. Her heart was moved at once by the news of our trials, and there is not a single woman, working girl or fine lady, who has not sewn clothes for the afflicted of Flanders—clothes which they gathered and sorted in 167 workshops in six [illegible]. Never will be a visit more deserved than that with which the King and Queen honor St. Louis today.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

About 20 years ago the King went through the city under the pseudonym of John Banks. St. Louis would hardly be able to recognize "Prince Albert," and the sovereign, for his part, recognizes the city only with difficulty, for it has grown with fantastic rapidity. And among the enthusiastic crowd which has come to acclaim our sovereigns there are undoubtedly old settlers whose minds still retain the memory of the straggling town, with its little low houses, sitting, and waiting its opportunity on the bank of a lonely river.

The royal train stops at the Lindell and Union yards, in the same place where President Woodrow Wilson recently stopped at St. Louis. A flourishing of flags greets the arrival of the train, and a tremendous shout bursts out from this great, grassy clearing, which begins in the very heart of the city and extends to Forest Park. Boys, girls and small children are massed there in thick swarms, expressing their delight by gestures, applause and cries; for, like that of Los Angeles, the parade which is about to start will be entirely a review of school children.

Impression of Residences

On their descent from the car the sovereigns are received by Gov. Gardner and the Mayor of the city, while the Jefferson Barracks Band plays the "Brabanconne," and a detachment of troops stands at "present arms."

The automobiles start off immediately, for the minutes of this visit must be frugally counted, and the procession at first goes along a succession of smiling avenues, planted with beautiful, yellowish trees, where cottages of the English style, whose black ivy and Virginia creepers cover the red-brick facades, alternate with colonial mansions with their large colonnaded verandas. Certain of these structures betray care about the effect and an effort to catch the eye which are rare in America, and these picturesque contrasts in which the diversity of races who populate St. Louis is brought out, is also found in the faces, so singularly diverse in characteristics, seen in the compact multitude which overflows the sidewalks everywhere, and almost overwhelms with its billowy crowds the automobiles of the royal party. Mulattoes with thick lips are near girls whose ruddy complexion is framed with luxuriant golden hair, such as one believes belongs only to the fairies of old English ballads, and to their cousin, Melisande. These diverse sights sum up the charm of St. Louis, a city of harmonious contrasts, a mixture of Creole languor and American vivacity.

The royal procession now follows the wide thoroughfares of Forest Park, one of the most extensive "fresh-air preserves" from which the city drinks in oxygen. It was there that the St. Louis Exposition was held. Widower of this short-lived city, the park, whose immense grass plots stretch out as far as the eye can see, would seem today strangely isolated, were it not for the hedge of spectators which line the avenues; and one looks there in vain for the forest from which it derived its name, the memory of which makes the clumps of trees which one sees here and there appear insignificant. But what a beautiful place for sports is this expanse of turf!

All of a sudden, after a short stop in this solitude before the Jefferson Memorial, a charming sight halts us. On the summit of a slight hill, Washington University throws in silhouette its Gothic battlements and English manor roofs, while at the foot of the building, massed on the wide steps, groups of women clad in white, their heads covered with long, red veils, seem like a great parterre of flowers. They are the ladies of the Red Cross, who thus form the familiar symbol of their powerful organization. Others, holding extended on the steps three bands of black, yellow and red silk, form the design of a great Belgian flag.

Reception of Washington U.

The procession turns in front of the flight of steps of the great edifice, where all the associates of the war organization are assembled, wearing the uniform of their orders. They make up a great crowd, through which the automobiles are able to pass only with difficulty, a multi-colored mass, from whom come resounding cheers, a frenzied waving of starry flags and a vibrant clapping of hands. As in the most momentous hours of the war, the noble heart of St. Louis, during this historic moment, beats with swift and feverish rhythm. The procession stops for a moment, and Miss Ada Johnson, daughter of Mr. Jackson Johnson, presents a bouquet to the Queen, who presses the flowers to her breast, as though, in a gracious moment of gratitude, she were pressing the city to her heart.

Just now the route runs along the crest of the rising ground on which Forest Park is situated, and from which one can see the immense city fade, to infinity, into the distance, a confusion of roofs in a haze from which stand out high steeples, like masts on the open sea. Here is the Palais des Beaux-Arts, where an equestrian statue of the King who gave his name to the city dominates the vast panorama. There is a group of students who, as our sovereigns go by, beat their drums with all their might, while a platoon of young women execute a military salute. But the autos go on rapidly. Finally, one sees the zoo, where antelope and buffaloes graze peacefully behind their iron fences—the Shelter House, pleasing remnant of the World's Fair that has vanished, whose light arcades, situated on a stretch of flowery lawn, frame a soft horizon—then the last stretches of the park, which give way to the first houses.

The procession goes into the city, preceded by a squadron of mounted police, sabers unsheathed, who gallop along at a swaggering gait. Each car of the royal party is flanked, left and right, by two motor cycle police, who carry another in a side car. This display of forces astonishes. The parade, from start to finish, is but an explosion of enthusiasm, a delirious tribute, a wild chorus of acclamations, to which all the school children of the city add the shrill notes of their cheers.

Imposing Buildings Are Noted

A succession of imposing buildings follows without interruption. There are the Municipal Theater, the College of St. Francis Xavier (St. Louis University is evidently meant) the new Roman Catholic Cathedral, whose high steps cannot be seen because of the compact mass of children who wave in welcome an immense Belgian flag. As we approach the center of the city

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

The Lawrence Review.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE review of the prohibition situation by David Lawrence, in your issue of March 12, was interesting but the statements, mostly from interviews with Prohibitionists, can hardly be called unbiased. All of those quoted except Capt. W. M. Stayton, were drys. The first misstatement in the review was that stating that "two-thirds of the United States was dry, prior to the passage of the Amendment." Up to 1920 there were only 16 'bone dry' states in the union which had laws similar to the Volstead Act. There were 17 states where public drinking or manufacturing liquor in the home was not illegal. All of those so-called prohibition States were, as a rule, small in population. Before prohibition went into effect there were 16 wet states, comprising all of those with large populations. According to the 1920 census these wet states contained a population of more than 48,000,000 people, almost half the entire population of the country, who were never permitted to vote on the question at all.

The review concerns itself with hard liquor, which was about one-tenth of the intoxicants consumed in the country. Beer and wine constituted the bulk of consumption. The review attempts to show the lessened consumption of liquor by citing the small withdrawals of liquor from bonded warehouses. Everyone knows this is but a fraction of the liquor consumed today. The liquor used now is smuggled, made in the home, or moonshine. There is no accurate method of determining the amount.

It states that out of 150,000 physicians, only 30,000 or 40,000 want prescriptions. In Indiana and other States there are laws prohibiting physicians from prescribing liquor. A poll conducted by the American Medical Association showed the majority of physicians believe alcohol to have medicinal value. In the judicial part of the review, the number of defendants convicted is given but no mention is made of the number of cases lost by the Government. The review attempts to show that the fines collected equals the expense incurred by the prosecutions and in some cases leaves a profit. No mention is made of the additional expenses required to prosecute these cases. The fact that the Government loses approximately $500,000,000 a year in revenue is almost ignored.

W. F. BRASHEARS.

Russian and Other Debts.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ACCORDING to published reports our Government refuses to recognize the Russian government until they pay the debt they owe the United States. It seems that some of the other Governments might be made to see the light as well as Russia. It seems if they would pay us, our country would witness a period of prosperity which would awaken industry in the remote and undeveloped sections and would result in greatly increased trade.

W. W. REYNOLDS.

Prosperity Here.

WHEN men like George M. Reynolds, chairman of the Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago, says: "We are so much better off than the rest of the world that it is hard to be downhearted. And our condition is improving all the time in spite of disturbing influences from abroad. The farmer's condition is improved and he is buying more goods. Industrial activity is increasing, and the tendency of prices is upward. People don't raise prices when they are not selling."

And this from Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation: "The present demand for steel products in the United States and in many of the foreign nations is remarkable. It exceeds the expectations of the most sanguine a year ago. Demand for domestic uses and for purposes of export is equally good. Bookings on hand are unusually large, payments are prompt, prices are firm"—then we must realize that prosperity is here.

R. G. Dun's Review, Babson's Statistical Reports, Federal Reserve Reports and similar nationally recognized trade barometers all bear out the accuracy and justification of these statements. This trade stability and prosperity is not localized—it is national in scope. Production has increased all the way down the line—farm production, mining, oil, manufacturing.

Miss Antin's Book.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LAST summer on shipboard I read Ludwig Lewisohn's complaint against the treatment of Jews in the United States, entitled "Up-Stream." I have just read a charming book also written by a Jew, which is an admirable and complete answer to Lewisohn, entitled "The Promised Land," by Mary Antin, published 10 years before Lewisohn's book appeared. I commend it to Mr. Lewisohn, to all those who have read his book, and also to all other Americans.

"DISMAL APATHY" IN DEMOCRACY.

David Lloyd George, in the Post-Dispatch of last Sunday, announced in a rather vague manner that people are not yet fit to live in a democracy. The voters of England, especially the newly enfranchised women, he complains, won't vote. Twenty per cent of all the English voters at the time of the November elections, he says "could not be persuaded by personal or public appeal or pressure exercised by three or four great organizations, to walk a few hundred yards out of their way to place a simple cross on the ballot paper that was awaiting them."

"How does the voting compare with democracy in other lands?" Lloyd George asks, and continues: "The voting in the United States of America fluctuates according to the interest excited by the particular election." He thinks that democracy functions better on the whole in America. Lloyd George is wrong. Seventy-four per cent of the enfranchised voted in England in the November election which raised his doubts of democratic government. In America only 47 per cent voted in the presidential election of 1908, 53 per cent in 1912, 63 per cent in 1916, and in 1920, the first national election after women were enfranchised, 49 per cent, which, on Lloyd George's figures for France, Germany and England, gives America a world's record, along with the number of telephone subscribers and speedy airplanes, in political apathy.

These figures, however, bear out Lloyd George's contention that a clear and simple issue arouses American interest. Woodrow Wilson, in his magnificent speeches of 1916, presented simple and straightforward issues to the country, and the election of 1916 gave back the largest per cent of votes.

Lloyd George explains the sudden power of the Labor Party by the previous apathy of the English voters. Millions of citizens, he agrees with Senator Borah, have no interest in the stereotyped political questions presented by the old parties, but they may conceivably be caught up by the sweeping promises of the Labor Party, and in the next election put it in power.

The conservatives in this country need have no such fear. The total radical votes, Socialist, Farmer-Labor and Socialist Labor, in 1908 was half a million. In 1912 it climbed to 900,000. In 1916, when idealists and liberals voted for Wilson, it sank to 600,000. In 1920 it reached a pinnacle of 1,216,285, which is a pathetic 4.9 per cent of the total vote. An American Labor Party is not yet a respectable speck on the political horizon.

The citizens of St. Louis are hardly responsible for national elections. But Lloyd George says the English "municipal elections tell a still more dismal story. It is with difficulty that the electorate can be cajoled to visit the polling booths where the good governments of the towns in which they breathe, live, toil, enjoy themselves and rest, is being determined."

In the United States, what is St. Louis showing? In the 1920 presidential election, St. Louis, newly enfranchised women and all, should have put heart into Lloyd George. Eighty-nine per cent of the registered voters cast ballots. Then, in the mayoralty campaign of 1921, only 65 per cent voted; in the senatorial campaign last November only 55 per cent voted, and the votes of 29 per cent of the registration passed the recent bond issue, when, if at any time, a clear and simple measure was presented. Eighty-nine per cent of the citizens of St. Louis were sufficiently aroused by the distant and hazy presidential platform to vote, while only 29 per cent voted for a measure that directly and immediately affected the town in which they "breathed, toiled, enjoyed themselves, and rested." And the bond issue was accompanied by nearly as many speeches, newspaper articles and general ballyhoo as the presidential campaign. "Dismal apathy," says Lloyd George.

Next Tuesday there will be an election directly affecting every citizen of St. Louis. Knock out general apathy.

A FIGHTING GOVERNOR.

A fight is about to be staged in New York which is likely to command national attention. The principals are the Democratic Governor, Al Smith, and the Republican Assembly. It is to be a battle of words. The Governor is to do the talking. He is going to stump the State. His object is to arouse a public opinion that will compel the reluctant Assembly to act on a group of bills, known as the administration program, which is designed to save the taxpayers of that State a great deal of money now wasted in overlapping bureaus, costly duplication and unnecessary offices. The Senate has already passed the measures.

The Governor has already made the first speech in his campaign—an address to the Albany Chamber of Commerce—in which he stressed the fact that there was no politics in the program, that the proposition was strictly economic. His statement of the extravagant methods of managing the public business of New York differs only from the conditions in other states in the matter of size. Details are unnecessary. Suffice to say there are 187 bureaus, commissions and boards in New York, with needlessly expensive overhead and an army of employes. The Governor is undertaking to remove much of this burden from the backs of the taxpayers by reorganization and consolidation, and by a budget system, which, among other things, will enable the Appropriations Committees of the Legislature to do their work intelligently. The program proposes the creation of 18 departments to take the place of 187 bureaus, boards and commissions. A saving which will mean substantial relief to the people is promised, as well as greater efficiency and fixed responsibility.

In his consolidation program Gov. Smith is not a pioneer. As War Governor of Illinois Frank Lowden accomplished many betterments of that character. Inspired by Lowden's work, Gov. Hyde attempted a reorganization in Missouri during the first legislative session of his administration. There was a good deal of merit in the program, but, unfortunately, the pressure of partisan politics was imprinted on the specifications. In consequence the partisan politicians of opposite faith, by dwelling on the objectionable features and ignoring the meritorious, had little difficulty in compassing the scheme's rejection in the referendum which was invoked.

The New York situation has been lifted out of the ordinary political slough by the fighting qualities of Gov. Smith. The average Governor, confronted by a politically adverse House, would have temporized, or compromised, or taken his licking meekly and, in a subsequent campaign, explained what great things he would have done excepting for the willfulness and malice of the opposition party. Gov. Smith, apparently, is of stormer stuff. He will fight for his program while there is still a chance to save it and will observe the best traditions of democracy by a direct, personal appeal to the people.

The outcome, of course, cannot be predicted. But if Gov. Smith succeeds in whipping a recalcitrant House into line by the strength of public sentiment he will have pointed the way to the Governors of all the states when they run afoul of politicians who are willing to betray the public interest for partisan reasons. Further, in stumping his State for the issue of trying to introduce economy into public affairs, Gov. Smith is revealing statesmanship of a high order. The cost of government, state and national, is intolerable. It must be reduced. Reduction cannot, or should not, be accomplished by abandoning humanitarian activities or by impairing indispensable institutions with meager rations. Public business must be reorganized. It must pattern after the ablest private enterprise.

STOCKS AND PROSPERITY.

The Daily Trade Service of New York has published a calculation showing the extent of the advance in certain groups of stocks since the low level of 1921. Taking that level as 100 per cent the group of automobile stocks has risen 80 per cent, automobile accessories, 100 per cent; coal, 50 per cent; copper, 72 per cent; electrical machinery, 53 per cent; railroad equipment, 52 per cent; farm machinery, 23 per cent; railroads, 27 per cent; public utilities, 55 per cent; tobacco, 32 per cent; sugar, 80 per cent; steel, 48 per cent.

Investors are not propagandists or rosy hue color artists. They do not bet on stocks without finding what those stocks are earning and without studying the prospects. The high level of industrial quotations shows a high level of earnings, which means either a large volume of business, a wide margin of profit or both. Furthermore, it indicates that industries are not suffering for money and that taxation is not so heavy but that there is still profit in industry, the earnings of which, excepting stock dividends, are taxable as income.

Among the interesting showings is that the coal industry, certainly not starving to death during the war, is doing 50 per cent better right now. While the prosperity of the coal mining industries advances the helpless coal consumers pay the difference.

If Republican efficiency means being held up by the sugar pirates while six months are consumed in the formalities of investigation, then let's have some other kind.

BUY MONK'S MOUND.

The Illinois Legislature by all means should pass the bill introduced by Representative Fekete of East St. Louis, providing for the purchase of Monk's Mound and surrounding land for the establishment of a State park. There has been much discussion of such a measure, and it is gratifying that positive action has been taken toward that end.

Monk's Mound, a few miles north of East St. Louis, is the largest artificial earthworks in this country, and, as such, is an object of scientific interest to the whole world. The slight excavations already made indicate that the immense mound contains relics of inestimable value to the study of primitive Americans. The research should be carried on, and Illinois should recognize a privilege as well as a duty to carry it on under official auspices.

Tariff receipts are now nearing the $2,000,000-a-day mark. What we can't understand about this is how the poor, poverty-stricken people of Europe manage to pay that tax.

UNAUTHENTIC WIT.

To the Mississippi states the soliloquy by "Uncle Henry" in Collier's Weekly on "A Patriot Must Have His Pork," or "What Happened to Baby Budget," is as funny as a hospital. A page of witticism in dialect is founded on the assumption that the rivers and harbors item in the army bill was devised for the sole purpose of distributing pork to Congressmen. Innocent readers will split their sides, perhaps, over such misinformation as the following:

> That's the well-known pork barrel, Barney, an' as fine a specimen as I've ever seen. Oozin' nutriment an' ready to burst forth with a roar like Niagara when the bung is removed. Talk about your tonics! By the time that pork's been distributed an' consumed, every country politician will have taken on weight until he swells an' glistens like an overstuffed frankfurter. What it does to Charlie's budget is a sin an' a shame, for in addition to the $56,000,000, there's another item of $29,000,000 for projects not covered in the main bill.

In the light of the serious purposes to be served by the appropriation, however—the purpose, in general, to acquire more river barges for the Federal barge line and to improve the channel to give the farmers, manufacturers and business men of the Mississippi Valley cheaper transportation—and in view of the fact that business men, not politicians, carried on an organized campaign to secure the appropriation to lighten the transportation burden of a great portion of the country, such humor hardly satisfies the legitimate expectation of something funny.

OFF TO THE MEADOWS.

The peculiar marvel of spring is its capacity to lead the senses over the same rapturous path forever. Every year since earth began the new birth of nature has come with the same periodicity. There are probably more blades of grass than any other living visible object in nature. The meadowlark probably hasn't learned a new tune since man began to wear clothing. The south winds that now woo the sap into the twigs were an old story when man was evolved from the germ plasm. The crocus undoubtedly was born to blush unseen before there were human eyes to see. Yet, as winter's grip recedes, all of these commonplaces, with undiminished voice, on the heart of man their "mighty charm renew."

Wherever it pervades spring warmth is welcome. But spring is more than a temperature. Not all the brick and mortar that can be piled together will ever remove from mortal ken the sense that somewhere beyond the horizon of wall and pavement a revolution in creation is taking place. What a denial of life is it that separates the bird from the blue, the amphibian from the pool and the human from the hills in springtime! Civilization that enforces such restraint is intolerable. Where the heart is—in the meadows and the mountains—there should the man be also!

The veto power is vested in the Governor of Missouri for the purpose of preventing unwise legislation. When Gov. Hyde failed to exercise that power on the tax-reduction bill he failed miserably.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Desperadoes
Sort of have us
On the run;
Scarce a day
Of late
But something
New in robbery
Is done.
Where we used
The James boys
Riding twice
A year at best,
Now we have
A horde of bandits
Making robbery
A pest!

What the trouble
Is, my dearie,
Is not very Far to find;
Once the robber
Was a horseman,
Risking
Vengeance behind.
Pressed by six
Or seven posses,
Each hard-riding
On his trail,
Only superhuman
Courage
In the business

Now it is Another matter:
Having nothing
Anyone
Can raid the country
At his leisure
Near and far.
All he does
Is flourish
Firearms,
Grabbing all
We have in stock,
And resuming
With his Lizzie Disappear
Around the block.

The James
And Youngers
'Til the moon
Rose in the sky,
Here the robbery
Is over
In the twinkling
Of an eye.
Where the old,
Forced the Dalton
Gang to roam
Far away
The modern bandits
Never miss
A meal at home.

So it goes,
My Sweet Luella;
What we often
Have adored,
Say in Robin Hood,
Asks nothing
More than one
Can drive a Ford.
Wherefore,
Since 'tis no
Great matter
Really
To man the wheel,
There are far more
Desperadoes
Than there's Anything to steal.

THE SONNET—II.

A few writers have held, with some plausibility, that the sonnet originated with the Provencal poets from the fact that they wrote in stanzas of seven lines, two of which stanzas united would make the required 14 lines to which the sonnet is limited. Others declare this origin fanciful and give good reasons for finding the birth-place and development of the sonnet in Italy. Certain it is that it existed in the middle ages—early in the thirteenth century—some time before Dante (1265-1321). The earliest sonnet—dated 1200—is generally attributed to Ludovico della Vernaccia, though according to John Addington Symonds the crown of priority must be given to Piero della Vigne, the State secretary of Frederick II of Sicily.

The development of the sonnet was doubtless gradual and there were other poets about that time who endeavored more adequately to adapt its form to the music of mandolin or lute. Prominent among them was Fra Guittone of Arezzo, who died in 1294 and is credited with a total of 217 sonnets. Nearly all of these are of the form known as Shakspearean, except that in the octave there are only two alternating rhymes.

Let us look at a sample of Guittone's work, done over six centuries ago, and see how it appears in the light of the present. Unfortunately, we must content ourselves with a translation by the Rev. Henry Francis Cary (1772-1844) and assume that the original is faithfully rendered. Note, however, that the form of the translation is Petrarcan and not Shakspearean:

Great joy it were to me to join the throng
That thy celestial throne, O Lord, surround,
Where perfect peace and pardon shall be found.
Peace for good doings, pardon for the wrong:
Great joy to hear the vault of Heaven prolong
That everlasting trumpet's mighty sound,
That shall to each award their final bound,
Wailing to these, to those the blissful song.
All this, dear Lord, were welcome to my soul.
For on his brow then everyone shall bear
Inscribed, what late was hidden in the heart:
And round my forehead wreathed a lettered scroll
Shall in this tenor my sad fate declare:
"Love's bondman, I from him might never part."

The sonnet begins with "Great Joy," yet in tone is mighty solemn, as indeed it should be, having for its theme the Final Judgment. "Great Joy" again in the fifth line; yet in the next to the last the poet's fate is sad. I infer he is classed with the goats because he is the everlasting slave of love.—The structure of the sonnet is flawless; the diction harmonizes with the thought; the rhymes are fitly chosen, and altogether the little poem stands in the front ranks.

Sir: Peoria may not be the only city which will seek to change its Main street for a non-best-seller name. But I predict that Quincy, Ill., will not seek a new title for its principal thoroughfare. That thoroughfare was named by hardy New Englanders after their native State—Maine street—and it will remain Maine street.

RELIGION AND EVOLUTION.

W. H. P. Faunce in the World's Work.

THE law of evolution—a doctrine as old as the Roman poet Lucretius, and the New Testament declaration of "first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear"—is now so firmly established among scholars as the law of gravitation. Both of these laws are merely statements of how matter moves and how it assumes its present forms. Neither law sheds any light on ultimate causes or affects the conviction of the church: "In the beginning God." Neither law can be proved. Each is an hypothesis—a "guess," if one prefers to call it so, only remembering it was by guess that Columbus discovered America and that all the advances in human knowledge have been made. Both gravitation and evolution are hypotheses—modes of thinking—ways of explaining the facts—and will be cast aside the moment some better explanation can be found. (Einstein is today questioning the adequacy of the theory of gravitation.) Both are consistent with Christianity or Buddhism or atheism; neither has anything to do with the truth or falsity of any religion. Whether gravitation attracts inversely as the square of the distance or not; whether species were created instantaneously as coins are stamped in the mint, or were created by process, as a gardener grows roses—that has nothing to do with the great fundamentals of religion.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

SENATOR MOSES seems to be having "the time of his life" across the water. One day the news comes that he has decided to make Hiram Johnson President. The next day he decrees that the next President is to be Medill McCormick. Tomorrow he is going to the Grand National Steeplechase and day after tomorrow he is all aboard for Paris. Whom he will make President between the Steeplechase and Paris, even he may not know yet. Perhaps it is just as well that Mr. Moses is 4000 miles away while he is making some of these Presidents for us. And there is no telling where it is to stop; for there are just as queer fish in the sea as any of the other "irreconcilables" he has fished out of it. Maybe he will yet settle on George Higgins Moses for President. We could stand that as well as we could stand some of his other choices. At any rate, with George Moses making Presidents on the other side of the ocean and Harry Daugherty attending to the business on this side, the President crop seems to be safe, whatever the cold wave may have done to the peach crop.

COSMETICS AND COLLEGES.

From the New York Herald.

WITH the solemnity that always attends the announcement of a great discovery, Dean Hoffman of the Northwestern Law School rose in Chicago to announce that last year American girls spent 50 per cent more for cosmetics than they gave to universities and colleges. We accept the statement and refuse to shudder. Faces are more important than colleges. They always have been. They will continue to be long after Chicago has ceased to be the center of world culture. If there were no beautiful faces there would be no wedding bells. The perambulator manufacturers would go into bankruptcy. There would be no little boys to grow up to play left guard and help endow alma mater with a million or two. We must the professors begrudge the care that women, with the eternal desire to be good looking, take of their faces? They ought to have something besides cosmetics as an example of waste. How many pairs of embroidered suspenders, how many $4 neckties, are bought by man in the madness of his vanity? This country has 34,000,000 women above the age of 15. Why shouldn't they spend $76,000,000 a year to powder their noses if they will?

UP IS DOWN AND EAST IS WEST, ALL IN HOW YOU LOOK AT IT, EINSTEIN FILM SHOWS

Picture Demonstration of Famous Scientist's Theory Reveals Time, Distance and Speed All Depend on Point of View.

Up became down and East changed to West, velocity halted motionless, time hastened or lagged, and space shrank or expanded, in a "Gulliver's Travels" of mathematics narrated by film yesterday morning at the Missouri Theater, under the title of "The Einstein Theory." Through arrangements made by the Post-Dispatch with the theater management, a free showing of the four-reel feature began at 10 o'clock. A condensed version will be shown at the Missouri's regular performances during the week.

The attendance, mostly of adults, filled the greater part of the parquet floor. The film was followed with absorbing interest, with frequent exclamations of astonishment or admiration, and with occasional laughter at some fantastic illustration. Prof. Albert Einstein's picture, shown at the conclusion, was greeted with a round of applause. The exhibition dealt with the more popular aspects of Prof. Einstein's thought; but toward the end there was a fleeting dip into metaphysical abstrusities.

Film Made in Europe.

The film, originally made in Europe, was edited for American use by Garrett P. Serviss. Captions, after the fashion of the movies, have been substituted for what was formerly a long lecture on the screen.

The text began by reminding us of the declaration that only 12 living men can comprehend Einstein's theory, and by offering definitions of "relativity" as meaning "relationship of" or "dependency upon." Everything in the universe is relative, the exposition continued. The relativity of power was illustrated by showing first a man digging with a spade, and then a steam shovel in operation. A battleship bore the caption: "If Fulton saw this ship he would say it must sink—thousands of tons of steel afloat." The horse was contrasted with the automobile, a ferry with a suspension bridge. A speeding locomotive was shown with the title "Thousand-league boots," and the magic carpet of the Arabian Nights was realized in the airplane.

"Huts We Build Today."

With the captions, "Huts We Build Today," was shown a view of the skyscraper district of New York, with the Woolworth tower soaring aloft. Miracles of the past which have become commonplaces of the present were illustrated—the typewriter, phonograph, cinema camera, telephone, radio and X-ray.

Next, in a circle of light, was shown a stick apparently bent at the middle. It proved to be the familiar pencil placed in a glass of water to exemplify the refraction of light. Another circle of light, against a black background, appeared white. When the background was changed to white, the circle appeared gray. These phenomena were grouped as "deceptions of the senses."

A man was shown briskly tramping on a moving canal boat. As a camera placed on the boat snapped him, he was walking towards the rear of the craft. But as a camera on the bank filmed it, he remained stationary, for all his pedestrianism, with reference to a cairn on the shore.

"A Journey Into Space."

Then the earth was left behind, as the spectators followed a pilot who entered a huge gun and was shot into cosmic space in a bullet. When the traveler halted millions of miles away, it was found he had lost all sense of direction. A tower which, to one at its base on the earth, always pointed upwards, was seen, as the globe revolved, to point successively in every direction. Captains of two ships, one at the North and the other at the South pole, raised their flags; to the observer in space it was clear that one flag went up and the other down. "The compass is useless," read the caption; "No East or West."

Relativity in Fall of a Ball.

Motion diagram exhibited relativity in the fall of a ball from a tower. To one standing beneath the ball descended in a straight line; to one stationed in space, it described a wide arch, due to the motion of the earth. A cannon ball shot straight into the air seemed to the gunner to fall at its starting place; but its real motion was a great curve. "What is up and down to you may be sideways to me," proclaimed the text. "Direction is relative," was the conclusion drawn.

So also is size, the film proceeded. What seemed to be a huge bouder appeared on the screen. A moment later it was seen to be a pebble in a man's palm. The earth, as other diagrams expounded, is large compared to the moon and small in relation to the sun; the sun itself is minute when contrasted with Betelgeuse, which has 90,000 times its volume.

Shell Racing Backward.

"Speed is relative," declared a title. A shell was fired from a gun at a velocity said to be 23 miles a minute; then, in a diagram, the shell raced with the earth, whirling in its orbit at 1100 miles a minute, with the result that the projectile appeared to be speeding backwards. Still another clever diagram showed all the planets revolving about the sun. With relation to the pace of Jupiter or Saturn, that of the earth was swift; in contrast to the velocity of Venus and Mercury, it was slow.

However, the lecture proceeded, there is one speed which is absolute—that of light, with a velocity of 186,000 miles a second. "No current can make it go faster or slower," a caption averred. We saw two miniature submarine, plying in tranquil water and then with or against a current. The speeds all varied. But rays of light always had the same rate, with or against the current, or with no current at all.

If pistols mounted at opposite points on the rim of a revolving wheel, or cannon at opposite poles of the earth were fired simultaneously, illustrations were designed to show, the flashes of their discharge would reach a target at the same moment, but one bullet would outpace the other. The projectile from the cannon on the upper surface of the earth would reach the moon 165 hours sooner than the one from the ordnance on the lower side, because the former would have the earth's speed in addition to its own.

Prof. Einstein's Cosmic Yardstick.

Then the audience was introduced to Prof. Einstein's Cosmic yardstick—the 186,000 miles per second which is traveled by light.

Time is not the same for all people, the text asserted, and then were shown two towers, each of which was illuminated at the same moment, as it seemed to a person standing midway between them. But to an observer in an airship it appeared that the light shone a second earlier in the tower it was approaching and a second later in the tower from which it was advancing. "Time," it was explained, "stretches or shrinks in proportion to speed," and then the conclusion was drawn: "An hour for us may be a century on another planet."

Einstein's famous example of a train millions of miles long rushing through space at terrific velocity was illustrated by a diagram, and the length of the train was measured with the light-speed yardstick. According as the light ray moved with or against the direction of the train, its length seemed greater or less than the reality. "Length also varies with speed," announced the text, and "Our mile may be only a few inches on another planet."

Theory of Curved Space.

"Motion, direction, size, speed, time and all measurements are relative," came a message flashing from the screen. "Space is bent," shouted another caption, and then, with diagrams, it was shown how light rays from distant stars are deflected by the "curved space" about the sun, so that the stars, to astronomers on earth, appear to be in positions where they really are not.

The screen proclaimed that to the three dimensions already familiar must now be added the fourth dimension of time. A column of years —1923, 1922, 1921 and so on—was shown streaming away from the earth, ending in the figure 1492. "Columbus is now in the act of discovering America," chuckled a title.

The exposition came to a close with inquiries as to what new forces will be harnessed, and what new energies released, by Prof. Einstein's discoveries, and whether they may not lead to a civilization as superior to ours as ours is to that of the cave dwellers. The questions were left unanswered.

SAYS ALCOHOL AND CRIMES ARE NOT RELATED

indeterminate sentence becomes determinate, the minimum sentence being the one served. In its practical workings you thus have a board of laymen revising the decision of the trial court."

It is interesting to compare Sir Basil Thomson's experience that in England there is no relation between alcohol and minor crime with the report of an investigation made in this country.

Through the financial support of the Rockefeller Foundation, the National Committee for Mental Hygiene established a psychiatric clinic at Sing Sing prison. It began its activities Aug. 1, 1916, and ended them April 30, 1917.

Six hundred and eight adult prisoners were studied by psychiartric methods out of an uninterrupted series of 668 cases admitted to Sing Sing prison within that period of nine months.

According to the report made by the clinic, of the 608 cases studied, 18.9 per cent were found constitutionally inferior, or psychopatic; 12 per cent were found to be suffering from distinct mental diseases or deteriorations. Of the latter group, 14 were described as suffering from alcoholic deterioration. To quote the report:

"Six of the 14 were intoxicated at the time of the commission of the crime, one was partially intoxicated, while one was drinking at the time. It is extremely difficult to estimate the relationship between alcohol and crime. While in many cases no direct relationship between the alcohol and the criminal act can be established, in a not inconsiderable number of cases there is a definite though indirect relationship present. Thus, among the defectives, excessive alcoholic indulgence as a more or less fixed habit was present in 31.6 per cent out of 98 cases; while in the psy was found in any of the other groups, as the recessive use of alcohol."

It is fair to assume that no taint of alcoholism was found in any of the other groups, as the report makes no mention of it.

the walls of the buildings rise to fantastic heights, while, on the sidewalks, the crowd is more dense, and more prodigal of enthusiastic cheers.

Endlessly, the schools of the city send out their children, like multicolored beads of a rosary—little faces, white, brown or black, but kept in homogeneous groups, and not mixed together as in the Western states. But the same enthusiasm animates these little boys and girls, no matter to what race they may belong. Whit, black or mulatto, all greet the automobiles of the royal procession with cheers which burst forth and crackle like rifle volleys.

We are now in the center of St. Louis, with its wide streets, crowded and swarming, whose congestion is reminiscent of New York. Here is the great Hotel Statler, here a luncheon is given the King by the City and the Chamber of Commerce. The great lobby, the monumental stairways and the high galleries of this palace reflect the splendor of the finest marble, lined with surging crowds, who greet the sovereigns with a thunder of acclamation.

A thousand people are already seated in the ballroom, which is most charming, under its frieze of antique bas reliefs, and which is decorated sumptiously with baskets of fresh roses, and where are mingled our colors and starry flags. When the King and his son appear on the threshold of the room a salvo of prodigious cheering breaks forth and lasts until they have taken their places beside the Governor of Missouri and the Mayor of St. Louis.

Exercises at the Banquet.

When silence finally is established, the Archbishop, Mgr. Glennon, after having recalled that another King, also wise and just, gave his name to St. Louis, opens the ceremony by reciting the "Pater." Mr. James E. Smith then asks the Governor to preside over the meeting, and the eloquent Mr. Gardner makes an impromptu address of welcome, of which this extract is noteworthy:

"Tell your people, sire, that Missouri sends them a message. The message is this: that the image of Belgium, glorious Belgium, the Belgium offering her bosom that humanity and liberty might live, the Belgium in retreat, the Belgium all but thrown into the sea, and finally the Belgium triumphant and victorious, by the side of America and their common allies—this image, tell your people, will live in the hearts and minds of the people of Missouri, through this generation and generations to come, even until the day of judgment."

Then Mayor Kiel, with his well-known graciousness, greets the King with these words:

"We recall," he cries, "the little children of Belgium, and we recall the reports of the kindness of the Queen towards these little children; we are happy to see you with us today, and we hope that you understand our feeling of satisfaction."

When the King gets up from the table to answer these touching words, a wild tempest of applause prevents him for a long time from speaking. In an unemotional talk, without undue emphasis, such as the Americans like best, the sovereign expresses his admiration for everything that he has seen in the United States—the tireless activity, the spirit of enterprise, the grandeur of the industrial visions. He remarks that, production can bring prosperity to a country impoverished by war. And finally, in the name of all the Belgians, he proclaims his warm gratitude for the generosity of the city and he hopes that St. Louis may have a happy and flourishing future.

Feeling Aroused by Tributes.

The whole audience, standing, acclaims these virile words. And one feels that the ovations in his honor, in which vibrates the unanimous enthusiasm of a great commercial city, are not addressed to him simply as "champion of the right," but that a good part of these tributes are directed toward a King filled with initiative, an up-to-date ruler, who directs, with intelligent wisdom, the weary and difficult task of our reconstruction. This nation, and this modern ruler, are immediately recognized and appreciated. It could not be otherwise—in America.

This memorable luncheon comes to an end to the strains of excellent music, and a large express elevator takes the King and his suite to the fifteenth floor of the hotel, where the ladies of the city are giving a luncheon in honor of the Queen, who, before leaving St. Louis, has brought to a close a Red Cross drive, by lowering the white flag with its red cross.

The metropolis of Missouri has left with its royal guests, even though their visit has been short, an unforgetable impression, in which are mingled the charms of the city, the warmth of the reception, the remembrance of past generosity and the feverish "Americanism" which throbs in this city of activity. St. Louis breathes opulence, activity, energy, hard work and its every building has astonishing grandeur. The Union Station, where the sovereigns have found their special train, is an edifice that is at once gigantic and magnificent; and, shadowing the vast platform is a colossal factory of 15 or 20 stories, whose countless windows frame the heads of workers acclaiming the departure of the King. Next we catch a glance of the majestic course of the Mississippi, seen under the imposing spans of the three great suspension bridges, in a landscape of water, sky and haze formed by the smoke that the roofs of the buildings and the chimneys of the steamers belch forth.

BELL TELEPHONE RATES TO STAND ANOTHER YEAR

State Public Service Commission's Order Affecting St. Louis Users to Be Effective From Today.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—There will be no change in the rates in St. Louis of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a year, beginning Sunday, under an order today by the State Public Service Commission.

Four of the five members of the commission agreed to the order. Commissioner McIndoe dissented and in a separate report said he believes the company's present income warrants a reduction, but did not specify to what extent.

The order continuing the present rate states that it is the view of the commission and of St. Louis city officials that the present rates should be continued until the Bell company has completed the absorption of the Kinloch properties in St. Louis and has unified the service. When this has been done, the report indicates, a new valuation of the unified properties will be made.

The company's application for continuance of present rates lists operating revenues during the year ending Feb. 28, 1923, of $5,774,671. Operating expenses during the same period were $4,613,761, making a net income for the year of $1,161,910. Cross revenues for three months ending Feb. 28, 1923, were $1,508,728. Expenses were $1,188,425.

The commission estimates that the present valuation of the property is $14,000,000. The company contends that the valuation should be $21,270,000. Based on the company's valuation the net return during the year was 5.46 per cent and 6.02 per cent during the three-month period. Using the commission valuation the return was 8.30 per cent for the year and 9.13 for three months.

COTTON MARKET TRANSACTIONS FEATURE WEEK

Extensive Readjustment of Technical Position Considered Basis—Stock Market Tone Is Reactionary.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"Despite halting speculative markets, news from industrial centers indicates that the activity continues to go forward at an extraordinary rate. Pig iron production is still on the increase, and steel mills as a whole are operating at better than 90 per cent of capacity, with many plants setting new records for all time. Nevertheless, producers are rather falling behind on deliveries, so that considerable business booked for the second quarter will not be delivered until the third, and prices still are rising. Certain natural checks are appearing. High prices and uncertainty as to delivery dates are postponing a number of projects and are causing the railroads to curtail their buying or rolling stock. Equipment makers have, however, sufficient business in hand to carry them well into the last quarter of the year, and automobile manufacturers are working at full speed. Increased wages for both woolen and cotton textile workers confirm other evidences of the pressure of orders in this branch of industry, while an unprecedented demand for oil country goods testifies to prosperity in another section of the country.

"Nevertheless, speculative ardor clearly is dampened. Stocks have shown an unmistakably reactionary tone, and the cotton market plainly has been undergoing an extensive readjustment of its technical position. With no change in the statistical position of the commodity, the bull interest has been abandoning the old crop deliveries, a reaction of some 3 points occurring. Meanwhile there is no possibility of doubting that anxieties over Federal Reserve policies and discount rates have played the leading part in creating this change in sentiment. The significance of the week's conference at Washington and the likelihood of immediate or drastic action by the Reserve banks have been matters of great exaggeration. It is clear, however, that the proper central banking policy is a question which is coming to call for very close attention.

"Speaking broadly, the function of a banking system is to furnish the credit and currency needed to carry on the necessary volume of production and trade.

"Why the official discount rates should not be above rather than below the price of money in the open market is also hard to understand.

"News from abroad has been unusually scanty. Germany's gold loan has only partially succeeded, and the mark has weakened slightly. Less confidence is shown in the stabilization experiment."

Customers rooms in the brokerage houses were practically deserted and wire business also was reported as being extremely slack. Brokers themselves for the most part were disposed to extend yesterday's holiday into next week. Under these circumstances trading activity was at a lower ebb than it has been this year and price movements were about what might be expected under the circumstances. The list as a whole showed no tendency to advance, but on the other hand there was little selling pressure. With the exception of a few scattered issues stocks moved within a fractional range, the changes being irregularly lower at the close. Bonds were fairly active and prices were steady.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"With the London as well as many other foreign markets closed for the holidays, trading in foreign exchange was quiet, and without any particular trend in quotations. Sterling at $4.67¼ was ¼ lower, but French francs continued strong, moving up to 6.67 cents with a subsequent recession to 6.65⅝ cents at which price the net gain amounted to 4¼ points. Italian lire and Belgian francs were also a point higher and German marks advanced to .0047⅛ of a cent as against .0046¾ yesterday. Other European rates were irregular.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a slight decrease in surplus the total standing at $4,899,000. This change was accompanied by large increases in loans and demand deposits. The former gained $81,412,000 while the latter rose $48,484,000. Reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank increased $5,226,000 to a total of $495,917,000."

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review, today says:

"Heaviness in sterling and accumulation and firmness in French exchange were the features of the foreign exchange market during the past week. There were many indications that these movements were closely connected through banking institutions that need leaving buyers of sterling in large amounts at frequent intervals, and the operations were generally regarded as direct support of the French Government. The departure of French exchange wave of the same character in the four days in which it was demonstrated in European markets, heavy buying progressing in Berlin and London, and for the New York market opened for another further gains in this market, reactions occurred after the foreign trading when the European markets were closed. Sterling ruled in steady supply, steadily over 1 cent during the week although there was a temporary absence of commercial bills and the supply came wholly from banking sources. In the intervals of strength there was a fair demand at $4.67 to $4.70, but ended with only a moderate advance for the week. There was a special movement in Belgian francs, which advanced to 5.07, the highest level for the year, trading being subsequently according to banking influences. Italian lire followed the Italian Government to improve the position, and of the week there was increased activity in German exchange, which ranged [illegible]. Brazilian exchange demanded notice. Chilean exchange was strong towards the end of the week reflecting stronger market for silver metal, but the general movement in rates on Shanghai and Hongkong was attributed to speculative operations. Canadian after the firmness late in the preceding week, reacted to a moderate extent.

BRITISH SURPLUS REVENUE GREATER THAN ESTIMATED

Bearing on Budget Prospects Continues to Be Main Topic of Discussion in London—Saving in Interests.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, March 31.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review today says:

"The probable realized surplus in the Government revenue over expenditure and its bearing on budget prospects continue to be the main topic of discussion. Industrialist groups and their press organs are using the certainty of a very large surplus as a lever to argue for extensive taxation cuts. The official year's figures will appear over the week end and the budget follows on April 16.

Tax Reduction Urged.

"The Chancellor estimated for the past year a revenue reduction of £26,000,000 giving a nominal estimated surplus of under £1,000,000. Active revenue in last Saturday showed an excess over expenditure of £18,000,000 and it is obvious that revenue was slightly underestimated and expenditure much overestimated. These figures are, however, no guide. Next year's revenue will decline, as the previous income tax reduction was only to operate effectively during the past year, and although new estimates already produced show a big saving on previous estimates, it is doubtful if any saving will be shown over the current year's actual expenditure. This is despite the fact that the current year included special railway compensation and other non-recurrent items.

"Industrialists are urging that one shilling be taken off the income tax, the abolition of the corporation profits tax and reduction of a penny a pound in sugar and a penny a pint in beer. While insisting that this is possible, from good revenue prospects, and further economies, they have weakened their case by concluding with a recommendation that if these fail the Government should borrow for war pensions and divert motor taxes to revenue, borrowing for road construction, which now is defrayed from the latter. Such proposals receive no support whatever in financial circles.

Saving in Interest.

"A substantial saving was effected this year in interest charges, which cost £20,000,000 less than last year, despite the inclusion of £25,000,000 for service on our debt to you. This reduction is due partly to the conversion of maturing 5s to a lower basis, but mainly to a reduction in the cost of floating debt through the fall on money rates and the consequent saving in the renewal of Treasury bills. Further conversions, no doubt, will be effected this year and renewals of Treasury bills are likely to continue cheap for some time. Saving under this head, however, cannot be regarded as permanent, being dependent entirely on the level of market rates.

Wall Street News and Comment —SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Prices over the greater part of the list moved little one way or the other in the stock market today. Such selling as there was came entirely from the speculative element, which is always anxious to be clear of any commitments when it sees no immediate sign of a renewal of the upward movement. It had little significance as an indication of underlying financial sentiment. Some of the sensitive industrials lost a half point or more and most of the rails were heavy again. This section of the market has not yet got over the disappointment of the February traffic statement returns and the failure of the New York Central directors to raise a dividend.

Marland Oil continued the leader at the close, leaving off over 3 points higher on the day. Its strength helped other oils, especially Phillips Petroleum. In fact, the buying movement in this stock had its effect upon the whole market which hardened all around in the last quarter of an hour and closed steady.

The Bond Market.

Prices moved to little purpose in today's short session of the bond market. There was slight trading interest with the week-end coming directly after a holiday. Liberties moved irregularly but the trend was higher. Illinois Steel debenture 4½s gained almost a point. Among the rails Rock Island general 4s gained almost a point. Among utilities Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s, the new issue, went up more than a point.

Bank of Germany Statement.

BERLIN, March 31.—The statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany as of March 23 shows the following changes: Total coin and bullion increased 8,749,000 marks; gold decreased 2000 marks; treasury and loan association notes increased 200,591,000 marks; notes of other banks increased 15,028,000 marks; bills of exchange and check increased 187,370,441,000 marks; discounts and treasury bills increased 528,750,751,000 marks; advances decreased 8,747,588,000 marks; investments increased 148,661,000 marks; other assets increased 100,290,054,000 marks; notes in circulation increased 682,123,458,000 marks; deposits increased 282,111,013,000 marks; other liabilities increased 29,845,527,000 marks. Total gold holdings 1,004,830,000 marks of which 164,592,000 marks are deposited in foreign central banks.

GRAIN LIST HIGHER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Wheat closed strong at the week end session on the Merchants' Exchange. Low temperature in winter wheat belt was a factor in the buying. All in all it was termed a "cron scare" market. Corn was affected by wheat.

In the cash grain market red winter wheat was in better demand and prices ranged 1c to 2c higher. Offerings were well cleaned up mainly by local mills and rehandlers. Cash corn was steady to 1c higher with most sales at ½c better prices. Local industries took more than half of offerings. Shippers, elevators and local trade secured the balance. Demand for oats was active and prices ranged firm to ¾c higher despite liberal offerings. Local trade, accumulators and shippers bought.

The market opened with wheat and corn fractionally better and ruled at moderate advances in the forepart of session. Trade was not large and some was of evening up variety.

May wheat opened at $1.18. July wheat at $1.13⅝. Sept. wheat $1.12¾. May corn 76c. July corn 77½c, and Sept. corn 77¾c.

The three northwestern markets combined Saturday had 683 cars of wheat, compared with 748 a week ago and 615 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 356 cars, Duluth 135 and Winnipeg 192.

CROP SCARE MARKET FOR WHEAT; PRICES ARE STRONG

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 31.—There was a sharp bulge in wheat prices today. The crop-scare season finally opened and it was the damage reports that touched off the rush to buy and the sharp rise in values. Offerings were light, but the bulge brought out some realizing sales. Shipping demand for wheat was quiet and with all foreign markets except Liverpool, closed on account of Easter holidays, there was a limit to trade. Reports show some increase. Market closed firm at 2@2c higher. May $1.20⅝@1.20⅞; July $1.14⅞@1.15; September $1.15¾@1.15¾.

Traders in wheat gave attention to private opinion here to effect that although nobody could pass final judgment on winter wheat until the end of days of warm weather and numerous showers, the present condition was far from good and that prevailing temperatures during winter are reducing plant vitality. In addition, bullish reports referring especially to Kansas and Oklahoma winter wheat inspired commission-house buying and also led to covering on the part of shorts.

There was also an estimate current that world shipments this week were only 8,800,000 bushels as compared with 13,037,000 bushels the previous week. Talk of cold weather delay to seeding of spring wheat and to opening of Great Lakes navigation counted for much in the buying on the market. There was more or less instrumental in preventing any sizeable reaction from the upward swing of values and export sentiment, which, it was argued, increased the feeding demand and which implied delay to the movement of the world's surplus to the market for corn and oats.

Corn was slow early, but the bulge in wheat caused bulls to become aggressive, and this forced shorts to cover. There was little corn in evidence. Receipts were better than expected. Shipping demand was light. Export trade also was moderate in volume. Market closed ⅞@1c higher. May 74⅞@74¾c, July 76¼c, September, 77¾c.

Oats were affected by the strength in other grains and a good-sized rally was recorded. Some damage reports are being received from the Southwest. Market closed ⅞@1c higher. May 45¼@45¾c, July 43¾c, September 43¾c.

Liquidation by Eastern longs gave provisions a weaker tone. Lard closed 10@12½c lower and ribs 25c lower.

ALCOHOLIC CASES ARE ON INCREASE HERE

City Hospital Records Show Increase of 40 Per Cent Over 1919 and 1920.

Records of the city hospital and city dispensary department show an increase of nearly 40 per cent in alcoholic treatments in the fiscal year closing yesterday over treatments in a corresponding 12 months in 1919 and 1920, during which prohibition became effective here.

In the fiscal year just closed 4528 alcoholics were treated at city hospital and the dispensary clinics, while 3347 cases of alcoholism were recorded in the fiscal year 1919-20. In 1921-22, 4585 cases of alcoholism were treated, a total slightly in excess of the number handled in the year just closed. In 1920-21, the records show 3457 cases of intoxication, while two prohibition years, 1916-17 and 1917-18, show 5748 and 5208 cases, respectively.

Thirteen deaths from alcoholism were recorded in the city since April 1 last, an increase over the three preceding years. The present death rate, however, is far below that of 1916, when 63 deaths were attributed to alcoholism.

All cases of alcoholism are not always recorded as such, due to the injuries suffered by many drinkers in automobile accidents and other mishaps taking preference over their alcoholic condition. It would be practically impossible to accurately check all cases of this nature. There is a noticeable difference in the alcoholic of today and the common drunk of preprohibition times, city hospital physicians say. The drunk of today often has the appearance of having been drugged or poisoned, and is more difficult to diagnose than formerly.

Ability of the drinker to obtain liquor is not alone apparent from hospital and dispensary records, but may be observed daily in the local courts. The police courts have a regular quota of "drunk-on-the-street" cases, in addition to a large number of peace disturbances resulting from drinking brawls. The criminal entering a plea of guilty in the higher courts often attempts to mitigate his offense on the ground of "too much hooch," while warrants charging automobile drivers with operating their cars while intoxicated are not uncommon. In the divorce courts excessive drinking is mentioned in a large percentage of cases against defendants of both sexes, and the same is true in many cases of wife and child abandonment brought to the attention of the Prosecuting Attorney.

More Heat — Less Care

Just touch a lighted match to the asbestos starting ring. The kerosene is turned into gas, which burns with a clean, steady blue flame. The heat is concentrated just where it will do the most good—directly under the cooking.

Is a good-natured husband worth a trip to the store?

NOTHING irritates men folks more than late meals. The only thing that is almost as bad is high fuel bills.

You can time your meals with exactness, and cook for less money than you ever have before, if you will look into the matter of the Florence Oil Cook Stove. This means merely a trip to a near-by hardware or furniture store, where you can see for yourself how this most modern of ranges does its work.

Easy as lighting a match

All you do is turn a lever and touch a match to the burner. The result is a clean blue flame that you can lower or raise as you please. The heat, close to the cooking, is intense. There is no wick, for vapor from the oil is what burns. The Florence is smokeless and odorless.

The economy of kerosene

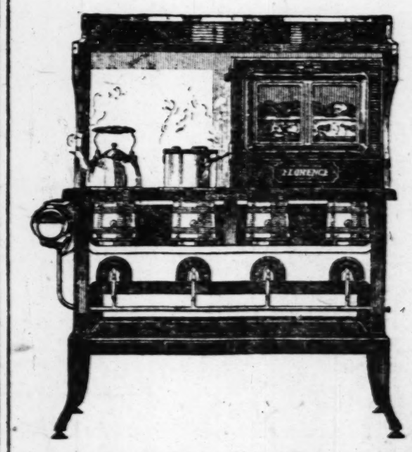
Kerosene is easy to get and far cheaper than gas or coal. You use the Florence only when you need it, for the heat turns on or off in an instant. And it is so easy to regulate the heat that meals just naturally happen on time.

For the modern kitchen

Beauty is not the most important thing about a stove, but why not have an object that is a credit to the most modern kitchen? The mantel back and chimneys of the Florence are lustrous porcelain enamel. The rest of the stove is finished in hard-baked enamel with nickel trimmings.

It is not necessary to take our naturally enthusiastic word for the Florence Oil Cook Stove, because you can prove it for yourself by going to the store—almost any good hardware or furniture store. You might even get your husband to go with you, for he is interested in the matter of your comfort as well as his own meals.

CENTRAL OIL & GAS STOVE CO., Gardner, Mass.



The Florence Leveler

All kerosene ranges must stand level to do their best work. This new Florence Leveler is attached to each leg of the Florence. By turning this the Florence is easily and quickly made to stand firm and level, no matter how uneven the floor.

Are we still selling our daughters?

"TO the highest bidder," it was once upon a time—openly.

Is it the same today—only more naively?

What if the motive has changed? What if it is Mother Love "acting in the best interests of my daughter"—isn't the putting of a man's money before a girl's love but trafficking in the soul of youth?

Wallace Irwin is a writer who knows what is going on in the world; and if there were not grounds for it, he would never hold up the "solicitous" mother and the innocent girl victim to the reaching study he does in his great story, "A TOUCH OF ETERNITY," in the April RED BOOK MAGAZINE.

Nevis Findley, a fascinating bit of creature is the girl in the story. She and Lance Peebles, the son of a very rich man fall in love with each other. A delightful pair they are, and a beautiful romance is theirs, with the approval of all concerned—until the boy's father suddenly goes "broke."

Then steps in the mother of the girl. From the sweet and approving mother she suddenly becomes the hard and calculating.

"Love in a cottage—drivelling idiocity!" she exclaims, demanding an end to the romance.

What do the young folks do? You would never guess. The outcome is something utterly unlike any story you have ever read. Go through the whole drama with Wallace Irwin and you will do some tall thinking on "materialistic marriages."

Other Great Stories

Also features of a distinctive character.

A clever, amusing, but nevertheless effective recipe on how to avoid worry by Thomas L. Masson.

Parties and Weddings Fill Calendar as Drab Days of Lent Depart

Travelers, Who Have Been Away for Past Few Weeks, Rushing Home to Participate in Festivities.

ABRUPTLY, almost before the last Easter anthem is sung, the spring season, heralded for weeks as the time when society, held in check for 40 days, might revive things social without subduing its conscience, begins with a round of gaieties which fill to overflowing the calendar of the next fortnight. Parties and several important weddings will be the topic of absorbing interest, and travelers who have been away for the past few weeks are rushing back to town to participate in the festivities.

The wedding of Miss Mary Bemis, niece of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bemis and John A. Darsie of Pittsburg, Wednesday evening in the Bemis home, 5 Kingsbury place, and the Leland-Ingham wedding Thursday noon, are first on the list of nuptial events, and they in turn will be followed by the wedding of Miss Renza Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Davis Brown of Natchez, Miss., and Edward Holmes Taussig April 10. Although an out-of-town wedding, the ceremony taking place in Natchez, it is of interest to St. Louisans, as the bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Taussig, and will bring his bride here to reside. A party of St. Louisans, including Mr. Taussig's parents, will go South for the ceremony.

Then on April 14, another wedding by which St. Louis will gain a young matron is that of Miss Helene Balliet of Waterloo, Ia., and Walter Mayne. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett C. Clark will go to Waterloo for the event, and Mrs. Clark is to be attendant. Mr. Mayne and his bride will make their home at 743 Heman avenue, University City.

Miss Frances Mabley and F. Leonard Hall will be married April 16 at the Church of the Unity, and on April 18, the King's Highway Presbyterian Church will be the scene of the wedding of Miss Leslie Mathews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Mathews, and Paul Vander Lippe.

Miss Martha Rhodes of St. Joseph, Mo., has chosen April 19 as the date of her marriage to Maxwell Ramsey. The ceremony will be performed in St. Joseph, and the couple will make their home in St. Louis. Later in the month is the wedding of Miss Mary Bolin and Nelson Thomas. Theirs is to be a home wedding in the morning, and they will occupy a new house already in the process of construction, given them by Miss Bolin's father, Charles D. Bolin.

The long list of those returning to St. Louis at this time includes Mrs. Malcolm Thomas, who arrived in St. Louis Friday morning from Santa Barbara, Cal., after a two months' visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester W. Bliss, who have a house there. The Thomases are making their home at the Buckingham Hotel.

Mrs. Louis D. Lawnin of 5138 Washington boulevard, returned Thursday from a pre-Easter visit in New York with her daughter, Miss Julia Lawnin, who attends the Finch School. Miss Lawnin is spending the week-end with friends in Atlantic City.

Miss Emilie Maffitt of 4540 Lindell boulevard, has returned to St. Louis after an absence of two months in Florida.

Mrs. Walter McKittrick and her children, have returned to St. Louis from New York, where they have been this winter, and are at the home of Mrs. McKittrick's mother, Mrs. G. H. Holland, 47 Westmoreland place. Mrs. Holland and her sister, Mrs. Harry Blackwell, are in Santa Barbara, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morrill of West Pine boulevard, have returned from a visit to Hot Springs, Va.

Mrs. Daniel Catlin of 51 Westmoreland place, will return home this week from the South. She is at Jekyll Island, off the coast of Florida. Her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Wintrop Allen of New York, is with her, and Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., of 47 Portland place are also there.

RECENT WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

Prof. and Mrs. Albert Sauveur of Cambridge, Mass., made formal announcement Saturday of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Isabella Sauveur, to George Curtis Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Eaton of 80 Vandeventer place, and brother of Mrs. Raymond M. Spivy and Miss Emily Partridge Eaton. Prof. Sauveur is a member of the faculty of Harvard University.

Miss Sauveur is a member of the Junior League and graduated last year from the Windsor School, in Boston.

Mr. Eaton is a member of the 1925 class at Harvard. He will remain and take his degree in June. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Mrs. Eaton, who has been visiting her son for the last three weeks, will return home in a few days.

News reached America last week of the marriage, in Shanghai, China, March 20, of Mrs. Fredonia Johnson Pratt, daughter of Mrs. Oscar Johnson of 38 Portland place, and McDonald Moss, an American, who has lived in the Orient for several years.

The couple met while Mrs. Moss was touring the world with her small son, David Pratt, and Miss Eleanor Chase, daughter of Mrs. Henry Leverett Chase of Clemens avenue, and while Mr. Moss was returning to his home in Java from a business trip to America. They became engaged at Christmas time and planned to return to St. Louis and be married here this summer.

The ceremony was performed at the home of Dr. Ann W. Fearn, an aunt of the bride, in Shanghai. Mrs. Johnson has been the guest of her sister since last summer. Mr. and Mrs. Moss will make their home in the Orient.

Mrs. Moss was educated at Mary Institute, where she was graduated six years ago, and instead of making a debut went to Shanghai to visit her aunt. She met her first husband, Dr. David Pratt, on board the steamer, and their marriage took place in St. Louis the following summer. Dr. Pratt, who was a member of the faculty at the University of Pennsylvania, died four years ago while on a visit here.

Conspicuous in the betrothal announcements of the week was that of Miss Irene Smith, daughter of H. T. T. Smith of 55 Kingsbury place, and Sidney Y. West of Little Rock, Ark., which was made known informally Wednesday to a few of Miss Smith's friends. Miss Smith is a graduate of Mary Institute and has traveled extensively in Europe. She has served as a Veiled Prophet maid of honor on a number of occasions. Mr. West is the son of Mrs. Benjamin G. West of Little Rock, and will take his bride there to reside after their marriage in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Healy of 4147 West Pine boulevard have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jane Healy, to Vincent P. Ring, son of Mrs. Vincent P. Ring of North Grand boulevard, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Ring and Louis Fusz. Miss Healy received her education in the Sacred Heart Convent, and Mr. Ring is an alumnus of St. Louis University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The wedding will take place in the autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Munn, 4207 Westminster place, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Monday, March 26. Their wedding took place in Lewistown, Ill., March 26, 1873, and they came to St. Louis in 1896. Six of the nine children are living, four sons in Atlanta, Ga., one daughter in Western Colorado and one at home. Although many messages and telegrams of congratulations were received, owing to mourning in the family, the day was spent quietly.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher J. Egan, 5597 Washington boulevard, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dorthy Priscilla Egan, and Arthur Franklin McEwen Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Franklin McEwan, Kingsbury boulevard, several weeks ago, in St. Louis.

Why doesn't everyone wear Ground Grippers?

That's what the fortunate one who wears them thinks. He wonders, too, how he ever got along without them—how he was ever content to wear tight, squeezing, uncomfortable, so-called stylish shoes.

Ground Gripper Shoes are scientifically made to give comfort—such comfort that you, too, will never wear any other kind of shoes after your first pair of Ground Grippers.

They follow the natural lines of the foot and keep the foot shaped as Nature intended. Try Ground Grippers for real comfort.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores, and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

Drifting Into Trouble

Don't join that unfortunate class of people who just drift into trouble because they never take the time to do a little constructive thinking.

Just consider the question of eyesight. Headaches are frequently the first notice of impending eye trouble, yet so many people who suffer from headaches never stop to consider that their eyes may be the source of their headaches. They just drift comfortably along into a serious eyesight complication.

Come to my office tomorrow and have a thorough eye test made. If there is nothing the matter with your eyes, your mind will be at rest; and if you require Glasses, I will furnish the exact lenses you require to correct your particular vision defect, together with frames and proper fitting at a surprisingly moderate charge.

MISSOURIANS AND THEIR ACTIVITIES IN SOCIAL LIFE OF CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—President and Mrs. Harding are working their way northward through a series of welcomes and entertainments in the various Florida cities which they touch that will delay their arrival in Washington until after April 7. Reports from the South are that Mrs. Harding has quite recovered from her recent slight relapse and will be quite fit to make the train journey home.

The other night at the Ponce de Leon in St. Augustine, the President and Mrs. Harding entertained the members of their party at dinner. After the dinner an unreleased film of a popular comedian was displayed and also some views taken of the presidential party on the present trip.

Among the guests were: Brigadier-General and Mrs. C. E. Sawyer; Gen. and Mrs. Charles Dewey; Mr. and Mrs. George Christian Jr., Albert D. Lasker, former Senator and Mrs. Frelinghuysen, Senator Fred Hale Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Schley, Mrs. George Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Woodcock.

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, prominent members of the Missouri colony in Washington, will take possession of their new home, at Thirty-first and Woodley road, before sailing for Sweden, where the Undersecretary has been appointed the American Minister. It is expected that they will leave Washington early in June.

The growing Missouri contingent has received a notable addition in Mrs. Lee Warren Pettit, wife of Commander Pettit. She was Miss Stella Wade Scullin of St. Louis, where her grandparents now reside. Miss Lenore Scullin, her young sister, who has been at school in Connecticut, will come to Washington to spend the Easter holidays with Commander and Mrs. Pettit.

Great interest is exhibited in diplomatic Washington in the forthcoming marriage in Rome of Mlle. Agnese Macchi di Cellers, daughter of the late Ambassador of Italy to America, who is to wed Count Laufranco de Campello, a member of the Roman Senate. Countess di Cellers was an Argentine belle, her family being very rich and powerful there and while in Washington the Di Cellers associated a great deal with the Latin-American diplomats.

The committees of the Missouri Society for the year were announced yesterday by Representative Cleveland A. Newton, president of the society. The personnel of these committees comprises many congressional folk and officials hailing from the Show me State in the capital. They are as follows:

Reception Committee—Mrs. Sarah T. Andrews, chairman; Senator Spencer, Sid C. Roach, Mrs. Helen H. Epperson and Mrs. Otis J. Rogers.

Entertainment Committee—Mrs. William C. Stierlin, chairman; Mrs. C. A. Newton, Mrs. Charles P. Key-

"You've come back, Helen," he said tenderly. "You've come back—the Helen of the sweetheart days. You've never looked so wonderful as you do tonight."

Men Admire Youthful Women---Women of Beauty and Activity

A Vital Message to Those Women—Who Find Themselves "Slipping"!
Whose Husbands Are Losing Interest!
Who Have Never Had Many "Beaus"!

CADOMENE — THE TONIC SUPREME!

Men have ever admired the youthful woman—the woman who keeps her beauty; her sparkling spirit; her keen alert mind; her supreme health and graceful strength. Every day you meet and admire just such women—women who simply seem to glide through life, even though it be filled with cares. No matter how much they have to do; how many children there are to feed, clothe and care for, they seem to do it all so easily, so cheerfully, and never look tired and worn out.

Have the Years Told Upon You?

Have worries and cares made a mark on your youth? Do you long for the beauty, the love, the health, and happiness that were once yours? Take stock of yourself! Is your appetite feeble and do you suffer with indigestion? Are your nights restless and do you get up in the mornings all tired out? Are you listless—devoid of ambition—do you have a feeling of "what's the use" as you grind through the unhappy day? Do your feet drag and does 10 minutes of work make you seek rest—trembling, weak and nervous? Do the joyful cries of children at play make you feel like you want to scream sometimes?

Your mirror will tell you the rest. Have your eyes lost their old-time sparkle? Have those cheeks lost the glowing bloom of youth? Has your once beautiful hair become thin, flat and lifeless; and has your neck and shoulders lost the curves of youth?

Cadomene—The Tonic Supreme!

Cadomene is not just an ordinary stimulant like many so-called tonics. Cadomene builds you up in a permanent way! By aiding nutrition and by building up the blood until it is rich and red, Cadomene aids in the restoration of the nerves, cells and tissues of the entire body. Just a week or two after you start taking Cadomene you should notice the wonderful change for the better. You should notice the sparkle returning to your eyes; the healthy bloom to your cheeks; the sunshine and life in your hair; and the graceful curves to your form. You should notice that you don't seem to get tired any more; that your work is no longer irksome, but a pleasure; that the children don't get on your nerves like they used to; that you eat better; sleep better; feel better. Your husband and friends will be amazed at the remarkable change. Within two weeks, they will remark how much better you are looking. And that's just the start! For when those nerves, those tissues, those cells are completely restored—then you'll know what health, beauty and happiness really mean! Cadomene Tablets are sold and highly recommended by all good druggists—everywhere.

Sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Judge & Dolph drug stores and all druggists.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

PETITION FILED FOR BIG UTILITY MERGER

Consolidation Will Bring Illinois Traction Co. and Studebaker Power Interests Together.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 31.—A petition for the consolidation of the Studebaker Utility interests, represented by the Southern Illinois Light and Power Co., and the McKinley properties, known as the Illinois Traction System, was filed today with the Illinois Commerce Commission.

It is proposed to consolidate these properties under the name of the Illinois Power and Light Corporation. Details of the merger previously have been announced.

The proposed consolidation will bring together under one common ownership and operating organization, one of the largest public utility groups, including the largest continuous traction line electric railway system in the world. The properties will serve 172,000 electric light users, 67,500 gas users and will own 240 miles of street railways and 550 miles of main track electric railways.

The properties to be consolidated are now owned by more than 50 separate corporations, organized under the laws of various states, each of which has been developed largely as an independent property and individually capitalized.

New Financial Plan.

The petition states that as a result of the consolidation, more than 150 different kinds of securities by which the properties are now financed, will be superseded by a new financial plan which merely provides for issuing securities by the consolidated organization to replace those outstanding. In addition, the plan also provides for securing additional capital to meet the rapidly growing demands for power, light and transportation by the territory served.

167 Municipalities Served.

The companies proposed to be consolidated, exclusive of the interurban railways, serve 142 municipalities in Illinois and 25 outside of Illinois. They include 137 electric light plants, 19 gas plants, 20 street railways, 10 heating plants, five water plants and six ice plants in Illinois and 24 electric plants, three gas plants, five street railways and two heating plants outside of Illinois. The electric railways included in the consolidation serve 109 Illinois cities and eight cities outside Illinois. It is proposed to retire and cancel more than $40,000,000 present outstanding securities which are to be refunded by the issuance of new securities by the consolidated company, without any increase in capitalization.

A consolidation of these properties brings together two of the outstanding figures in the development of utility enterprises. Senator W. B. McKinley built the Illinois Traction System, said to be the greatest of its kind in the world. Clement Studebaker Jr., in addition to his largely interested in the public utilities in Southern Illinois.

Companies Included in Merger.

St. Louis Electric Bridge Co., Bloomington & Normal Railway and Light Co.; Chicago, Ottawa & Peoria Railway Co.; Citizens' Lighting Co., Citizens' Pure Ice Co., Clinton Gas and Electric Co., Consumers' Water and Light Co. of Marseilles, Danville & Eastern Illinois Railway Co., Danville & Northern Railway Co., Danville & Southeastern Railway Co., and Light Co. of Marseilles; Danville Consumers' Coal Co., Danville Street Railway & Light Co., Danville Decatur Electric Railway and Light Co., Galesburg Railway, Lighting and Power Co.; Galva Electric Light Co., Jacksonville Railway and Light Co., Kerens-Donnewald Coal Co., Madison County Light and Power Co., Monticello Electric Light Co., Mound City Light and Water Co., Northern Illinois Light and Traction Co., Peoria's Traction Co., Peoria Railway Co., Quincy Railway Co., Urbana & Champaign Railway, Gas and Electric Co., Urbana Light, Heat and Power Co., Utility Gas Coal Co., Southern Illinois Light and Power Co., Bloomington, Decatur & Champaign Railroad; Danville, Urbana & Champaign Railway Co.; Illinois Central Traction Co.; St. Louis Electric Terminal Railway Co.; St. Louis, Springfield & Peoria Railway Co.

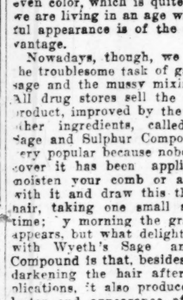
Don't buy just a "mattress"

One of the gravest mistakes in the world is to under-estimate the importance of choosing a mattress. For upon the comfort of your mattress depends the restfulness of your sleep—and on your sleep may depend the happiness and success of your life. You can't be too careful of the mattress you buy. To be safe choose a Red Cross Mattress.

The special Red Cross process of preparing Kapoc from the South Sea Islands makes it non-absorbent and self-ventilating. Even while growing it is safeguarded from dust and contamination by the protecting pod.

Kapoc is germ-proof: It will not harbor disease, neither will it absorb perspiration, which naturally makes the Red Cross Mattress very sanitary. No trouble to turn a Red Cross Mattress as its weight is only a little more than half that of an ordinary mattress. A sun and air bath helps restore a Red Cross Mattress. Simply throw it over two chairs where air and sun can get at it.

You owe it to yourself and family to investigate the Red Cross Mattress. Be sure the Red Cross trademark is on the mattress you buy. It is your protection. At all good dealers or write us. Above all, don't accept a substitute.



Red Cross Mattress untouched by human hands comes in sealed carton.

Begins Tomorrow, April 2

TOMORROW, April 2, the new Buick Flat Rate Labor Charge System for all repair work, will go into effect in the 6 Buick Authorized Service Stations, listed below.

It is a system of standard repair charges for Buick Authorized Service Stations throughout the country—each charge determined by the Buick Motor Company after two years of experimenting to find a minimum average time required for each service operation.

Under this new system, a Buick owner will be quoted the exact amount for the labor charge on the work he wants done, plus the cost of required parts. The cost of each operation has been brought down to the lowest limit, and it will stand, no matter how much more time may have been given to the job.

This new Flat Rate Service is not planned for profit.

It is another step forward in our desire to give such satisfactory service at the lowest possible cost that when a Buick owner is again in the market for a new car, he will always come back for another Buick.

SCRAMBLE FOR U. S. ATTORNEYSHIP HERE ON AGAIN

Job Thrown Open When Former Congressman Rhodes Accepts Federal Appointment in Washington.

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Former Congressman Marion E. Rhodes of Potosi, Mo., who has just been appointed an assistant to the Comptroller General of the United States, is congratulating himself today on having set out his legal and legislative experience in some detail in the congressional directory.

Rhodes' commission as United States District Attorney at St. Louis to succeed the Democrat incumbent, James E. Carroll, had been made out by the Department of Justice and sent to the President for signature when Rhodes received an invitation to call on Comptroller General McCarl. McCarl told him Rhodes said today, that he had been looking through the biographies of retiring Congressmen in the Congressional Directory to find a man who seemed to be fitted for a vacant assistantship in the Comptrollers' Bureau, and had concluded that Rhodes might be the man.

Job Pays $6000 a Year.

After some further conferences he offered the place to Rhodes, who accepted. The position pays $6000 a year, or $1500 more than the District attorneyship, and is held at the pleasure of the Comptroller, who is appointed for 15 years.

Rhodes was sworn in today and will begin his new duties immediately. He will be a legal adviser to the Comptroller General. Rhodes said that he had become convinced on an examination of pending business in the District Attorney's office at St. Louis that it would be unwise to supplant Carroll with a new man at this time. He informed the Department of Justice today that he had decided not to take the St. Louis position and asked that his tentative commission be canceled.

It is unlikely that any steps will be taken to fill the attorneyship till the return of Senator Spencer, who is now in Europe. Spencer had recommended Rhodes for the place over a large number of other aspirants. Rhodes was defeated for re-election to Congress from the Thirteenth Missouri District by J. Scott Wolff, his Democratic opponent, last November.

Spencer Expected to Dictate the Attorneyship Appointment.

The appointment of Rhodes to the position of assistant to the Comptroller-General will revive the hopes of the other applicants for the District attorneyship.

However, when they learned Rhodes was out of the way, they resumed pressing their claims. As Spencer has been favored in the selection of Rhodes, it is assumed that he will be permitted to name the man to be chosen in Rhodes place, but in his absence in Europe there is nothing to indicate who his choice will be.

Backing for Henwood.

It is said the Federal Judges of the district favor Berryman Henwood of Hannibal, who has not actively sought the place, but who is reported to be willing to accept it if it is offered to him. Henwood is favored by many lawyers of the district.

William P. Elmer of Salem, who has the support of National Committeeman Babler, is still considered a possibility. The other candidates are Allan Curry, now an Assistant District Attorney of Poplar Bluff and Blodgett Priest.

"Purple Mask," With Leo Ditrichstein, and "Thank-U" Easter Plays

Openings Tonight at Jefferson and American—William Faversham at Orpheum, "The Love of Su Shong" at Empress.

EASTER WEEK'S emergence from the doldrums of Lent in the theaters gains impetus from Leo Ditrichstein's appearance as a swashbuckling paladin of melodrama in "The Purple Mask," at the Shubert-Jefferson; and from the arrival of a notably successful comedy of the small-town type, "Thank-U," at the American. Both plays are newcomers here, and both open tonight.

National Vaudeville Artists' week will be observed this week in St. Louis variety theaters, and the Orpheum will have as headliner the distinguished actor, William Faversham, in a one-act play by Sir Alfred Sutro, "A Marriage Has Been Arranged." The Woodward Players, at the Empress, are presenting DeWitt Newing's Chinese romance, "The Love of Su Shong."

"The Purple Mask" is an adaptation from a French play, "Le Chevalier au Masque," by Paul Armant and Jean Manoussi. Ditrichstein presented it in New York as long ago as January, 1920, but returned soon to his familiar philandering roles. The star has the part of a daredevil bravo engaged in a plot to depose Napoleon Bonaparte and restore the Bourbons to the throne of France.

At the time of the New York production, the play was pronounced "the most brazenly theatrical piece which has ventured to display itself here in a quarter of a century"; but it was added that "it would be perjury to deny that it is wildly exciting. There is an Arsene Lupin plot, made brave and gay with the fine manners, long pistols, mantling cloaks and mouth-filling verbiage of the early nineteenth century. • • • Ditrichstein plays the reckless Chevalier, with just the right mixture of swagger and insouciant serenity."

The village Christian spirit, which looks up to the underpaid pastor one day a week and scowls down upon him the other six, is lambasted in "Thank-U," which was written by Tom Cushing and Winchell Smith the latter being co-author of "Lightnin'." The play ran a season in New York, beginning in October, 1921, and comes here from an engagement of 25 weeks in Chicago.

The original cast is promised. Harry Davenport plays the downtrodden preacher who gets the worst of it from his flock until the principles of big business are brought to his defense. Edith King plays his niece from Paris, and Frank Monroe has the part of a blustering millionaire. Others in the company are Donald Foster, Phyllis Rankin, George A. Schiller, John Seymour, Herbert Saunders, Joan Shaw, Lesslie Palmer, Phil Bishop, Conway Sawyer, Helen Judson, Frederick Malcolm, George N. Price, Elisha Cook Jr., and Frederick Maynard.

"Yellow Jacket" a Benavente Work, Savant Avers

NEW YORK, March 31.

PROFESSOR of Latin literature in the University of Madrid is Don Julio Cejador y Frauca. At odd moments he whittles away at a history of his native drama. Volume 14 has just reached the Public Library here, and the end is not in sight. Don Julio owes his prominence in this story to an anecdote told with great relish by his fellow-countryman, Don Jacinto Benavente, dramatist, who won the Nobel prize for literature in 1922, and who left Sunday night for Mexico City, after a week's visit in New York.

Back in 1914, at the Fulton Theater, was presented a play called "The Yellow Jacket," by two young Englishmen, J. Harry Benrimo and George C. Hazelton. It was a fantasy of life based on the technique of the Chinese theater.

John Garrett Underhill, who has translated the plays of Benavente, bought a copy of "The Yellow Jacket" in 1916 and mailed it to Don Jacinto at Madrid. Don Jacinto wrote back that he was delighted with the piece and would like to translate it into Spanish. Underhill went to Hazelton and obtained the rights for Don Jacinto; he also co-operated with Hazelton in building a production from odds and ends gathered in Mott street, which was shipped to Spain. In the meantime Max Reinhardt staged "The Yellow Jacket" in Berlin, and Stanislavsky did it at the Moscow Art Theater. It was also given in London. The play had become an international favorite before it was produced at Madrid in the Benavente translation.

AFTER bidding goodby to Don Jacinto, Underhill and a World reporter went to the Public Library and obtained Vol. 13 (1920) of the learned Don Julio Cejador y Frauca's massive history of Spanish drama. Underhill turned to the 50-page essay on Benavente and pointed to "La Tunica Amarilla," printed in italics midway in the chapter.

"'The Yellow Jacket,'" he translated rapidly, "is the second part of Benavento's 'Bonds of Interest,' his principal attempt in the theater of the fantastic type. In this second part he has set upon the stage, treated with still greater frankness, the type of character best suited to Benavente's genius.

"In this field he is a master, without any peer. He does not dare face the real world squarely, a world which has suffered sufficiently at the hands of the playwrights and which has been falsified with theatrical devices. He presents his thoughts in humorous fashion, with his actors as players in a fantastic Chinese world infantile, primitive in form. In this drama the sportive, mocking genius of Benavente has full sweep, and he is at his psychological and fantically satiric best."

THE press agent who wrote the advance notices for "La Tunica Amarilla," Don Julio goes on to say, credited the piece to two Englishmen named Hazelton and Benrimo. Don Julio tells the world he may be a professor, but he knows a hoax when he sees it.

William Faversham in "A Marriage Has Been Arranged."—Orpheum

"This device of calling the piece a translation," Mr. Underhill read from Don Julio's pages, "literally smells of hoax, for the comedy throughout is reeking with the satiric scoffing of Benavente's mind. His humorous, mocking, fantastic turn appears in 'The Yellow Jacket' more than any other of his works. It is conceived by Benavente with all his pungent wit, penetrating irony and childish sallies."

Underhill says the Benavente translation of "The Yellow Jacket" is exactly literal, with nothing added or subtracted from the play. Don Jacinto smiled as he left for the train. "Don Julio's history," he said, "proves that there is no such thing as national literature. Any piece well translated can fit into the literature of another country."

"Is Don Julio an authority?" he was asked.

"He is a very brilliant scholar."

Romance and Thrills on Easter Film Programs

"Vanity Fair," "Down to the Sea in Ships," "Safety Last," "The Glimpses of the Moon."

A NEW screen version of Thackeray's masterpiece of nineteenth century fiction, "Vanity Fair," is the week's feature at the Delmonte. It is Hugo Ballin's picturization of the novel, a Goldwyn release, starring Mabel Ballin. Mrs. Fisk made a screen adaptation of the Langdon Mitchell play, "Becky Sharp," some years ago, but Ballin's production follows the novel closely and has the advantage of having been made with every latest mechanical and lighting device of pictures at his disposal.

Technically, there are four leading men. At the head of these, on account of his long years of experience on the stage and in the silent drama, comes Hobart Bosworth. He acts the role of the Marquis of Steyne, a part which he has acted on the speaking stage. The George Osborne of the cast is Harrison Ford, a screen recruit from the legitimate stage who made his first picture appearance with Fanny Ward in "The Crystal Gazers." He recently scored a hit in the screen version of Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead." George Walsh, brother of R. A. Walsh, the director, plays the part of Rawdon Crawley. In his previous screen appearances he has been cast for roles which called for athletic prowess and daring feats. Capt. William Dobbin is played by Earle Foxe, a young actor who made his screen debut with Griffith and has since acted important roles with every big producer in the industry. The Joseph Sedley of the cast is played by Willard Louis, a San Franciscan, who started his stage career with Eleanor Harrigan. His stage sister, Amelia Sedley, is played by Eleanor Boardman, the young woman recently selected by Goldwyn out of 2000 applicants in New York City and given small roles. Miss Boardman made such a hit in Marshall Neilan's "The Strangers' Banquet" that she was given the present role in "Vanity Fair." Other members of the cast are Laura La Varnie, William Humphreys, Robert Mack, Tempe Pigott, James Marcus, Otto Lederer and Frank Hayes.

"Down to the Sea in Ships," a Hodkinson special production directed by Elmer Clifton and widely acclaimed by critics elsewhere as one of the most beautiful sea pictures ever filmed, opens a week's engagement at the Pershing today.

This is a romantic and spectacular picture based on the now almost extinct industry of whaling. Many scenes are laid in the quaint old whaling town, New Bedford, Mass., and all costumes and accessories hark back to the days when whal-

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

RECENT acquisitions of the Richardson Memorial Library at the City Art Museum are rapidly enriching this collection of reference and enabling it to take a prominent place among the representative public libraries in the country. On March 27, 1915, a month in advance of the opening of the Richardson Library, its first gift of a generous number of fine volumes, including the double folio "Galerie de Florence et Du Palais Pitti," was made by William K. Bixby. Since that time, Mr. Mallinckrodt, Mr. Koehler and other public-spirited lovers of art have made generous contributions of rare and beautiful books of art reference.

At the present time, attention might be centered on the 18 handsome catalogs of the paintings, sculpture, bronzes, porcelains, tapestries and art objects in the great collection of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, which books were obtained by the library during the past year. These catalogs well illustrate the elegant style in which all affairs were handled by Morgan. Of each of the 27 volumes of the series, 150 copies were made. They were published privately by Mr. Morgan for personal distribution and private circulation. With no restriction in money expenditure in the compilation of these volumes, no pains were spared by the bookbinders, typographers, photographers, lithographers and editors to make the finished books as great treasures in themselves as those which their pages record.

Volumes 18x21½ Inches.

The three volumes of the "Catalog of Paintings" are the largest in size of those acquired by this library. They are bound in full morocco, with elegant gold tooling, while the covers are finished inside with heavy, dull green moire. They are printed on Dutch handmade paper, and bear the mark of Zaehnsdorf, the binder. The catalogs cover the entire number of paintings in the Morgan collection, including those at Princes Gate and Dover House, London, as well as those in America. A number of color reproductions of Morgan's favorite famous masterpieces embellish the already gorgeous books. Each of these volumes is 18x21½ inches in size, with a proportionate third dimension, and weighs 35 pounds. The introductions to these books are written by T. Humphry Ward, and the descriptive notes and biographical sketches have been written and compiled by W. Roberts.

The catalogs of "Antique Greek and Roman Bronzes, Old Gold and Silver," is in one volume, while that of "Bronzes of the Renaissance" is in two. All three books are uniform. They are 15x19½ inches in size, bound by Petitot in three-quarters morocco. The catalog of ancient Greek and Roman bronzes was compiled by Sir Cecil H. Smith, who wrote the interesting introduction and descriptive notes, while the latter two volumes were prepared by Dr. Wilhelm Bode, Director-General of the Royal Museum in Berlin. The opinions of these famous connoisseurs and authorities are enjoyable and enlightening, and thus add reason for a literary interest in the books. A great number of the objects here catalogued have since been dispersed, the finest and best of which are now owned by Frick, who is said to have paid $80,000 for a single object.

Books Are Works of Art Themselves.

Magnificent reproductions of the illuminations and bindings of the documents recorded in the "Catalog of Manuscripts and Early Printed Books" which is in four volumes, make these books extremely beautiful works of art. They are bound in three-quarters deep red morocco by Riviere & Co. Alfred W. Pollard, of the British Museum, in collaboration with Stephen Aldrich and D. Gordon Duff, has succeeded in giving through his short descriptions a wide, panoramic view of the whole field of medieval manuscript.

The Richardson Library is fortunate in acquiring these treasures which are not only extremely valuable from the standpoint of their original purpose of recording one of the greatest collections of works of art ever known, but also they will be of great value to students of bookbinding, illustration and typography. The luxurious quality of every phase of their compilation will always symbolize the grandeur of the spirit of the man who is responsible for their existence.

THE annual exhibition of work from Taos, N. M., will be installed in the Kocian Galleries on April 2. This is a show which is invariably anticipated with great pleasure by many St. Louisans who are familiar with the work of numerous artists from that colony. Special interest will attach to the entry of Walter Ufer, who has suddenly been making such strides in the world of art. It was his painting entitled "Hunger" which excited such interest and controversy at the Second Retrospective Exhibition of the Art Institute Alumni Association in Chicago this past winter.

THE City Art Museum was visited last week by Gari Melchers and Leonard Ochtman. Mr. Melchers, who is represented in the museum by his painting "Vespers," was returning East from Jefferson City where he has been installing his four portraits painted to hand in one of the capitol buildings. Mr. Ochtman, whose painting "Frosty Acres" is so well known, was returning home from Kansas City, where he had visited the galleries of a dealer during a large exhibition of his works. Both artists were greatly pleased with the St. Louis Museum and hope to pay it a longer visit at some future time.

WITH the return of B. M. Newhouse within the coming week, St. Louis is promised several interesting and important paintings. Although the April display for the Newhouse Galleries has not, as far as we know, been definitely announced, it is probable that the new paintings being brought West by Mr. Newhouse will form the chief centers of interest for a time. Mr. Newhouse has stated that he is bringing to St. Louis a 24x36 J. Alden Weir still-life painted in 1885, and a 24x 26 Ghilde Hassam which was painted in 1905. Also there will be a little Albert Pinkham Ryder which is listed in Sherman's book of "159 Known Ryders," two J. Francis Murphys, and a Joaquin Sorolla Y Bastida beach scene, 18x24 inches in size.

Some of the many good reasons why Americans abroad always go there

Switzerland's best recommendations to Americans is that everyone who has ever been there once goes back again. Her matchless and majestic scenery, her wealth of sports—from mountain climbing to golf—her invigorating and rejuvenating climate, her superior traveling accommodations—railroads, steamships, motors—her splendid hotels and pensions, all combine to please and satisfy the tourist. The friendly hospitality of her people, the ease and grace with which service is everywhere extended, give Americans that most comfortable sense of welcome.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

THE Odeon will be converted into a motion picture theater for one week, beginning April 6, when "The Glorious Adventure," the all-color feature photoplay will be shown. Lady Diana Manners, proclaimed the most beautiful woman in England, plays the leading role. The picture was made in England under the direction of J. Stuart Blackton and has been shown in London, Brussels and New York.

"Cold Chills" and "Hot Water" form part of the program of the Educational Film Exchange, Inc. Although they sound like the diagnosis and prescription for one of these spring ailments, they are really the titles of a couple of comedies, "Cold Chills" is a Mermaid Comedy made under the supervision of Jack White, with Louise Fazenda and "Hot Water" is the product of the Christie Studios, Neal Burns being the featured player.

Leatrice Joy and Owen Moore are to appear together in a Paramount picture version of Maximilian Foster's story, "The Silent Partner." It is to be a special production directed by Charles Maigne. The adaptation for the screen has been made by Sada M. Cowan.

Johnny Hines, through an arrangement with C. C. Burr, will be starred by the Warner Brothers in the George M. Cohan stage success, "Little Johnny Jones."

Irene Rich and Baby Bruce Guerin, both of whom play prominent parts in the picturized version of Charles G. Norris' novel, "Brass," have been placed under long term contracts by the Warner Brothers.

The title, "Wolf Fangs," featuring the Belgian police dog, Rin-Tin-Tin, has been changed to "The White Silence." The production is nearing completion.

Gene Sarazen, the golf champion, has begun the first of a series of seven one-reel golf pictures.

Arthur Degan, who plays Nellie Kelly's father in the George M. Cohan musical comedy on Broadway, will play the role of Thomas Meighan's father in "The Ne'er Do Well."

Wesley Ruggles and a company of Paramount players have gone to Florida to film the exterior scenes for "The Heart Raider," a comedy-drama adapted by Jack Cunningham from Harry Durant's story, "Arms and the Girl." In the cast are Agnes Ayres, Mahlon Hamilton, Charles Ruggles, Marie Burke, Charles Riegal, William Nally, Marie Oliver, Frances Greenleaf and Pauline Le Gros. Scenes will be taken in the vicinity of Palm Beach and Miami, Fla., and Savannah, Ga.

Bobby Vernon unwittingly gets himself engaged to five beautiful girls in the new Educational-Christie comedy, "Take Your Choice," on which he is now working.

Maurice Costello, the first movie star when two-reelers were feature pictures, is playing a villain in Dorothy Dalton's Paramount picture, "Fog Bound."

Nine years ago James Cruze, director of "The Covered Wagon," was a leading man in a stock company playing in Utah. One of Cruze's favorite parts was the "Jack o' Diamonds" in a blood-curdling melodrama of the same name.

Allan Dwan has started production of his new Paramount picture, "Lawful Larceny," adapted by John Lynch from Samuel Shipman's stage play of the same name, at the Long Island studio. The featured players are Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi, Conrad Nagel and Lew Cody.

Some idea of the scope of activities in a single motion picture production center may be gleaned from the fact that a force of 500 carpenters is required to erect the sets when 12 companies—the capacity—are all at work at once at the United Studios in Hollywood. The buildings of the United stretch over a tract of 33 acres of ground. There are restaurants, manicure parlors, and dressing room bungalows for the convenience of the players.

SANICO
The RUST-PROOF PORCELAIN RANGE

Beauty and Utility Combined

The Sanico is an instant friend-maker because of its elegant appearance; it is a friend-keeper because its performance is just as delightful as its beauty. Every demand on its efficiency as a cooking machine is promptly fulfilled.

Take broiling as an example. Sanico has a broiling oven as high as the bake oven—no uncomfortable stooping to see into it. There is plenty of space between the meat and the flame, a high-powered burner to sear quickly—and best of all, after the work is done—only enamel linings and drip pan to clean.

The Sanistat oven-heat regulator is another wonderful feature. Four hundred and fifty degrees at your command in ten minutes, but no worry or care about keeping the oven as hot as required for the Sanistat (a Scotchman must have invented it—it's so thrifty) regulates this to the exact degree needed.

Guaranteed for 25 Years

Economical in Operation

The design of the burners on the Sanico enables the housewife to save from ten to twenty per cent of the gas which is wasted in an ordinary stove. The all-porcelain oven linings and the heavy steel sheets used under all of the enamel work confines the heat in the oven and so again prevents waste. The Sanistat measures the heat to the oven—neither too little nor too much.

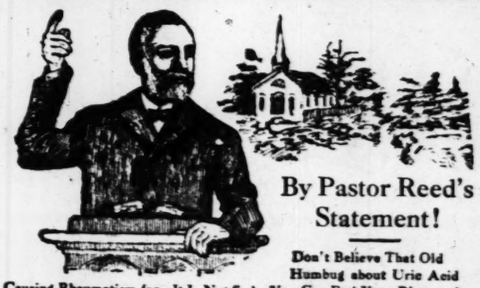
Thousands Convinced



By Pastor Reed's Statement!

Don't Believe That Old Humbug about Uric Acid Causing Rheumatism for—It Is Not So! You Can End Your Rheumatism Like I Did Mine—Wife also Rid of Neuritis

Emphatically asserting that thousands of unfortunate sufferers have been led into taking wrong treatments under the old and false belief that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism, Pastor H. W. Reed says:

"As do some of our highest medical authorities, I now know that 'Uric Acid' never did and never will cause rheumatism! But it took me many years to find out this truth. I discovered how to get rid of my rheumatism and recover my health and strength, through reading 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism,' a work written by an authority who has scientifically studied the cause and treatment of rheumatism for over twenty years. It was indeed a veritable revelation.

"I had suffered agony for years from rheumatism and associated disorders, and Mrs. Reed was tortured with the demon neuritis almost beyond endurance. We had read and talked so much about 'Uric Acid' that our minds seemed poisoned. But the Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' made it all clear to us and now we are both free from the suffering and misery we endured so many years. I believe I was the hardest man in the world to convert. For me to discard the old 'Uric Acid' idea for what I now know to be absolutely false, for the new, scientific understanding of the true causes and cure of rheumatism, was like asking me to change my religious beliefs. But I did change, and it was the fortunate day for me and mine when I did so.

NOTE: 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' referred to above, by Pastor Reed lays bare facts about rheumatism and its associated disorders apparently overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past. It is a work that should be in the hands of every man or woman who has the slightest symptoms of rheumatism, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago or gout. Anyone who sends name and address to H. F. Clayton, 20-F Masonic Building, Hallowell, Maine, U. S. A., will receive it by mail, sealed in plain wrapper, postage paid, and absolutely free. Better send now, lest you forget the address. If not a sufferer yourself, cut out this explanation and hand it to some afflicted friend.

President J. E. Brown Escapes Operation

Simple Intestinal Treatment Relieves Illness Similar to Appendicitis.

"I have been troubled with something like appendicitis for quite a while. I have never been able to find relief until I had Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) tried on me. I consider this remedy the limit at preventing an operation and certainly it has relieved me of what I feared would terminate my life." (Signed) J. E. Brown, Mr. Brown is President of an Educational Academy).

A TREACHEROUS DISEASE.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by sudden, acute stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against by exactly the same manner in which one guards against the approach of a throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestine spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the system. In exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and stop appendicitis. Just as you gargle instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTIC.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other disease having their start here.

Being the most complete system Cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing the matter which poisoned the stomach for months and which nothing else can dislodge, it brings out all gases, relieves immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought it was in your system. Try it and after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was causing you to be slightly disordered, such as occasional constipation, poor appetite, sick headache, sour stomach, gas and acids, also pimples on the stomach and sore throat, generally. Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of chronic constipation, long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

REPORTS FROM PHYSICIANS.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. Eugene Sigmund, Jersey City, N. J.

"I have found nothing in my 30 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Wheeler, Chicago, Ill.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Only require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Pretzinger, Ill.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. W. Pugh, Ill.

Adlerika is a certain surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines. Being entirely vegetable, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is said by leading druggists everywhere. Sold in St. Louis by LIGGETT DRUG CO., 7TH AND WASHINGTON; PEOPLE DRUG CO. and other leading druggists.

Stanislavsky Upon Acting as Art of Emotion

The following illuminative analysis of the art of acting is taken from a translation of a speech delivered recently before the Drama League of New York by Constantin Stanislavsky, director of the Moscow Art Theater. This organization of Russian players begins an engagement of three weeks next Tuesday in Chicago.

THERE has been a great deal spoken and written about my system of directing artists, and many people have tried to interpret it without having grasped the principles upon which it is founded.

The secret does not lie in a theoretical knowledge of my system, for such knowledge does not necessarily mean understanding. To understand it means to feel it. And the artist cannot feel by merely listening to theoretical discussion; he must learn to feel through practical exercise in the method, and it is only after such understanding, through practice, that he can analyze the theory behind it at all.

For this reason I shall avoid all scientific aphorisms and try to present a rough impression. First, I make clear and definite which art we are to work in. Each theater has variety without end. Usually by theater people mean a place where the public is separated from the actors by a curtain, where, after the curtain is up, you see a trained seal today, an acrobat tomorrow, Salvini the day after tomorrow, and the next day a beautiful dancing girl raising her foot far above her head. And all that is called theater.

Various Stage Systems.

BUT has most of it any relation to the true art of the theater and the real artist? The theater is a very complicated machine because there are endless experienced creators—not one artist, but the whole company; not one singer, but a chorus; not one musician, but a whole orchestra; the scenic artist with his helpers, the stage director (regisseur), the author, the many actors—and each with his or her own individuality. Mix them all together and see what will come out of it.

If the most dominant man in the theater is the writer, you will see a beautiful repertoire of literary plays in which artists and actors are but a background for the literary values. If the stage director dominates and has a talent for spectacle or theatrical effects, these aspects will be stressed to the sacrifice of literature and the acting artist will become merely a chessman to be moved around as a pawn in the game. If the scenic artist is the most important or talented man in the theater, you will have beautiful pictures, full of color and line, against which the actor may be lost.

Any one of these people may give you an effective entertainment that will impress you with its beauty, its spectacle, its endless pictures or its fine literature. Then there is the star system, where all is concentrated on the leading player on whom shines a bright light, while the other artists speak out of the darkness.

The Theater of Ensemble.

AND last comes the theater of ensemble, where each member of the organization works for the one purpose of presenting the play in the most interesting and beautiful way. So there are many different kinds of theaters, and we have to decide once and for all which of these theaters we shall speak of. To me there is no difficulty of choice.

When an artist is cast for a role, how is he to set about playing it? First of all, he must me able to feel it deeply, to live it deeply as he studies and rehearses it many times. One artist must feel and live deeply in this way every time he plays the role. Another, after a certain amount of repetition, is able to observe and remember the way his feelings prompted him to present it so that he can repeat it at will automatically. That is the art of presentation.

In both these cases the artist is guided by his deep feelings, and either of these methods of acting can produce real art. The important thing is the capacity to feel deeply—the instinct that enables the artist to live the role, to create a character that thinks and feels as the author intended and at the same time has the living, breathing quality of the artist's own soul. This is the real art of acting.

The Mechanical Method.

THE third way of acting is to learn the technical tricks of emotions—of passion, character, love, laughter or tears—to assemble these tricks into types such as Hamlet, Tartuffe, the Inspector General and others, to apply these types to other similar roles and simply to go on repeating mechanically with conventional gestures and ways of interpretation of the mere performer. Here is no deep feeling, no real living, no real are. Here is a trade or craft.

The Russian word for acting has no real English equivalent—deep feelings comes the nearest to it. What I mean is the ability to synchronize one's own feelings with those of the role. The mental, spiritual and physical must be so in harmony that we can subconsciously stimulate the creative faculties to the point where we create the image internally and it is communicated to the body without effort so that mind and body present the same picture simultaneously.

The faculties must all be subordinated to our own will. Our brain, eyes, face, body and our soul must become a sensitive apparatus that responds instantly to our touch, so that the slightest internal feeling is naturally reflected in the face and body. Then, too, you must know how to pick the seed from the work of the poet and plant it in your own soul, to cultivate it and give it birth, to bring it to the full flower of maturity.

Enable Actor to Express Own Soul.

THE mechanical and physical means through which this deep feeling must be translated are mastered only through long and rigorous training in many things—singing, gymnastics, dancing, rhythm—for the voice and the body must be sensitively tuned instruments under perfect control.

My work with the artist is to open his eyes to what he has to accomplish, to encourage and guide him to the expression of all of those things that must be developed out of his own soul.

Sunflower 20 Feet High.

KANSAS CITY—Judge Charles B. Montgomery, "the sunflower king," has heard from the 11,345 packages of seed he sent out last year. The tallest sunflower was grown in Sanger, Cal. It was 20¾ feet high. The "king" raised the largest head, 16¼ pounds. The second to this, 16¼ pounds, was raised in Seatrice, Neb. The "king" raised the most heads on one stalk, 120 fully developed blossoms.

HOW TO GIVE YOURSELF A PERFECT MASSAGE AT HOME EASILY NOW

Beauty Expert Gives Simple Way to Keep the Face Lovely and Cheeks Rosy.

The impression you make at the party, dance or when you meet new acquaintances depends almost entirely on your complexion. Most any fault is overcome by a clear, rosy, pleasing and overwhelming complexion. Therefore follow this advice, and benefit by the experience of thousands of girls and women who are doing it.

First, clean your skin thoroughly by using Black and White Cleansing Cream. When all the powder and accumulated dirt has been rubbed out, wring out a towel in water as hot as your hands can stand. Put this over the face and let it steam for a few seconds. Repeat this several times. Then rub into the skin a little Cold Cream with a circular motion of the finger tips. Wipe off that which is not quickly absorbed by the pores, and rinse the face with cold water. This will close the pores, keep in all the oils which the Cold Cream supplies to the skin, and starts the circulation in your face which brings out the roses in your cheeks.

Now use a little Black and White Peroxide Cream as a protection for just what you have done and as a base for your powder. Get your looking glass and see what a lovely, youthful and charming complexion you have and you didn't have to go to an expensive Beauty Parlor, or take up near as much of your time as some women do who use expensive treatments, but don't get any better results than you will here.

Mother Why Don't You Take The Newer Form of Iron?

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy, Rosy-Cheeked women without Iron."
J. F. SULLIVAN, M.D.

"You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality."
EMIL SAUER, M.D.

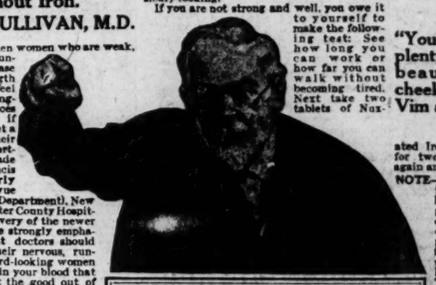
"Nine out of every ten women who are weak, sickly, nervous and run-down, could increase their health, strength and energy, and feel and look years younger, in many instances in ten days' time, if they would only get a little more iron in their blood," was the startling statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Out-Door Department), New York, and Westchester County Hospital. "Since the discovery of the newer form of iron, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe it for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. It is iron in your blood that enables you to get the good out of your food. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks. The anaemic woman has pale skin, flabby flesh and often becomes weak, nervous and irritable. In many cases she suffers from symptoms of kidney, heart or liver trouble; has indigestion, headaches and dizzy spells. Such women often become moody and have moments of despondency and melancholy. For years physicians struggled with this problem.

"At last this newer form of iron was discovered and was immediately adopted by thousands of physicians with wonderful results. It is an iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Physicians found that in this form it was quickly assimilated by the blood and the anaemic patient in almost every case gained new strength, health and energy within two weeks' time.

"In my own practice I have used the newer form of iron, which can be obtained from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron, with unfailing results."

Dr. E. Sauer, a prominent New England physician says: "The most astounding thing in the practice of medicine is to see how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without iron, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you the proper amount of good. You do not get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking."

If you are not strong and well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.



I first compounded this newer form of iron for my own friends and neighbors. Since then it has achieved such remarkable results that today iron in the newer form is prescribed by thousands of physicians everywhere, instead of the old metallic irons. The greatest curse to the health, strength and vitality of the American woman of today is anaemia—iron deficiency. Every woman who is weak, nervous or run-down, owes it to herself to take Nuxated Iron.

NOTE—This newer form of iron, known as Nuxated Iron, which is recommended by Dr. Sullivan, Dr. Sauer, and other physicians, is not a secret remedy but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. For the protection of physicians and the public against inferior substitutes Nuxated Iron is put up in tablet form only, with the letters N. I. on every tablet and the words "Nuxated Iron" stamped into each bottle. The publishers of American newspapers who guarantee their advertisements are able to assure you that the manufacturers of Nuxated Iron are so reliable that they will refund the purchase price to any purchaser merely on his own statement that he is not satisfied with the results. You cannot afford not to give it a trial. Sold by all good druggists, and Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Adolph G. Enderle Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Famous & Barr Co. and Weipert Drug Co.

"If Winter Comes" and Play for Mrs. Fiske

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.

A DRAMATIC version of "If Winter Comes," a popular novel by A. S. M. Hutchinson, will be presented Monday night at the Gaiety, with Cyril Maude as star, and with Miss Mabel Terry-Lewis making her first American appearance. The stage form of the book has already been seen in London. Mrs. Fiske's new play, "The Dice of the Gods," by Lillian Barrett, will try its fortunes Thursday night at the National. Drug addiction is the subject of this opus, which is staged by Harrison Gray Fiske. It had a recent try-out in Chicago, and not a triumphant one.

"Elsie," a musical comedy, will be another venture of Easter week, at the Vanderbilt, Monday night. The book is by Charles W. Bell, and the music and lyrics by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake. Ada Meade and Marguerite Zenda will be in the cast. On the following evening Sidney Toler's romantic comedy, "The Exile," with Eleanor Painter and Jose Ruben, will have its first disclosure. On Tuesday night "Cinders," Edward Royce's new musical play, will begin an engagement at the Dresden Theater, atop the New Amsterdam.

The theatrical season reached its nadir this week, with some of the weaker attractions drawing as little as $200 on Monday night. Twenty-three shows were offered in cut rates and only the outstanding hits maintained the box office average. Forecasts for a revival, now that Lent has run its course, are not encouraging. Competent prophets predict a lean summer on Broadway. The only hope in the situation is that business cannot possibly skid any lower than it has been during the last two weeks.

New Play by Clemence Dane.

REPORTS that Katharine Cornell will spend the summer in stock at Buffalo are unfounded, unless Pinero's "The Enchanted Cottage," which opened tonight at the Ritz, proves a total flop. Miss Cornell has in reserve a new piece by Clemence Dane, author of "Will Shakspeare," and "A Bill of Divorcement." . . . William Harris Jr. is due on these shores next week, after his European trip, and is said to have in his possession the completed script of John Drinkwater's "Robert E. Lee."

Heroic efforts have been made to bolster up John Murray Anderson's musical piece, "Jack and Gill." Georgia O'Ramey, Roger Imhoff and Lennox Pawle are out of the cast, and Lew Field will take up the burden of the comedy Monday night. Another added starter will be Lulu McConnel. . . . Fania Marinoff departs from the cast of "The Love Habit" next week, and will be replaced by Elaine Ivans.

Three musical successes are knocking at the Broadway door for return showings during the summer. "Irene" takes off to a new start Monday night at the Al Jolson Theater. "Sally" may return from its wanderings for another New York run, and Al Jolson's "Bombo" may return to the Winter Garden where "The Dancing Girl" is not doing the best business in the world.

The Theater Guild's venture into expressionism, with "The Adding Machine" seems to have caught on and the play will go uptown within a fortnight to make room at the Garrick for Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple," in which Basil Sidney will have a prominent part. Meanwhile the Guild's gamble with "Peer Gynt" has turned into a success, and the play will remain indefinitely at the Shubert.

Frank McGlynn Jr. to Have Debut.

ON Monday night in Cleveland there will be a tryout of "Bristol Glass," by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, which will travel to the Blackstone Theater in Chicago on April 9. The play is laid in Kennebunkport, Me., and deals with the difficulties of a rich summer visitor, from the city, who attempts to marry the daughter of one of the oldest inhabitants. In the cast are Frank McGlynn of "Abraham Lincoln" fame, Ruth Gordon, Gregory Kelly, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Frank McGlynn Jr. Miss Skinner is the daughter of Otis Skinner, and young McGlynn, newly from college, is making his stage debut in his father's company.

Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool," outlined plans for establishing theaters at popular prices in St. Louis, Chicago, Boston and other cities, during a talk before the State Federation of Women's Clubs, a few days ago in Boston. A top price of $1 would prevail, he said. There would be no attempt at profits, and deficits would be guaranteed by endowment funds.

"Hundreds of thousands of people," he said, "have a real hunger for finer things in the theater, but ask how they can attend the better plays when this means the expenditure of perhaps a third of a week's salary. So they have recourse to the movies and cheaper shows. One of the most important needs of any community is artistic opposition to the rising tide of bad taste and low ideals. Each city should support an institution making it possible for people of limited means to become acquainted with the best drama. Since this is not practicable at the present time, I hope to get private subscriptions which will guarantee the enterprise."

Reinhardt Due This Month.

ABOUT the middle of April Max Reinhardt, the famous German producer, is expected to arrive in New York for a visit of two weeks. It is thought he will canvass the possibility of producing at Madison Square Garden his spectacular drama, "The Miracle." On his investigation of resources here will depend his acceptance of an invitation to produce four plays in English, with an all-American company, during November.

Arrangements have recently been completed for the presentation of Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie" and "The Hairy Ape" in Stockholm, Budapest and Prague. These plays are also to be given soon in London. In Prague, the hirsute one will be played by Emil Jannings, who is not unknown to American cinema fans.

The Producing Managers Association has appointed a committee, consisting of Augustus Thomas, William A. Brady and Arthur Hopkins, to go to Albany and argue before the Legislature in favor of a bill permitting legitimate performances on Sunday. . . . There are so many unengaged actors now at large that they clutter the sidewalks of Broadway. . . . "Anathema" will be presented in English at the Forty-ninth Street Theater by the players of the Yiddish Art Theater.

"Humoresque" Closes Tonight.

THERE was a flutter when the newspapers carried an advertisement of the expiring entertainment at the Vanderbilt, which closed tonight. Instead of hinting that the production was reluctantly tearing itself away from a devoted and stampeding public, the bulletin admitted frankly that it had been

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking; and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

St. Louis Has Spoken

FOR almost three years in these advertisements we have been picturing to you the new St. Louis—an old city with new ideals. Its location, its industrial development, its future, have been covered in a general way, although the chief expression has been devoted to the new spirit of enterprise that inspires St. Louisans.

Now has come the great proof—the evidence that St. Louisans are working together and are fired by an aggressive spirit of joint community effort. The citizens went to the polls on February 9 and passed a Bond Issue amounting to

for Civic Progress

A whole river—River des Peres—will be covered over, reclaiming idle acres and creating new industrial sites. A parkway—a vision of the real St. Louis—will greet visitors as they emerge from Union Station, the terminal of 26 trunk line railways. A municipal center, a war memorial, a community auditorium, will form a civic building group on a plaza equal to any in the United States. A new courthouse, hospitals, playgrounds, wider streets, and an auxiliary waterworks looking to St. Louis' growing needs are among the improvements provided.

This demonstration of the faith of St. Louisans in their city means the development of the human side of civic life in step with the constantly increasing commercial and industrial growth. St. Louis is building for the future. Its progress, never spectacular, has been—and will continue to be—steady and sound.

Scenes of Bruch's "Odysseus" to Be Given

SIX important scenes out of the 17 parts comprising Max Bruch's secular oratorio, "Odysseus," Op. 41, will be given by the St. Louis Massenchor of 600 voices and 65 members of the Symphony Orchestra, at the Coliseum, on the evening of April 19, under the direction of Hugo Anschuetz. It is said that only one section of this work, the "Barcarolle Quiet Scene," has ever been heard in this city, and that was about 25 years ago.

The text is taken from a poem after Homer by Wilhelm Paul Graf. The scenes to be presented are the third, entitled "Odysseus and the Sirens;" the fourth, "Tempest at Sea;" which is considered the most difficult of all the parts; the fifth, "Penelope's Mourning," for mezzo-soprano solo and orchestra; and the eleventh, a final chorus.

Two of the soloists will be singers from the Stuttgart Opera—Mme. Emma Tester, soprano, and Mme. Meta Diestel, mezzo-soprano. The baritone role of Odysseus will be intrusted to Raymond Koch of St. Louis. Among the other numbers on the program will be Handel's "Largo," arranged for mixed chorus and orchestra, and an "Ave Maria" by Gelbke, for women's chorus and solo baritone.

Dalmores to Sing Here.

ON the same evening, April 19, Charles Dalmores, French dramatic tenor, will make his first American appearance since 1914, as soloist at the Morning Choral Club's spring concert, at the Odeon. Dalmores was formerly a member of the Chicago Opera Company. At this concert he will take the place of Guilio Crimi, who has unexpectedly returned to Italy.

Wilhelm Bachaus, distinguished German pianist, who appeared as soloist some years ago with the Symphony Orchestra, will give a recital Friday evening at the Wednesday Club auditorium, under the auspices of the Piano Teachers' Education Association.

Paying its first visit to St. Louis in several years, the Westminster College Glee Club of Fulton, Mo., will give a concert tomorrow evening at the Wednesday Club auditorium, under the direction of W. Sims Ritz. On Tuesday night the club will sing at the Presbyterian Church, Goodfellow and Lockwood avenues, in Webster Groves.

A meeting of the Federated Music Clubs of the Eighth District will be held Friday morning at Vanderveer Music Hall. Reports will be made by delegates returning from the State convention of music clubs in Kansas City, and a program will be presented by Miss Ione Zuhlke, violinist; Miss Pauline I. Bell, vocalist, and Miss Anna Serkin and Frederick Nussbaum, pianists.

Miss Hayman's Recital.

MISS THELMA HAYMAN, contralto, winner of the Musical Epsilon sorority's scholarship for study in the East, will give a recital at the Wednesday Club auditorium on the evening of April 15. She will leave for New York in April 15. Her program will be as follows: "Caro mio ben," Giordani; "My Heart Ever Faithful," Bach;

Sims Rixey. On Tuesday night the club will sing at the Presbyterian Church, Gore and Lockwood avenues, in Webster Groves.

A meeting of the Federated Music Clubs of the Eighth District will be held Friday morning at Vandervoort Music Hall. Reports will be made by delegates returning from the State convention of music clubs at Kansas City, and a program will be presented by Miss Ione Zuhlke, violinist; Miss Pauline L. Bell, vocalist, and Miss Anna Sorkin and Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, pianists.

Miss Hayman's Recital.

MISS THELMA HAYMAN, contralto, winner of the Mu Phi Epsilon sorority's scholarship for study in the East, will give a recital at the Wednesday Club auditorium on the evening of April 9. She will leave for New York about April 15. Her program will be as follows: "Caro mio ben," Giordano; "My Heart Ever Faithful," Bach; "Che faro senza Euridice," Gluck; "Morning" and "In the Silence of Night," Rachmaninoff; "O don fatale," from "Don Carlos," Verdi; "J'ai pleure en reve," Hue; "Tes yeux," Rabey; "Chevanchee Cosaque," Fourdrain; "Evening," Julie Stevens Bacon; "Minor and Major," Spross; "Do Not Go, My Love," Hageman, and the Robin Woman's aria, from Cadman's "Shanewis."

William Theodore Diebels will give an organ recital this afternoon at the New Cathedral, assisted by George E. Muskens, tenor. Numbers will be presented by Loret, Johnston, Faure, Malling, Sibley, Schumann, Granier, Janssen and Ottenwalder.

The public is invited to a spring "guest day" concert which will be offered by the Morning Etude Club on the morning of April 18, at the Union Avenue Christian Church. A program will be supplied by Mmes. Lotta K. Bosso, Esmeralda Berry Mayes, Louise D. Gardner, H. D. Lamb, Carl Hinrichs, Frank Howard, F. H. Wolf, Howard Watson, Jacques Landres and Carl J. Luyties.

Owing to his unexpected departure for Italy, several engagements of Guilio Crimi have been canceled, including that as soloist at the spring concert of the Pageant Choral Society, which will be given at the Odeon on April 19. In his stead the organization has engaged Charles Dalmores, dramatic tenor, formerly of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies. Dalmores served in the French army during the war, and has recently returned to this country.

How I Got Rid of Burning Feet

And Pains From Corns and Bunions Without Soaking, Powders, Plasters, Etc., After Suffering Indescribable Foot Misery for 20 Years.

Prof. F. T. McIntyre, well known world tourist and lecturer, says: "For years I was compelled to wear shoes two sizes too large, to be able to walk with any comfort at all. I tried soaking my feet in medicated baths, powders, plasters and foot-treatments galore, but the burning callouses and soreness refused to go, while the pains from corns and bunions continued to torture both mind and body, which upset my entire nervous system. One day, very fortunately, I met a lady from Egypt who gave me a little box of Gypsy Foot Relief, which she said was a secret from the desert. After using it a short time, the awful burning stopped, the callouses came off in chunks, leaving the skin of my feet clean and smooth, while the pains from corns and bunions seemed to disappear as if by magic. From that time, I said a joyful goodbye to over 20 years of indescribable foot misery. I would not take a hundred thousand dollars to again go through those years of agony. Now I feel like telling every foot sufferer to get a box of the wonderful Gypsy Foot Relief."

Note.—Gypsy Foot Relief, referred to by Mr. McIntyre, may be applied in a minute, without fuss or bother. Sure, quick relief comes three minutes later, or the makers give back the small amount you pay. It is sold in this city by all good druggists.

There is a quick way to sell that car—through Post-Dispatch wants. Phone your order or leave it with your nearest druggist.

Why Have Corners?

They're too hard to clean!

Did you ever think of a cup as a model of cleanliness? It is. There's not a corner in it. Not a nook nor cranny that's hard to clean. That's why you never see a square cup. Why not have this same cleanliness in your kitchen cabinet? You can get it in the Kitchen Maid Cabinet. Inside corners are rounded. Doors and sides are smooth, without panels. 78 old-fashioned, hard-to-clean corners are done away with.

That means double saving in the Kitchen Maid. Saving of your time because of its convenience—saving of work because of its cleanliness. You save money, too—the Kitchen Maid gives you the utmost quality at a moderate price. Kitchen Maids are sold by most good furniture dealers on easy payment terms which make them easy to own. ROMANCE AND THRILLS ON EASTER FILM PROGRAMS

ing was a leading industry along the New England coast.

An old whaling vessel was acquired and refitted and for the purposes of the picture an actual expedition was organized and a whale was harpooned and captured.

A love story has been woven into the plot and there are several interesting glimpses into the life of a Quaker colony of half a century ago. Marguerite Courtot and Raymond McKee have the leading roles.

"Safety Last," a seven-reel drama featuring Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, is the week's offering at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. An exclusive attraction for the matinees only at the Grand Central and West End Lyric will be the Woman's Home Companion's production, "Disposing of Mother."

"Safety Last" is announced as something new in pictures. Lloyd plays the role of a country boy who goes to the city to make his fortune, assuming the pose of a very successful man in his letters home. As a matter of fact he is a ribbon-clerk.

His girl decides such a successful man is too valuable to be left alone in a big city and goes to visit him. The hero tries to live up to his pose.

The owner of the store offers $1000 to any employe who can give him an idea that will attract a big crowd. Harold engages a human fly to climb the building, but a novel twist forces Lloyd himself to do the climbing and the thrills occur as he makes his way up 10 stories to the roof.

Allan Dwan's first production since "Robin Hood" comes to the Missouri for Easter week. It is the Paramount picturization of Edith Wharton's novel, "The Glimpses of the Moon." In the cast are Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Maurice Costello, David Powell and Rubye deRemer.

Costly jewelry, expensive hangings, rare oil paintings and antique furnishings were used to give the picture the rich flavor called for in the novel. The story is woven about the troubles of a young married couple, trying to keep pace with their millionaire friends.

The Missouri is also presenting a film which explains the famous Einstein Theory of Relativity. Far from being the dry subject that may be suggested to the layman, this picture is said to be one of the most entertaining ever screened. The picturization of the fundamental matters which have to do with our very existence has been most cleverly achieved. As Newton's theory of gravitation revolutionized civilization, Einstein's theory of relativity revolutionizes Newton. Einstein claims that only 12 men can thoroughly understand and demonstrate his theory. Motion pictures have made it possible for the average person to attain a fair grasp on it.

"The Midnight Guest," a Universal special attraction in seven parts, is this week's photoplay attraction at the Rivoli. It shows the eternal conflict between good thought and evil, optimism and cynicism. The characters are the extreme cynic who is met in every walk of life, the hopeful, right-thinking optimist and the woman whose life presents them with a problem of mercy or punishment. The story is of a woman of misfortune to whom the cynic would extend no helping hand, and who through the lone help of the optimist, regains her natural heritage of love, happiness, respect and honor. Grace Darmond has the part of the woman of misfortune, Clyde Fillmore the optimist, and Mahlon Hamilton the role of the cynic. Other roles are handled by Ethel Ritchie, Vernon Dent and Pat Harmon.

Tom Mix, in his latest photoplay, "Three Jumps Ahead," is the feature at the Liberty. Another feature is "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," an Arabian Nights gem with oriental settings. A comedy, "The Mummy," and a number of entertaining news reels make the program one consuming three full hours.

Tom Mix in "Three Jumps Ahead" shares honors with his horse, "Tony," and several new and daring stunts never before attempted for the screen are promised. The story concerns life in the West where a ranch owner in driving his cattle to market is the target for a band of outlaws who capture the rancher and his cowboys and drive off his cattle. Then follows a daring attempt to escape, the doublecrossing of the bandit gang, with a pretty love story to add to the interest. It is in an attempt to overtake a stage coach with its cargo of money that Tom Mix makes his spectacular jump over a deep canyon. Here the young ranchman outwits the rustlers and in rapid succession follow a series of thrilling incidents dealing with love and daring.

Confidence

The greatest asset any individual, any firm or any bank can possess is the confidence of the public.

No man, no house, no bank can succeed or grow without public confidence.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the world's greatest banker, stated that often he had loaned men without collateral large sums of money and that he had often refused to loan men with ample collateral. He had confidence in the first, he had no confidence in the second class.

PIGGLY WIGGLY possesses to the utmost degree the confidence of the intelligent and discriminating housekeeper.

They know when they buy at a PIGGLY WIGGLY Store that they get the highest quality at the lowest possible margin of profit from a clean store.

Public Now Prefers Vegetable Laxatives

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin affords prompt relief in a natural way

THE public is constantly becoming more discriminating in its choice of things. Those subject to constipation try to learn what makes them constipated, and then avoid it. If constipation persists in spite of all their efforts they take the mildest, most easily tolerated laxative obtainable, and not a drastic physic that upsets them for days afterwards. As over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold a year, a large proportion of the people of this country must believe that this mild vegetable compound is the proper remedy for them, and so it is. No need to take salt waters and powders that dry up the blood; coal-tar drugs in candy form that produce skin eruptions, or calomel that salivates. These drugs are "heroic measures", over-effective, weakening and griping.

The best constipation remedy is the one that moves the bowels without shock to your system, and such a one is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and has been satisfactorily sold for 30 years. Unlike the harsher physics it does not produce a habit, and increased doses are not required; in fact, it so trains the stomach muscles that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with.

Many take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin once a week as a health safeguard. Others use it only when required, as, for example, Mrs. J. W. Borroughs of Little Rock, Ark., who finds it equally valuable for herself and the children, and Mr. Enas S. Costa of Watsonville, Cal., whose family uses it regularly. Try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in constipation, biliousness, piles, headaches, sallow complexion, and to break up fevers and colds. A generous-size bottle can be had at any drug store, and it costs only about a cent a dose!

failure. The announcement ran thus:

"Despite the unanimous and enthusiastic praise bestowed by the press upon Laurette Taylor for her remarkable performance as Sarah Kantor in Fannie Hurst's play 'Humoresque,' the engagement will end next Saturday night owing to lack of public support." This recalls an advertisement which appeared in the Philadelphia papers during a meagerly attended Shakspearean engagement. It was this: "Mr. Richard Mansfield is sorry to disturb the inhabitants of Philadelphia, but he is playing 'Richard III' every night at the Walnut Street Theater."

A dramatic version is being prepared of Maughan's "The Moon and Sixpence." . . . Owing to internal dissensions, the San Francisco Theater Guild has passed out of existence, according to Sam Hume, its general director. Opening last October, it gave a total of 70 performances of "Miss Lulu Bett," "The Truth About Blayds," "Heartbreak House," "S. S. Tenacity," "Enter Madame" and "The Doll's House." . . . Tom Douglas, a young vaudevillian, got his chance to play the lead in the London production of "Merton of the Movies" because of his resemblance to Glenn Hunter.

IT is reported that Leo Carrillo, after finishing his vaudeville tour, will appear in Booth Tarkington's "Colonel Blake." . . . William Hurlbut's new play, "Chivalry," is to open April 23 in Atlantic City, with Irene Fenwick and Arthur Byron in the leading roles. . . . Guitry's "Pasteur" closed at the Empire last Saturday night after a run of only two weeks. . . . "Minne and Me," Mitzi's new play, by Zelda Sears and Harold Levey, opens in Boston Monday night.

Allan Pollock will join a stock company in San Francisco for eight weeks, and will play the leads in "A Bill of Divorcement" and "A Pinch Hitter." . . . The Moscow Art Theater will play three weeks at the Great Northern Theater, Chicago, beginning next Tuesday night. During the first week Stanislavsky's troupe will play Count Alexei Tolstoi's "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch" and Gorky's "The Lower Depths;" during the second, Tchekoff's "The Cherry Orchard" and "Tsar Fyodor;" and during the third, Tchekoff's "The Three Sisters" and "The Lower Depths." . . . Galsworthy's "Loyalties" also goes to Chicago next week.

De Wolf Hopper renews his Gilbert and Sullivan operations Monday night at Newark, with "The Mikado." . . . Terre Haute, Ind., is to be the scene of a premiere. Would You Like To Lose a Pound a Day? Then TRY this Delightfully SIMPLE Way . . .

Thousands Are Now Finding It Easy To Have the Trim, Slim Figure Dictated By Fashion and Admired By All.

ARE you too fat? You shouldn't be. Without rigorous dieting or exercise—by a simple natural process—you should quickly and easily be able to have the slender fashionable figure that is so attractive.

Scientists have discovered that excess fat is often caused by the subnormal action of a small gland. Once this gland is healthy and functioning properly, your weight should reduce naturally, and without effort on your part, to the normal amount for your height.

And science has discovered a simple extract which tends to regulate the gland that controls fat. Without lifting a hand in unnecessary and violent exercise, you should find it a delightfully simple matter to have the ideal, slender figure admired by everyone.

The wonderful thing about the scientific formula known as Rid-O-Fat is that in losing your superfluous fat you should gain added vigor, health and energy of mind and body.

Be Young - Feel Young Look Young

There is nothing which adds to a person's age so much as fat. A few extra pounds makes any man or woman look from five to ten years older. Not only that, the excess weight and increased heart action saps vitality and energy.

Once the gland which controls your fat is functioning properly your food should be turned into firm, solid flesh and muscle. As your weight comes down to normal you should experience a delightful and amazing improvement in your appearance. You should not only feel and look younger—you should actually be younger. You should also be in better health—a real health of energy—not the fictitious and deceiving health of fat that insurance companies say shortens the life 10 years.

Complexion, health and figure are improved at the same time. The result is a new vitality, magnetism and personal charm that makes for success. Tasks once hard become easy and life worth while.

Quick Results—No Exercise—No Rigorous Dieting.

Rid-O-Fat, the scientific compound, comes in convenient tablet form, and is practically tasteless. You simply take one at each meal and bedtime. The results are often surprising in their rapidity.

Within a few days you should be conscious of a new feeling of energy and lightness, taking the place of that tired, worn-out feeling.

Quickly as the fat gland resumes normal functioning you should lose weight in a healthy normal manner. Many fat, ungainly figures are in this scientific manner helped to regain their normal and idealistic proportions, giving that fashionable slenderness and athletic poise.

And all this time you live as you please.

Nature is doing the work. No more irksome exercise—no more denying yourself of all the things you like. Take just one small, pleasant, Rid-O-Fat tablet after each meal. Could anything be more simple?

A Fat Neck is a Social Handicap

Modern fashions prevent a woman from covering up her neck, and thus it becomes the focal point of attention. If the neck be fat, with unsightly rolls and wrinkles—if there be a double chin—then there is small hope of being fully attractive.

Notice the vast difference in the two pictures above. What can be more attractive than a slender, oval face, glowing with the color of firm, solid flesh and graceful, properly proportioned neck and shoulders?

Rid-O-Fat Used By 100,000 People

Since the announcement of the wonderful Rid-O-Fat formula it has been used by more than 100,000 people. Twenty to thirty thousand more people are writing for it every month. The following letters show what users think of the scientific Rid-O-Fat system of fat reduction.

Lost Forty-One Pounds In Thirty Days

"When I wrote for your Rid-O-Fat sample I weighed 245 pounds. Today, which is 30 days later, I weigh only 204 pounds. A reduction of forty-one pounds in a month. I am delighted. Please send me another 30-day treatment, as I want to reduce to 145 pounds, which is the correct weight for my height. I am sure that I will realize my ambition with Rid-O-Fat and I feel better than I have in years."

Lost 12 Pounds In Six Days

"I lost 12 pounds the first six days I took Rid-O-Fat and feel and look 100 per cent better. Will tell my friends about it. I am happier than I have been in years."

Lost 20 Pounds In 3 Weeks

"According to weight tables I weighed exactly 20 pounds too much. Rid-O-Fat reduced me to normal in just a little more than three weeks. I feel better, don't get tired, and my friends say I look like a new person."

Fashion Decrees Slim Figures

Several centuries ago the fat figure was fashionable, but today it is decidedly passe—so much so in fact that it is almost impossible for a fat man or woman to find any style or fabric that is at all becoming—everything is being designed for the gracefully slim and athletic figure. Notice the vast difference in appearance and attractiveness between the fat and gracefully slender figures shown in the picture.

Why should you suffer the handicaps and embarrassments of excess weight—why should you suffer in appearance and actually shorten your life when the Rid-O-Fat treatment is so simple and easy?

Why not declare your independence today—right now—by writing for a free sample of Rid-O-Fat and prove to yourself that you can be as attractive and gracefully slender as you wish?

Notice How Much More Attractive the Slender, Graceful Figure Is.

Generous Sample Free

I want every fat person to have a chance to try Rid-O-Fat in their own homes at no expense. I don't want them to take my word or that of the thousands who have used it. I want them to see for themselves that the results are more pleasing than anything I can say.

To introduce Rid-O-Fat in a million more homes I will send a free sample to any one who will write for it. In fact it is really more than a sample, as it is often sufficient to reduce the average person several pounds.

I will also send with the sample an interesting booklet that explains the scientific reason for fat, and why Rid-O-Fat is so valuable.

Send No Money.

Don't send a penny—I will send the sample and the booklet under plain wrapper and fully postpaid. This does not obligate you in any way and is never to cost you a cent. It is simply a limited offer I am making to more generally introduce Rid-O-Fat.

This free offer is good for only a short time, so send me your name and address on the coupon below or a post card and I will see that the generous sample and booklet are mailed immediately under plain wrapper postpaid. Do not try to get Rid-O-Fat at drug stores as it is distributed only direct from my laboratory to you—remember this is a short time offer and send your name at once. H. C. "The Love of Su Shong," at the Empress, deals with the infatuation of a young American tourist for a pretty Chinese girl. Miss Hazel Whitmore will have the part of Su Shong.

The ball has been designated a costume affair, those attending to come in dress representative of the arts or in keeping with the art spirit.

A committee composed of Dawson Dawson-Watson, Mrs. John P. Thomy and Louis La Beaume is to judge the costumes and award prizes. Charles Nagel, Mrs. Lon O. Hocker, Tom P. What Did Lonnie Gibbs Do With Bank's $460,000?

NO WOMEN, NO WINE, NO GAMBLNG, NO SPECULATION, NO EXTRAVAGANCE—BUT THE MONEY IS GONE

Remarkable Story of the Man Who Could Not Say "No"—He Kept an Accurate Account of All Savings Accounts Which He Diverted and When the Sum Was Near Half a Million Dollars and His Life Insurance Policies Were Equal in Amount, He Killed Himself in the Vault of the Bank He Had Looted.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., March 31.

WHEN Lonnie Gibbs, "the friendliest man in Kirksville," died by a self-directed bullet he had misused more than $460,000 of the money of people who called him friend. They are still his friends, partly because he was so firmly established in their affections that he could not be displaced by a mere betrayal of confidence, but more because they believe that his misuse of their money was the fault of his generosity and that his self-destruction was his expiation of that fault, making provision thereby for the restitution of all that he had taken.

When Gibbs felt tightening about him the coils from which there appeared to be just one way of escape, he insured his life for more than the aggregate of his shortage, accurate account of which he had kept in a separate set of books, and then, having made provision for the restoration of the savings which had filtered through his hands, he went to meet the great enemy, Death, with the same smile that had won him countless friends.

Almost two weeks have passed since Lonnie Gibbs was found dead in the vault of the Kirksville Trust Co., but Kirksville has not ceased to mourn and marvel at his tragic taking off. For seldom has a man been loved by his community as Lonnie Gibbs was loved. He had smiled his way into the hearts of young and old, high and low.

Self-appointed almoner for all in need, never able to say "No," he loaned without stint from the savings intrusted to him, and, it seems, when the day of reckoning came, gave up his life in sacrifice as a last expression of his generosity, rather than call for restitution upon those he had helped.

Family Believes He Was Murdered

Although the indications that he killed himself are not to be denied, and the Coroner's jury found that he did, his family and some of his friends, unable to reconcile with his sunny life the presumption of self-destruction, cling to the belief that he was murdered.

Hateful as the thought is, however, the great majority of the people of Kirksville have accepted it as a fact that Lonnie Gibbs, who had scattered sunshine all his life, found himself at last in a gloom of despair through which he could see no gleam of promise and ended it all by sending a bullet into his brain.

In the 15 years that Gibbs had been identified with the Kirksville Trust Co. he had achieved by the uncalculated exercise of a rare gift of friendliness an unique place in the affections of the people.

Beginning, as a youth just out of school, with no distinction except the casual one of having been the first baby born at Gibbsville, the village founded by his father, Frank Gibbs, on the Santa Fe, 14 miles south of here, and a popularity which had come naturally to him in school and college, he won his way quickly from clerk to teller and assistant cashier and cashier and became, in a very few years, the personality in which the company was absorbed and merged.

A lawyer one day had occasion to ask a woman of affairs where she did her banking.

"With Lonnie Gibbs," she said.

"Oh, yes, with the Kirksville Trust Co.," the lawyer said.

"No, with Lonnie Gibbs," she corrected.

That was the way they all felt about it. They went to the bank to transact business with Lonnie. It was Lonnie who greeted them with his sunny smile and hailed them by name as they entered and they waited their turn in line rather than have anyone else attend to their wants.

Was "Lonnie" to Everybody

He was "Lonnie" to all who came. The nearest he ever came to showing displeasure was when somebody who knew no better called him "Mister." He reciprocated by calling most of the 7500 regular residents and the 1500 students of the teachers' college and the osteopathy colleges by their first names.

Although he had more friends than any other man in Kirksville, Gibbs had no one particular friend, probably because his absorption with business precluded the forming of such an intimacy. He was married at the age of 22 to Miss Katie Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Graves. They had lived all their married life in Kirksville, were members of the Christian Church, and Mrs. Gibbs had the usual social interests, but Gibbs joined in these to a very limited extent. He would have been 36 years old in July.

His skin was of peculiar pink clearness and his brow, as smooth as ivory, was never ruffled by a frown. His father was asked one day if he had ever seen Lonnie in a temper. He said to his knowledge his son had never in his life exhibited anger. It was the proud and happy declaration of his mother that he had never given her a moment's worry. He was the example all Kirksville mothers held up for their sons' emulation. Women were devoted to him, children counted him a comrade and the only fault that men found with him was that, in his close application to business, he gave them so little of his companionship.

His life was exemplary. He did not drink or smoke. He was never heard to swear. His tastes were not expensive.

His one dissipation was playing the tuba in the Municipal Band. He had played in a college band and when the Municipal Band was organized he joined it and played with an enthusiasm he gave to nothing else except his work at the bank. Band practice was the one thing which could lure him from overtime work at the bank, and he took delight in playing in local parades and in local concerts.

When the 'Oom, oom, oompa" boomed from the big bass horn the children cried: "That's Lonnie!" And their elders smiled their indulgence.

Seldom Went Out of Town

But with all his ardor for his horn, it was rarely that he could be induced to accompany the band on out-of-town trips, or if it was a several days' engagement, the most that he would concede was a single day away from the bank. So a substitute bass had to be used on these occasions.

He worked early and late, particularly in recent months, when the illness of B. F. Heiny, president of the company, doubled his duties. When people passed the bank at night, in pursuit of diversion, they noted the lights and said: "Lonnie's working again tonight." And sometimes they tapped on the window and called: "'Lo, Lonnie," and he looked up from his books and waved his hand and flashed his smile, and then bent again to his work.

Partly because of his industry, but more because of his charming personality, confidence in him was unbounded. Savings were poured into his hands.

Now that he is gone, leaving a shortage which is reported to be in excess of $460,000, it is difficult to find anybody in Kirksville who is willing to censure him. What he did with the money is the great unsolved riddle. The fixed belief is that he did not profit by the apparent misuse of the bank's funds. The accepted explanation is that it was his inability to say no which brought about the shortage and caused him to give his life as a forfeit. There is a conviction that he went to his death assuming a guilt which did not wholly belong to him, rather than live and have to tell how advantage had been taken of his amiability.

They say that nobody in need of funds ever appealed to him in vain. He is declared to have helped hundreds of students through college. For moneys advanced them he took their unsecured notes or their unwritten promises to pay. How much of what was loaned was never repaid cannot be known. It is thought to have been partly in appreciation of his generosity that he and his wife were frequent guests at fraternity house Sunday dinners, about the only social diversions he allowed himself.

They say around Kirksville that one day a student went to another bank and asked for a loan of $500. The cashier was sorry but the fact was that the bank still carried on its books the $500 which it had loaned to the young man's father when he was a student in Kirksville, and so, under the circumstances, would the young man please excuse them.

He said: "Oh, very well, I'll get it from Lonnie." So saying he sauntered away. He came back presently with a wad of bills. "Well, I got it," he exulted, flourishing the bills. "Lonnie just handed it over and told me to give him a note some day. That's what I call a banker."

While, however imprudently generous Gibbs may have been in loaning to students the money of depositors, it would not account for a considerable portion of the shortage, it is conjectured that he was equally accommodating to other persons who came to him for large loans on dubious security. Although nothing has been found to indicate that he speculated or even made investments on any great scale, it is believed that friends who knew how hard it was for him to refuse any request may have persuaded him to advance them large sums, of which no record was made. So far nothing has been found on the books of the bank or among its papers to account for the bulk of the shortage and if there is such record it should have appeared before this.

Frank Gibbs, the father of Lonnie, who was one of the directors of the bank, the only one, in fact, who was actively in touch with it at the time of the cashier's death, and who was with Lonnie at the bank most of the afternoon before he killed himself, says he is as much in the dark as anybody else. He suggested, without giving a reason, that his son might have been a victim of blackmail, whose increasing extortions had driven him to the desperate expedient of self-destruction. In view of the impeccability ascribed to Lonnie Gibbs' personal life, the only conjecture which can be based on his father's suggestion is that someone might have learned of a too-generous use of the bank's funds for the needs of others and used the information to harass him.

The modest home of the Kirksville banker.

His favorite diversion was playing the big horn in the band. Here is a section of a long strip picture showing the banker with the rest of the band boys.

Floral testimony of the community to a man who was respected and loved.

Nobody Believes He Wasted Funds

Nobody believes that he dissipated the funds in personal extravagance. He and his wife lived modestly in a cottage, now somewhat in need of paint, at 502 East Harrison street. The sedan in which his wife drove more frequently than he was purchased with her money. It was only occasionally that she could get him away from the bank for a ride. Although his salary since he became cashier ranged only from $1800 to $2100, the furnishings of their home and their manner of living were not inconsistent with his earnings, particularly in view of the possession by Mrs. Gibbs of independent means.

Gibbs never took a vacation. He was seldom absent from the bank more than 30 minutes at a time during business hours, not to mention nights and Sundays. He belonged to the Rotary Club, and made a point of attending its luncheons, but it was always perfunctory punctillio, accomplished without waste of time. The Rotarians say they never knew him to finish his luncheon.

If the club was planning a trip he approved enthusiastically. "Sure I'll go," he would say, and everybody would smile. He always paid his share of the expense, but he never went. He was a charter member of the club and had been its treasurer from the first. "We don't know what shape our funds are in," the members say, "but it's all right." He was a Knight Templar and an Elk, but rarely attended meetings of either lodge.

How long the now-discovered shortage had been growing is not yet definitely known, but there is reason to believe that shortly after the close of the war Gibbs found it necessary to begin covering up a condition which his liberality in loaning had brought about. It is now remarked that, after the war, when the savings accounts of other banks, depleted by the bond drives, were gradually returning to normal, the reports on the condition of the Kirksville Trust Co. did not show a corresponding recovery.

Kept Separate Records

The explanation, it is now understood, is that Gibbs, when the savings again began pouring in, gave receipts to the depositors but did not enter the deposits on the bank's books, keeping a separate record of them instead. Meanwhile, in seeming anticipation of a time when the situation would be disclosed and he be called upon for an accounting he could not make, he was piling up life insurance until, at his death, he had something like $600,000. Although he did not make this payable to his estate, making his parents beneficiaries of the bulk of it, after providing an annuity for his wife, it is supposed he expected that this insurance, made collectible at the cost of his life, would serve to replace his misappropriations. His parents, taking that view of it, have assigned it, up to $500,000, for the benefit of creditors.

Frank C. Millspaugh, Commissioner of Finance of Missouri, leaving Kirksville Tuesday night after a day spent in acquainting himself with the situation as revealed by the work of the bank examiners to date, authorized the statement that the department recognized the magnanimity of the act of Gibbs' parents in pledging his life insurance to the full payment of the creditors of the trust company. A man of records, dealing with records, he did not undertake to go behind the records, but the people of Kirksville, speaking by the spirit and not by the letter, recognize the magnanimity of Lonnie Gibbs that made possible the magnanimity of Frank Gibbs.

Hopeful of Making Losses Good

The Commissioner is hopeful that the provision made from the life insurance will not only make good all losses, but enable the speedy reorganization of the institution. This, the people think,

How Saunders Drove His Piggly Wiggly Dreams to Market

A New Version of the Old Story of "From Rags to Riches"

The Boy Who Worked 16 Hours a Day for $4 a Month Has Grown Into a Man Who Sits in His Western Office and Directs a Fight for Millions With Wall Street — A Pink Marble Palace and a Private Golf Course for the Lad Who Was Not Strong Enough for the Alabama Iron Furnaces.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 31.

THIS little Piggly Wiggly went to market, and now it is "all over the world." Meaning the little Piggly Wiggly that, these latter days, has been giving the bears of Wall street one of the nicest little fights of their lives.

Piggly Wiggly, as a name, came into the world about seven years ago on a train somewhere between Terre Haute, Ind., and Memphis, Tenn., and was the trophy of two hours' mental travail of Clarence Saunders, father of the Piggly Wiggly idea.

The idea had been born and the plans for carrying it out had been made, but it needed a name. Father Saunders intended that it should have a name that would distinguish it from everything else in the mercantile world. One that would waken good-natured interest and stick. So, journeying from Terre Haute to Memphis, he considered and discarded a hundred possible and impossible names. Then "Piggly Wiggly" popped into his mind and the thing was named.

Where "Piggly Wiggly" came from he doesn't know. It was not worked out. There had been nothing in his previous thinking to lead up to it except his groping for something unusual. It had no meaning then. It has tremendous meaning now.

So the first Piggly Wiggly store came to Memphis. Everybody laughed, which was precisely what Saunders wanted them to do. Then they asked what it was, which was precisely the second thing that he wanted them to do. Wall street did not laugh. Wall street did not know that a little Piggly Wiggly had been born into the world. It was a long time before Wall street found out about it.

But one day this little Piggly Wiggly trotted into Wall street. The big fat bears looked at it and held their fat sides and laughed. "Ho, ho," they chorused. "See the little Piggly Wiggly. Now watch us twist its tail and make it squeal."

They got it by the tail all right, but they didn't hold on. The Piggly wiggled loose and turned upon its tormentors. It had little tusks tucked away where they would do the most good. It gave the bears an awful goring.

How much Saunders made, and how much it cost shorts to settle with him, is not known, but the sum has been estimated variously to lie between $1,500,000 and $4,000,000.

Piggly Wiggly, if anybody needs to be told, is the family name for the little wait-on-yourself grocery store which was opened in September, 1917, in Memphis by Clarence Saunders. With amazing fecundity it has increased to 1260 stores, scattered through hundreds of cities, and hardly a day passes without another little Piggly Wiggly being born, and it seems to be only a matter of time, and no great length of time at that, until it realizes its slogan, "All over the world."

There is a remarkable family likeness among the Piggly Wigglys. They are as near alike as they can be. Outside they are as eccentric as their name, each gaily decked in yellow, blue and brown. Nobody who ever sees one ever forgets it. The next time he sees a yellow, blue and brown splotch down the street he says "There's a Piggly Wiggly." From which flow certain manifest advantages.

Inside there is the same similarity. The interior, subject to slight variation, is of standard measurement. The forward setting is the same in each, an open space of about 10 feet, two oak turnstiles set into a bronzed steel railing. Customers enter through one and emerge through the other. Between entering and emerging they pass through aisles past shelves and bins which are the same in every store and where are displayed, in the same position in every store, standard brands of merchandise. The arrangement is such that every customer must pass every article of merchandise in the store.

Not all of the stores are operated by the Piggly Wiggly organization, but the uniformity is preserved even in those that are operated under franchise because the franchise provides for the use of the standardized equipment.

That was the idea which Clarence Saunders named "Piggly Wiggly" on the train between Terre Haute and Memphis more than seven years ago.

He knew that most of the cost of doing business in the ordinary neighborhood grocery store consisted of clerk hire, delivery charges, losses from charge accounts and waste of effort. He believed that the general run of buyers would rather wait on themselves, pay cash and carry their purchases home.

He provided the system and called it Piggly Wiggly.

After the first Piggly Wiggly store in Memphis came the Piggly Wiggly Corporation, as the first step toward chain-storing the idea. Then came the Piggly Wiggly Stores, Incorporated, the merchandising unit of the system. The two corporations have an aggregate capital of approximately $15,000,000. The merchandising unit operates about 680 of the stores. The remainder are operated as private enterprises by franchise holders, who buy their equipment from the operating company and pay it a royalty, but are free to make their purchases elsewhere if they wish, although the wholesaling service is available to them on the same terms as are made to the company stores.

It was this system of selling franchises that led to the famous fight between the Piggly Wiggly and the bears. A franchise was sold to New York men, who, instead of developing the merchandising possibilities, exploited the franchise in a speculative way. They failed and that was when the bears saw their chance to have some fun by twisting the Piggly's tail. Taking advantage of the failure of the New York outfit, the stock speculators hammered the stock of the Piggly Wiggly Stores, Incorporated. Although the New York failure in no way affected the standing of the merchandising corporation, it was possible to make it appear that the Piggly Wiggly was on its last legs and the stock went down.

Saunders rallied his forces and they bought through brokers all the Piggly stock that was offered. They stopped the bear raid and checked the stock's decline. In doing so they had to acquire more stock than was desirable for them to hold. To work this off, Saunders offered it to the public at $55 a share, regardless of prevailing market prices, on easy payments, but on the stipulation that delivery of the stock was not to be made until December. That was to prevent the "shorts" from getting any of this stock to make deliveries to Saunders and his associates.

Then Saunders began to call for deliveries, which the speculators were unable to make without buying from the Saunders group at greatly increased prices.

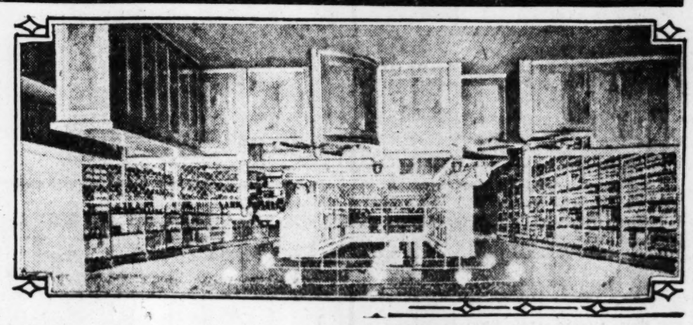
If there had been times when it appeared that the little Piggly Wiggly was in danger of being torn to pieces by the big fat bears the situation was now reversed, with Piggly tearing in among the bears and rending them right and left.

That was the situation the day I went to see Clarence Saunders. So I saw him tearing into the bears, directing by long distance telephone and telegraph the battle that was raging in the stock exchanges, and it was entertaining.

There had been an hour's waiting, during which the battle raged in the corner room of the big executive building of the Piggly organization, and the tingle thereof trickled from desk to desk, where the day's work went forward regardless of the fighting on the long stock market front.

Occasionally Gen. Saunders came out of his fighting quarters and had brief speech with one or other of his aids, but mostly he kept to his corner, receiving callers who could not be put off, discussing, if necessary, details of business, but keeping close watch upon the developments in the stock market as they came to him over the wires.

It needed no close-up study of the man to see, as he moved in and out, quietly, without the slightest suggestion of fluster or bluster, that here was a man who knew himself, was absolutely sure of himself and knew what he was trying to do, and it looked like a pretty safe bet that he would do it. Calling to mind the business philosophy of Clarence Saunders, which is: "First, know what you are trying to do. Second, know how to do it. Third, go ahead."



Most everybody knows this picture. The standardized interior of a Piggly Wiggly store.

It was plain enough, from the light in his eye and the confidence of his movement, tempered though it was by a certain wariness which took full account of the cunning of his foes, that he was going ahead. Medium of stature, stocky of build, with thick, wirey hair crowning a large head, there was the suggestion of great energy and driving power coupled with alertness.

When, during a lull in the battle, admission was granted the man came to his feet with a firm handgrasp and a quick glance of appraisal. Before anything but greetings could be spoken the long distance was calling with a report from the Chicago front. There was good news and news that was not so good, but it was all quickly grasped and absorbed and a lightning calculation that the situation on the whole was favorable, and a quick analysis of the probable effect of the day's developments on public sentiment. And it is betraying no confidence, in view of Saunders' utterances since, that he heard with satisfaction of the probable exclusion of the Piggly stock from the stock exchange. He saw instantly that this would make a favorable impression upon the public that he was expecting to sell the Piggly stock to.

The day of battle is not the day for a general to talk, but there would come a day, this general said, with a passing glint in his quiet gray eyes, fading into a whimsical little smile, when he would tell the world about some of the things that went on behind the scenes of the stock exchange and he anticipated that when that tale was told there would be quite some stir in the said world.

As to how the battle was going, it depended whether the inquiry related to the speculators or somebody else. If it related to the speculators he feared it was not going well, and he smiled grimly at the levity he was indulging. As for him, it was going very well, thank you, and the outcome was not in doubt, but quite a little remained to be done. He was off his guard for an instant and a sigh escaped him which betrayed fatigue.

He half way apologized for the litter on his desk, which was not a litter worth mentioning, and as he spoke his hands were busily separating and arranging the papers, and while he gave his caller undivided attention it was apparent that with a sort of sixth sense he was listening for the next call on the long distance which would bring news of how the battle fared on the floors of the stock exchanges.

The calls came before the conversation was ended and the sprightly young woman who answered the calls and put him on the line was kept busy between closing the door to make it easier for him to hear and opening it again when the conversation was ended. But after each interruption the conversation was unerringly resumed where it had been interrupted.

The story of Piggly Wiggly, a heartening subject beside the strategems and ambuscades of the stock market, was an agreeable change of subject, and his eyes kindled as he spoke of the beginning of the little Piggly Wiggly and the far way it has gone.

It is a far way from nothing to a business of $65,000,000 in seven years. "Sales in Piggly Wiggly stores last year amounted to $65,000,000," he said. "This year they are expected to exceed $100,000,000. No other merchandizing organization in the history of the country has made such progress in so short a time."

Clarence Saunders was not born to the atmosphere of great enterprises. He was a poor country boy. He had to earn his own living from the time he was 11 years old. He was born in Amherst County, Va., Aug. 8, 1881, and so he is 41 years old. After the death of his mother when he was 5 years old the family moved to Montgomery County, Tenn. At 11 he began working in the tobacco fields. At a planing mill he earned 25 cents a day for 12 hours' work. Earned is the right word.

During a Christmas vacation he worked in a small country store at Palmyra, Tenn. He did so well that the storekeeper offered him a regular position (not a job, mind you), at $4 a month and board. Four dollars every month! He was 14 then and had been going to school five months a year, but in five months he could earn $20, so he forsook the halls of learning.

Anyway, his duties were light. All that he had to do was tend store from 5 a. m. to 10 p. m., handle the incoming and outgoing mail, because his employer was Postmaster; do the chores around the depot, for his employer was station agent; keep the lamps trimmed and burning and in a general way look after the operation of the railroad. So he had time to study at night.

In six months his salary was increased to $5 a month. But he was too good for Palmyra. Cumberland City, hated rival of Palmyra, lured him away with an offer of $10 a month. It was not so much the increased salary that appealed to him, but he had become dissatisfied with the Palmyra job because he did not have enough to do. The position the Cumberland City storekeeper offered him included keeping the books, looking up the tariffs and making shipments.

It might have been supposed that with all that work and all that money he would have been satisfied, but he was not. The fact was that he wanted to be an explorer or something like that. Nothing in the exploring line opened up. The nearest thing to it was the coke fields of Alabama. He went there and worked 12 hours a day for a dollar a day. Off duty he filched time from slumber for the reading of books. His health broke down and he returned to Tennessee and mercantile life.

Again he essayed exploration, going to work in a sawmill three miles in the woods, walking back and forth to his work. At 19 he gave up the idea of exploring and became a wholesale grocery salesman at $30 a month. From there, after attaining $90 a month, he came to Memphis and became a city salesman. That brought him into contact with the chain store system which was being worked in a small way. He organized 21 retail grocers into a buying association, taking charge of the collective buying and advertising. Then he formed a wholesale grocery house with a capital of $26,000.

But all along he had been thinking through his plan of a new kind of chain store. By and by he had the plan perfected. But he needed a name that would help to put it over. On the train between Terre Haute and Memphis he thought of "Piggly Wiggly." So that is the story of the Piggly Wigglys.

With the groceries going good, Saunders has now begun the development on the same plan of variety stores, handling light dry goods and notions, small hardware, kitchen utensils, etc. They, too, are known as Piggly Wigglys, and the plan of operation is the same. Articles are all priced at 4 cents, 9 cents, 21 cents, 29 cents or 39 cents.

Aside from his main diversions of running the Piggly Wigglys and licking the stock gamblers, he goes in for golf and duck and bird shooting. He plays golf regularly at the Memphis Country Club and the Colonial Country Club.

For the past year an interest greater than any other has been centered in the magnificent country estate which is being created for the use of his family. Within a mile of Memphis' eastern limits a Georgia pink marble palace is being built in the midst of a 162-acre tract, which is being landscaped according to the ideas of Saunders and his wife. There will be an 18-hole golf course, with one of the tees on an island of the artificial lake, necessitating the use of boats to reach; a swimming pool and a water fall modeled from one in Colorado. Saunders was hunting out there and saw a mountain stream bubbling over the rocks. He liked it so well that he bought it and had the rocks taken to Memphis and built into a reproduction of the original, over which water will fall as in its native setting.

He has named the estate "Cla-Le-Clare," a construction of the names of his three children, Lee and Clarence and Amy Clare.

The Life Philosophy of Clarence Saunders, Whose Dreams Came True

CLARENCE SAUNDERS has found little time to translate into words the driving forces of his life, but he goes this far toward framing a philosophy:

"When you go after a thing, go after it hard. Subordinate everything else to it.

"If it shortens your life 10 years, what of it?

"I would rather live 40 years and accomplish what I want than 90 and not attain it.

"What is the use of wasting time? If you have an idea and know it is a good one, why not go ahead and put it into execution right away?"

THREE WOMEN, AND THE MAN WHO MIXED LOVE AND QUEER FINANCE FOR THEM

Mail Carrier Who Became Bank President Dies by His Own Hand on a Lonely Road

Fred W. Popp Was a "Chaste Philanderer," Says One of the Women Who Owed Much of Her Financial Success to His Kindly Advice—A Secret Entrance Led From the Garage to the "Love Bungalow"—Bank, Which Was Short $400,000, Has Been Reorganized and Reopened and New President Says Depositors Will Suffer No Losses.

CHICAGO, March 31.

"FIND the woman," said Chicago detectives when the body of Fred W. Popp, president of the Logan Square Trust and Savings Bank, was found half fallen from his automobile, with a bullet through his head. He was supposed to be attending a meeting of his directors to explain a queer jumble of $400,000 worth of doubtful paper in his accounts.

So the police began hunting for the woman, and they found three. Whether all the women have been found they are not certain and they are still looking. The net so far has scooped up three professional beauties known to have been basking under Popp's golden smiles.

Sudden and mysterious affluence seems to have fallen without show of partiality on these three, declared by the police to have been particularly favored by the financier.

The revelation of Banker Popp as an errant philanderer proved almost as great a shock to Logan Square as the news of his death and defalcation. A man in the late fifties, he was known to most of his friends and relatives as a model of moral intergrity. "Intensely ambitious and interested only in the successful growth of his bank," they said.

"Philanderer he may have been, but a chaste one," said Miss June Bacon of the so-called "love bungalow" and on whom Popp is said to have especially showered his beneficence.

Became Mistress of Bungalow

From the role of a poor working girl in a department store she made rapid progress to the station of mistress of a luxuriously furnished bungalow on Sunnyside avenue and owner of an expensive motor car. She had worked in New York for a musical education and just as she was getting nicely started with an orchestra of her own her health broke down and she left for California. On the train she met Popp and when she returned East she bought the "love bungalow" in the Logan Square district. At last she had a home to satisfy her artistic tastes. Her musical aspirations were gratified with a grand piano. The floors were covered with luxurious rugs. Exquisite draperies adorned the windows and doors and there were countless little comforts and extravagances dear to the heart of woman. And there was an underground passage to the garage, so that her coming and going and the coming and going of her friends need not necessarily be an object of observation by gossipy neighbors.

Did Popp furnish these pleasures? Perish the thought! No, indeed! Miss Bacon bought them all with her own money, she declared indignantly.

Of course, Popp was a frequent visitor, but then she had other friends. There was Claire Heilman, the beauty specialist, whom she had known in South Bend before she knew Popp. Opportunities were so much better in Chicago, so Claire brought her mother and moved out near her friend Miss's house.

Investigators who have been working on the case declare that it was the letters from June that impressed Claire with the enormous advantage of residence in Chicago. One of them is said to have been in substance as follows:

"Why waste your time in a one-horse town like South Bend? Come to the city and I can get you in touch with big men with lots of money—bankers, lawyers and others. Why, I've got one now that owns five automobiles and loads of real estate."

Met Popp in June's Home

Whether or not that argument brought about Claire's decision, the fact remains that she followed the suggestion. In fact, it was in June's bungalow that Claire met Popp, and investigators assert that she became so friendly with him that a slight estrangement grew up between the young women.

Claire admitted that she was sentimental and pointed to scars of an attempted suicide over an unfortunate love affair. Two or three times she had decided to put an end to her unhappy existence, she said. And now, just as she was getting started in business again to have this happen——

Yes, she is a beauty doctor. She is something of a beauty herself, with ruby lips, dreamy eyes, pearly teeth and a bronze glint in her hair that makes men's hearts go pitty-pat. She is a "home-to-home" beauty specialist, which means that she packs her creams and cuticle instruments in a little medicine case and attends her patients in their homes.

Since her sojourn in Chicago in the Logan Square community her gowns and other garments have been the talk and envy of all her girl friends. It was necessary for her to dress well because of the demands of her profession and the social affairs she attended. She was especially mentioned as one of the most sprightly guests at some interesting parties held in the "love bungalow" by June Bacon.

Claire disappeared immediately after the death of Popp and did not reappear until two weeks later. Her mother and other relatives said they did not know where she had gone.

Weakness for Beauty Specialists

Banker Popp seemed to have a weakness for beauty specialists. The third young woman brought into the limelight by the investigators was Irma Vitez, a very peculiar but winsome young person, who confessed with shame that she shampooed, massaged and trimmed nails for a living. One of her interesting traits was the original twist she gave the English language.

"When I heard I was mixed up in this," said Irma, "I was astonished more than I was overtaken. You see, I banked the money for the Paramount Theater, where I worked for three years, and I met Mr. Popp in the bank, naturally, and maybe, perhaps, I talked to him in front of the bank.

"I rode horse, and used to meet him, maybe once, driving through the park. Once I had dinner at the Drake Hotel and my friends did not come to meet me. Banker Popp sat at another table and he was alone. He came to my table and spoke to me. That is all.

"I was asked who started me in business. How little brains it takes to run a beauty parlor you don't know! It takes no brains at all. Anybody, no matter how bonehead, can massage a face and shampoo a hair!

"I don't brag I am a beauty parlor girl. No, I am ashamed to own I have one. But a girl must live and it takes no experience, no business, no brains, nothing, to run a beauty parlor!

"One of my beaux say, 'Who start you in business, Irma?' and I say 'I am insulted to be asked that question.'"

Twenty years ago Fred W. Popp was a mail carrier on the Northwest Side, where the bank is located. As he dropped letters into the mail boxes of the well-to-do he visioned the time when he, too, would be considered among the prosperous and successful citizens. His cheery manner and warm personality won many friends as he made his rounds with his heavy mail sack. He invested in a few vacant lots well located in the path of progress. He studied the ways of finance and organization. He cultivated the acquaintance of men who could school him in the career he mapped out for himself.

Growth of His Fortune

Logan Square became a fast-growing community. The small investments doubled and trebled in value. Turning his assets into cash and bringing together powerful influences, he finally was able to organize the Logan Square Trust and Savings Bank. The business district around the bank began to develop wonderfully. The tiny stream of gold that started flowing into the bank became a rivulet. Plans were drawn for an imposing new building. Fred Popp worked harder and harder. His investments extended far and wide. He became interested in fisheries on the Pacific Coast. He decided to make a combined business and pleasure trip there to inspect the properties and take a short vacation from his years of arduous toil. As the train whirled away from the swirl and clash of the daily business hustle of which he so long had been a part he felt lonely.

Across the aisle from his berth a comely girl sat propped up with pillows. She looked sick and despondent. Popp observed her from the corner of his eye. Plainly this was a case of beauty in distress. The girl coughed violently. Tears coursed down her pale cheeks from the coughing or an aching heart—he did not know. He was moved to pity. Anyway, he was old enough to be her father. He took a little silver cup from his traveling bag and brought her some water from the cooler.

"Buck up; drink this," he smiled, handing her the cup. Apparently she had not observed him, as she seemed startled. She accepted the water with appreciative glances.

Beginning of Association

A few moments later they were conversing easily, although there was a pathetic languor in the attitude of the girl. Obviously she was striving to put up a brave front, but when he asked her if he could be of any further assistance she shook her head sadly. No, she sighed, she was beyond assistance.

The green curtains were still drawn across the berth across the aisle next morning when Popp passed into the dining car. All through breakfast he could not eradicate thoughts of the flaxen-haired girl across the aisle from his berth, who seemed so totally obsessed with a gloomy view of life. He sat where he could see her if she should come in. But she did not enter.

On through the grain fields of the Western states rolled the limited. Popp varied his attention from the passing landscape of drab brown, still untouched by the early spring, to the forlorn girl across the aisle. He was worried because he had not seen her have breakfast and soon the diner would be closed. He could see her head buried in a hard dent in the Pullman pillow. She looked terribly uncomfortable. He would just go over and shake up that pillow for her.

She seemed delighted to have him speak to her. No, she had not eaten. Popp went into the diner and obtained a cup of hot milk for her. Ties of friendship were growing stronger.

Thus did Fred W. Popp meet June Bacon, as she told the story herself. And thus, declare his relatives, did he first become entangled in a silken spider web that eventually became a chain of doom.

"Little girl," he had said to her that morning on the Santé Fe Limited, "the Lord always looks after His own. He is not going to desert you in your hour of need."

But what was Popp's philosophy on that March morning a few days ago when he knowingly walked out of the door of his bank for the last time to take that long, last, lone trail, the end of which no man knows?

Did he think of his rosy optimism as he stepped into the little motor car at the curb and of the cheer he had so bounteously bestowed on a despairing girl in a Pullman those many months ago?

What did it all mean now? What would he not give to be once more the happy postman he now observed delivering mail as he whistled a refrain from the latest jazz tune?

Pretty girls were on the sidewalks as his motor chugged along. Did his mind revert again to the day he met June Bacon on the way to California? She was a pretty girl. What a kaleidoscope of colorful moments had followed in her train!

Joined a Circus When a Child

She had told him all about her great ambitions and how they had come to naught. All her life she had tried to get away from squalor and sordid filth. She told of her abuse by a brutal stepfather, how she had been sent to a school for incorrigible girls, had run away from the home, joined a circus and followed the white top for two years and ran away from that to escape men beasts who constantly pursued her to add to her shame. She had served in a big department store, skimped with her pennies to pay for music lessons that she might become an artist. She sprained an ankle and was rescued by a man who put her in an orchestra. She became an orchestra leader, made a little money and then her health broke down. Now she was going to California to see a famous doctor.

Received Her First Bouquet

It was afterward that the girl told how Popp had volunteered to find her a lodging house near the address of her physician and he left her in the rest room of the station at their destination while he went forth on this quest. When he returned he assisted her to a room that was dark as she entered. He left her at the door and she immediately retired. In the morning she awoke with the sun streaming in the windows and, joy of joys, in a corner of the room was the dearest little piano.

Weak and sick as she was, she got up to play, and as the notes of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" floated through the room there was a knock at the door. A boy thrust a large box into her hands. Joyfully she lifted a gorgeous bouquet of June roses from the tissue covering. There was a card. It read:

"This is the land of sunshine. May it always bring June roses to you."

And to this day, June declares, she has kept the withered remnants of that bouquet—the first she ever had received as a token. During the rest of her stay in California, she said, Mr. Popp continued to see her almost daily, but never once did he make a suggestion of an intimate association or any sacrifice on her part.

Perhaps these recollections were going through the mind of Fred Popp as his little car chugged along away from that dreaded directors' meeting. Did memories of June and the weird parties in the bungalow, the pretty girls in negligee, reported by the neighbors, flit through his mind? Were there bitter thoughts of cold extortionists who had forced him into this chasm? It has been reported that $100,000 has utterly disappeared and probably was used as "hush money."

The cheery postman in Franklin Park looked across a vacant square and saw a small automobile parked by the curb. The door was open.

There was something peculiar about the appearance of the machine that attracted his attention. He came nearer. The body of a man lay half fallen through the door. He saw a hat on the ground. He saw the silver hair streaked with a stream of blood. There was a bullet wound in the temple. A large revolver had fallen to the floor of the car. The body was lifeless.

Aghast at his discovery, the letter carrier forgot about his route for the first time in his life and ran for a policeman. The Coroner was summoned. Soon there was a small crowd about the machine and the dead man. The officials inspected the papers found in the pockets. He was identified as Fred W. Popp, president of the Logan Square Trust and Savings Bank, and in the bank at that moment a solemn group of men were waiting around a table for this man to appear. Among the papers and memoranda was a used checkbook in which canceled checks amounting to $60,000 had been pasted back against the stubs.

In an hour it was known the finances of the bank were in a bad way. After a short examination someone started the cry, "Blackmail!"

"Find the woman!" echoed the police.

The First Woman in the Case

Shortly afterward there was a heavy and unfamiliar footstep outside the portals of the "love bungalow" an ominous rap at the door and June Bacon received her summons as the first woman in the case. A former maid and neighbors were questioned about the goings on in the alleged love nest.

Yes, June Bacon did have other friends than Mr. Popp, said the ex-maid. There was another man named Ross Miller, she declared. She didn't know much about him or his occupation. She had quit her job because Miller always would come when Popp was absent and would question her about Popp, when he had come and what he had said and done. On the other hand, Popp knew about Miller and always was asking her when he had been there and what Miller had said and done. Between the two of them life was miserable and she had quit before there was a battle.

The maid said she had heard arguments between June and Ross Miller and between June and Fred Popp. Popp, she said, had complained about the extravagant purchase of rugs, but after June had given him a good "cussin' out" he would go and pay the bills. The argument between June and Miller had been about Popp, and she had heard June say that Miller should leave Popp to her as she knew how to handle him.

Assistant State's Attorney Robert McMillan sent for June. She entered his office in a dramatic fashion. On one side she leaned on the arm of her attorney, Charles E. Erbstein. On the other she bore down on a silver-topped ebony cane. She said she was just recovering from the influenza.

Reporters were excluded but the gist of the interview was obtained.

What were her relations with Popp?

Well, she had invested $300 through him at one time and $400 at another, receiving the handsome return of $1200.

Had there been any other income?

Oh, yes; she had bet on a horse recently at Tia Juana track and had won $1000. She had then bought an automobile for $2300. She had $10,000 in savings.

Then came the question as to who had paid for the "love bungalow," with the underground passage to the garage.

Miss Bacon, who had shown symptoms of an approaching fainting spell, was almost overcome at this point in the interview. She turned appealing to Erbstein, but the attorney looked and remained mute.

Well, she had bought it herself, of course.

When?

"Why, at different times—couldn't just remember dates and amounts.

She knew Ross Miller?

Yes; in fact she had been engaged to him. She had not married him because he broke his promises.

"When I first came to Chicago, Ross and I were sweethearts," she said. "I was new in the city and he vouched for my lease at the Chateau Apartments, but I didn't live with him. Oh, yes, his name was on the bell with mine, but that didn't mean anything. He came to see me pretty often, though."

No; she had never induced Popp to loan Miller $15,000. She had merely suggested to Miller he might get the money from Popp.

"It is a mistake," she went on, "to say that Miss Heilman and I drew our money out of Mr. Popp's bank on the day of the suicide. How could we? I never had a cent in that bank in my life, and I don't think Miss Heilman had, although I am not sure where she kept her money.

Learned of Suicide Through Papers.

"The first I heard of Mr. Popp's suicide was when I read about it in the papers. You see, my nurse and I had gone out in my car to get a little air and stopped at Claire Heilman's house. We talked about the suicide there and Claire spoke of how dreadful it was. She didn't say anything about going away though.

"No, I don't think she was having any affair with Mr. Popp. I don't think he would have done that."

And, so far as the reporter could learn, that was the essence of the interview.

Miss Heilman responded to the call of McMillan.

"Mr. Popp did not love me," she said. "My relations with him were strictly business and I want to convince the world of this before I begin my career on the stage, as I have planned. I have lived 20 years in the last two weeks and I want to do something worth while in serious drama."

"Did you know Mr. Popp was married?" she was asked.

"Of course I did. I thought he would have been a very nice friend for my girl friend to have, only he was married."

"How much a year do you spend on clothes?"

"Well, you'd be surprised. I get travelers' samples very cheap. I know how to buy. Now, this coat, the gossipy neighbors call it a $2000 garment. It cost me just exactly $398, marked down. I still owe $125 on it."

Incidentally, the investigation of the bank's affairs has led to the indictment of David Weideman Jr., vice president of the bank. In the meantime the institution has been reorganized and reopened, and its new president, Henry S. Savage, former State Bank Examiner, elected to succeed Popp, has announced that in a short time it will be able to pay 100 cents on the dollar to its depositors. The $400,000 shortage, he said, would be covered by an emergency fund raised in the refinancing plan. Directors have diverted 20 per cent of their savings to buy stock in the bank.

But June Bacon is not satisfied. She is not so sure Popp fired the shot that ended his life. She comments thus:

"I am informed someone has confessed that they stole from the bank, that there were slips placed in the cash drawers and money taken in exchange by others. What was Mr. Popp doing in the vicinity of his death? I am only a Polly of the Circus, not a lawyer, but I cannot see the purpose of putting through the third degree women who had nothing to do with the affairs of the bank. Who started the cry of 'find the woman'? There may have been a reason. Well, they have found the women. Suppose now they start out to find the men."

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

EYE CONSERVATION CLINIC HERE FROM APRIL 22 TO 29

Will Be Part of the Observance of "Better Vision Week," by Eyesight Council of America.

Eye-strain chiefly affects diamond polishers, etchers, tailors and dressmakers and least affects farmers, trappers and hunters, according to a list of 114 occupations given out in conection with the "better vision week" of the Eyesight Conservation Council of America, in connection with which a free eye clinic will be open April 22 to 29 at the Hotel Statler.

Common laborers suffer little eye-strain, as shown in the list, but skilled workers, particularly lathe workers, stand well up toward the diamond polishers and jewelers. A recent survey of 2906 garment workers showed only 25 per cent with normal vision.

is a consummation devoutly to be wished as a monument to the memory of the man who all but wrecked it by his generosity after all but creating it by his devoted labor, even though to restore the misused savings and rehabilitate the bank, he raided the life insurance companies.

Gibbs took his first life insurance about seven years ago. He was hard to sell then, but during the past year he became a veritable gold mine for the insurance agents. Usually he took the limit in the company soliciting him. Two agents, after writing him for the limit in their companies, switched allegiance to other companies and repeated. If he took less than the limit it was the usual thing for the agent, after writing him for, say, $20,000, to bring along a supplemental policy of, say, $30,000, which Gibbs took quite as a matter of course and wrote a check for the premium. It is understood that he took out about $400,000 within the past year. The premiums were several times as much as his salary.

Although the bulk of the insurance was written during the past year and most policies are not incontestible until after the expiration of one year, it is not expected that payment will be contested, because under the Missouri law an insurance company, to escape liability on the ground of suicide must establish that self-destruction was contemplated when the policy was taken.

At one time most of his insurance was made payable to his estate, the usual thing when large protection is taken on account of pending transactions. Following his death, however, it was found that, except for liberal annuity provision for his wife, the bulk of the insurance was made payable to his parents. It is conjectured that, by reason of his close association with his father, he felt that this disposal was better calculated to serve the intended purpose of protecting the depositors.

A week ago last Sunday, Lonnie Gibbs felt himself being pushed to the wall, with no way of escape. That is, no way but one. For that one he had made his preparations. He spent the day and evening at the bank working on the books. His father was there part of the afternoon. If one questions why a man who meant to kill himself at the end of the day spent that day toiling over his books, the answer seems to be that he wished to leave, fully posted, the separate books in which he kept faithful account of the depositors' savings he had misused, so that there would be no difficulty in making amends to them from the funds he was to make available by sending a bullet into his head.

So he toiled on until darkness came and the lights were turned on and people on their way to church, or elsewhere, took notice and said "Lonnie's working again tonight."

He did not go home for dinner, but that was not unusual. About 8 o'clock his task was finished. Bob Stokes, the negro janitor, had been in and out, making himself useful. Now, Gibbs said to him: "You can go and get me something to eat now, Bob," and gave him 50 cents for the purpose, and Stokes took a basket and went to the home of the woman who prepared Gibbs' meals when he did not go home. He smiled his old smile as Stokes went away.

Then, alone, he went into the vault and closed the door without locking it and seated himself in a chair, thinking, presumably, that Stokes, returning presently, would look for him and find him there. He placed the muzzle of a revolver to his right temple. The sound of the shot was muffled by the walls of the vault. He crumpled in the chair. He had paid the price for the insurance money that was needed to balance his books.

The negro returned. The bank was alight, but Gibbs was not there. Stokes supposed he had stepped out on the street. He waited a few minutes, then left the basket of food where Gibbs would find it and went to his sleeping place in the basement.

At 2 a. m. Gibbs' wife called his father-in-on the telephone. Lonnie had not come home, she said. The father hastened downtown. He found a policeman and they awakened the janitor. Then they searched the bank and in the vault they found Lonnie Gibbs dead.

There never was such a funeral in Kirksville. All business places were closed and classes were suspended at the three colleges. It was set for 2:30 o'clock and at 1 o'clock the church was filled. Scores claiming no kinship wept unashamed. They brought flowers and piled them high upon his grave. Nobody knew then that his accounts were short. The cause of his act was a mystery. But if it had been known it would not have made any difference, unless to make grief greater, for now they believe that this friendliest of men killed himself, a willing sacrifice, for his friends.

Bill Rogers the Cowboy Humorist Says—

By Will Rogers.

Copyright, 1923, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

WELL, there has been quite a bit happened since I last communed with you. Spring is coming; I can tell by the poetry and the real estate ads. A poet exists all year just to get his poem published in the spring. Then when he sees it in print he starts getting next spring's verse all ready. Those early spring real estate ads read: "This house is located on the shady bank of a beautiful stream." Say, if there is a beautiful stream anywhere now the railroad runs along it and all you have to do is to get run over by a freight train to reach this beautiful stream.

A favorite ad is, "Beautiful home in heart of the most exclusive residential district, 5 master bedrooms and 9 baths; owner going to Europe." Now, let's just take that ad out and dissect it and see what it is.

Five master bedrooms! Now, they get that master junk from English ads, where the man may be the master. Still, I don't know why they call all the rooms his. Over here they call them master bedrooms, but the wife will pick out the poorest one for him, and keep the other four good ones for company.

Now, to the ordinary man on reading this ad of 9 baths, that would be an insult to his cleanliness. A man would have to be awful busy to support that many baths, unless, of course, he neglected some of them. The ad might better have read, "Buy our home and live in a bathtub." The biggest part of city homes nowadays have more baths than beds. So, while they can't always ask their company to stay all night, as they have no place to put them, they can at least ask them to bathe. So, when you are invited out now, you can always be assured of your private bath, but you must leave before bedtime.

When you visit a friend's newly finished home you will be shown through all the bathrooms, but when you leave you couldn't, to save your soul, tell where the dining room was. They seem to kinder want to camouflage or hide that nowadays. There is such little eating being done in the homes now that a dining room is almost a lost art. Breakfast is being served in bed, dinner at the cabaret, with dancing attached, and lunch—no up-to-date man would think of going anywhere but to his clubs for lunch.

Now, as the dining room space has been eliminated to make room for an additional bath, most of the eating, if one happens to be entertaining at home, is done off the lap. This custom of slow starvation has shown vast improvement of late. Instead of the napkins being of paper, why, they have been supplanted by almost-linen ones, with beautiful hemstitching. That's to try and get your mind off the lack of nourishment. As I say, the napkin is hand sewn, but the lettuce sandwiches still come from the delicatessen.

Why, in the good old days they couldn't have fed you on your lap, 'cause you couldn't have held all they would give you.

It's not the high cost of living that is driving us to the poorhouse, it's the high cost of bathing. The big question today is not what are you going to pay for your plot of ground, but what kind of fixtures are you going to put in your legion of bathrooms.

The interest on unpaid-for bathrooms would pay our national debt.

Now, mind you, I am not against this modern accomplishment, or extravagance, of ours. I realize that manufacturers of fixtures have advanced their art to the point where they are practically modern Michael Angelos. Today those interior bath decorators can almost make one of those things inviting enough to get in without flinching.

But, in doing so, they have destroyed an American institution, and ruined the only calendar that a child ever had. That was the Saturday night bath. In those good old days he knew that the next morning after that weekly ear-washing he was going to Sunday school. Now he has not only eliminated the bath on Saturday but has practically eliminated the Sunday school.

But, in those days, that old kitchen stove was kept hot after supper. And not only the teakettle was filled, but other pots and pans, and the family washtub was dragged up by the fire, and you went out to the well and helped your pa draw some water to mix with that hot. While you was doing that, your maw was getting out all the clean clothes and a fixing the buttons, and a laying out the schedule of who was to be first. And she was the only one could tell just how much hot water to put in to make it right. And if anybody had to feel of the hot water and get burned, it was always her, not you, and she found dirt behind, and in, your ears that all the highfaluting fixtures in the world can't find today.

Now that was an event. It meant something. But now bathing is so common there's no kick to it. It's just bla!

The Romans started this bath rag. They used to have the most beautiful baths, kind of a municipal bath, where they all met and strolled around and draped themselves on marble slabs. It was a kinder society event. It compared to our modern receptions. I have seen some beautiful paintings of them. They did look, oh, just too cunning, sunning themselves out on the concrete banks of those pools. It must have been like visiting our modern beaches, where no one can swim but the life guard, and they don't know that he can, as he has never been called on to go in. But, like those Romans, our girls can arrange themselves in the most bewitching shapes out on the sand, which, after all, must be much more comfortable than the asphalt that those little Caesars had to spread themselves over.

Statistics have proven that there are 25 bathtubs sold to every Bible.

And 50 to every dictionary, and 389 to every encyclopedia.

Proving that, while we may be neglecting the interior, we are looking after the exterior.

If the Father of our Country, George Washington, was Tutankhamened tomorrow, and, after being aroused from his tomb, was told that the American people today spend two billion dollars yearly on bathing material, he would say: "What got 'em so dirty?"

LETTERS DESCRIBE EXCAVATIONS AT UR

Portion of Moon God's Temple Wall Revealed at Birthplace of Abraham.

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Interesting reports are being received here on the archeological excavations being made in Ur of the Chaldees, the ancient city that is being explored by the joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum.

Letters from C. Leonard Woolley, head of the expedition in Mesopotamia, describe the progress of the excavation, where diggers have unearthed a portion of the wall of the temple of the Moon God, said by Woolley to be the oldest and largest temple of Babylonia.

The wall shows several reconstructions at different periods. On the upper part an inscription was found giving the name of Nebuchadnezzar as the restorer of the upper section, while another inscription shows that the main part was built by Ur-Engur in the third millenium, B. C.

While the chief popular interest in Ur of the Chaldees arises from the fact that it is mentioned in the book of Genesis as the birthplace of Abraham, scholars will find even greater interest in tracing its history backward through the millenium that preceded Abraham, whose date was about 2000 B. C.

The joint expedition of the British Museum and the University Museum was organized last summer and reached Mesopotamia in November. Work has proceeded until the present time, as the climate has been particularly favorable for excavation. One hundred and fifty natives have been kept at work, a light railroad has been laid down and a house erected to accommodate the members of the expedition, which consists of Woolley, John Newton, archeologist and architect, and Sidney Smith, reader of cuneiform writing.

Ur lies on the border of the Syrian desert, six miles from the Euphrates and not far from the head of the Persian Gulf. The nearest point of contact is Basra.

It is planned that excavations will be carried on each season until the heat becomes intolerable, or about the middle of April. By employing from 150 to 250 men and utilizing as much modern machinery as is possible in scientific excavation, it is believed that a few seasons will uncover some of the more important parts of the city, and furnish an abundance of material for historical interpretation.

There was an elaborate ritual connected with the worship of the Moon God. A large number of priests were employed under the authority of the high prelate and, according to an ancient inscription, the last King of Babylon, Nabonidus, who lived in the sixth century B. C., consecrated his daughter as high priestess and prophetess in the temple at Ur. The inscription tells how she lived in her own house close to the temple, where a guard was perpetually on watch. She was not only the high priestess, but the leading oracle of the god.

As the calendar was based on the moon, it is supposed that the study of astronomy was one of the activities of the priesthood of the temple.

A speakers' bureau has been established nd 100 factories signed up for a series of lectures on "Cause of Disease" and "Prevention of Tuberculosis," to begin Wednesday. Illustrated lectures will be given once a week at department stores. Health talks to be given with moving pictures in the city parks also are also planned for the summer.

Examination of children in parochial schools, in which Archbishop Glennon has offered a prize for the school with the most children physically fit, will be carried out more extensively, as will the Modern Health Crusade, which seeks to inculcate healthful habits by games and which the Board of Education has been asked to adopt in the city public schools.

Letters by Dr. L. P. H. Glands Used to Restore Hair Growth

Science of Gland Therapy Relieves Baldness—New Treatment Restores Health and Growth.

Baldness in both men and women is now generally ascribed by scientists to defective functioning of endocrine glands. Hair growth is dependent upon the secretions of these glands—these secretions making possible the assimilation of those elements in the blood which are vital to a luxurious growth of hair.

Now it is possible for any bald person to have a full, luxuriant growth of hair through the discovery of E. R. Alexander, nationally known scientist. Dr. Alexander, through the concentration of glands, can supply the deficiency of gland secretion and produce a full growth of hair.

This discovery may be easily used in the privacy of your own home. Within a few weeks you will notice new, vigorous hair beginning to come in and with this growth you can gradually restore your hair to its former bright, healthy color.

So confident is Dr. Alexander that you can be relieved of the embarrassment of baldness and regain the normal hair growth by this method that he offers to send a regular $4 treatment for only $2 to anyone who will write for it. Use it according to directions, and if at the end of a month you do not find your hair returning with all its former vigor, the treatment does not cost a cent.

SEND NO MONEY—Just your name and address to Alexander Laboratories, 476 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and this treatment will be mailed at once in plain wrapper. Try it according to directions and if at the end of a month you are not more than satisfied with results, your money will be refunded at once. A Kansas City bank guarantees that Dr. Alexander is reliable and holds $1000 cash as guarantee to return your money if requested.

Don't allow the embarrassment of baldness. Try the treatment a trial on this liberal offer.

SECOND INSTALLMENT OF LOVE MISSIVES BRINGS ROMANCE UP TO THEIR WEDDING DAY

Heir to Russian Throne Speaks Constantly of His Great Love for the Hessian Princess Who Was to Be His Consort—Early Weaving of the Romantic Ties Which Bound Him to Woman Who Was to Have So Great an Influence Upon Him Through His Ill-Starred Life—His Joy at Approach of the Marriage.

By ISAAC DON LEVINE.

THE last Czar's tragedy was his all-absorbing love for Princess Alix of Hesse, Queen Victoria's favorite granddaughter. As the remarkable story of this ill-fated love gradually unfolds itself before us in these letters, written in English and here first revealed to the world as a great historical document we obtain an insight into the forces that molded the character of the man who for 23 years held unlimited authority over a great empire.

The youthful Nicky, instead of training for his supreme role, surrendered himself completely to passion. When he asks sincerely of his bride: "What is the power you have used against me, having made me your prisoner for life?" he does not suspect that the answer is to be found not in her power, but in his own weakness. The process of utter self-obliteration keeps pace with the lover's rising passion and increased yearning for his Alix.

Right after the startling letters presented today were written, their author was occupying one of the proudest and mightiest thrones in the world. And yet in these missives we see him sink all of his pride, sacrifice all of his independence, efface the last vestiges of his personality, and place his entire life in the hands of his idolized girl.

Here, then, is the great tragedy of the Czar's life. His love undermined the stamina of his character. It made a rag out of him. And from the very beginning of his reign it portended his doom.

Months after the meeting of the Czarevitch and Princess Alix in England, narrated in these letters in last week's publication, and on the eve of another meeting of the two, the Czar, Alexander III, fell ill. One wonders if the intense curiosity manifested by Alix as to the Czar's health was not due to her ambition to be crowned as speedily as possible Empress of Russia. Certainly Nicky had no ambitions to become Czar and was very distressed as soon as he realized that his father was seriously ill.

In the Crimea, the Czar's condition did not improve and Nicky was at his side every day, but all the while was writing desperate love letters to his "Sunny," which he sometimes signed "Old Cow" and sometimes "Devoted Old Dog."

In one of these letters the youthful Prince cries out, "I am nothing any more, only a beam of Sunny's," a significant declaration which characterized all of Nicky's subsequent life as Emperor, exile and prisoner.

But marriage seemed distant and the two lovers were despondent until suddenly Alix was asked to come to the Crimea. Alexander III knew his end was approaching and wanted to see his Nicky married and settled.

The invitation was extended on Oct. 17, 1894, and less than a month later the Czar was dead and Nicholas succeeded to the throne. The marriage took place afterwards and was commemorated by the young Czar in a poem entitled, "WHY DID WE MARRY?" which he had copied and sent to his bride the day of the wedding.

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the second parcel of letters from the last Czar of the Russias to the Princess who later shared his throne. These remarkable missives, which have just been obtained by Isaac Don Levine from the Russian soviet authorities, constitute a most remarkable human document. This installment brings the royal courtship up to the wedding day. The 10 installments to follow today's go deeper and deeper into the life and workings of one of the greatest autocrats of modern times, whose destiny led him from the gayest capital of Europe to a miserable death on the Siberian steppes.

Why did we marry? 106

Why did we marry — you and I?
Ah! me, why did we in our youth
I vowed I loved — and your reply,
Heart-sung, yet silent, seemed truth.

Beside our loves now swelling free
How faint was that first throb, dear heart!
It was a babe that since has grown
Big as the world of which we're part.

Aye bigger yet, like Paradise,
For when you fold me to your breast,
Or I drink deep from your dear eyes,
The world's forgot with all the rest.

Give more, dear better half! I thirst
For all the love you once kept hid
What if we did not love at first?
Thank God, sweet wife, we thought we did."

November 1894 Yapeetor Cuo-

Nickey Much Grieved About Alixy's "Poor Leggies"

(Copyright, 1923—Reproduction of Letters, Facsimiles or Type-Matter Absolutely Prohibited.)

This installment of the Czar's love letters, written in English and never before published, begins with Nicholas' departure from England after his visit there with Princess Alix, and covers the intervening time up to his coronation and their marriage in November, 1894.

Czarevitch Nicholas is amused at the movement engineered from the French Foreign Office for a popularly subscribed wedding present for the future Czar. "Killing idea," he remarks, "the French people have got to give us a wedding present!"

On the other hand, his dislike for the Kaiser continues to manifest itself. Nicky was always anxious to avoid him, perhaps because he felt inferior to Willy. He so planned a visit to the home of Alix in Germany as to keep out of the Kaiser's path.

After his visit with Princess Alix to Queen Victoria in England in 1894, the Czarevitch embarked on the Polar Star for Copenhagen, originally the home of his mother. There he encountered Prince Henry, the Kaiser's brother, who made very seriously such impossible remarks that I nearly died in the carriage." Nicky observes. One can only guess what those remarks were.

Henry's "Impossible Remarks."

He sends this letter from Amalienborg, the seat of the royal palace, near Copenhagen:

My Own Beloved Lovy-Dear: I leave this evening at 9:30, which enables me to miss a rotten evening party at Uncle Freddy's house, where a tremendous lot of people are coming. I gave your love to Henry, he was very touched and returns you his. We drove yesterday through the illuminated town, he, Mamama and I. (Amama is Nicky's grandmother, Queen of Sweden.) Henry made, very seriously, such impossible remarks that I nearly died in the carriage!

With many tender kisses, fondest thanks and blessings, my own precious little Alixy, my bridy-dear, my primrosy sweet, I remain with unending true devotion, your own for ever and ever (yours, yours), deeply loving, truly devoted, faithful, loving old boysy,

NICKY.

Back at Peterhof the rhapsody of his passion for his "precious Alixy-dear" mounts higher.

All through 1894, until his marriage to the Princess in November, and afterward, his letters continue daily. They are filled with the passionate outpourings of his enchanted soul.

Nicky at Sister's Wedding.

In the following letter the Czarevitch describes the marriage of his sister Xenia to "Sandro," Grand Duke Alexander:

PETERHOF, Aug. 6, 1894.

My Sweet Alixy-Dear: I am only just back from Xenia's marriage! She, Sandro's wife—too stunning an idea for words! But still I am delighted for them both, because the poor creatures have waited really long enough!

We all went to the big palace a little before 3 o'clock and there her wedding dress was put on, with a mantle over it, that four gentlemen had to carry, a crown on the head and long curls hanging down. She looked very nice in that white dress of hers with silver embroidery, and the only jewels she put on, except those belonging to the crown, was our little star, which she pinned on her shoulder!

I was quite astonished when I saw her standing in the middle of the church by his side—she looked so happy and so remarkably calm, not the least shy. She even glanced two or three times toward me and I caught a smile, which meant to say that she had at last arrived to this moment, when she stood beside him in front of the altar.

Good-by and God's blessing upon you, my precious, sweet Alix. I love you. I love you, better, fuller, stronger every day! Many tender kisses and loving thanks from your ever truly devoted and deeply loving, loving, your own unto death old boysy, NICKY.

Give my fondest love to Ducky and Ernie. Sweetykins, lovy-darling, I am slowly going mad without you!!

Late in August, Nicholas begins to be anxious about the health of his father, the Czar. After writing on Aug. 22, "Today, fancy, it is already a month that we spent our last evening together! When I so shamefully fell asleep instead of talking and kissing your sweet face," he said, "the doctor has come and seen dearest papa. He says, 'Papa is simply overtired.' How kind of you, my sweet one, to ask of his news."

The next day he writes his "darling lovey dear":

How did the news about my father not being quite well reach you, my sweetykins? I also got a telegram from granny (Queen Victoria) asking me how he felt. Poor papa is in very low spirits, having to give himself up into the hands of the doctors, which is itself a bore.

And then he reveals, "I had my hair cut and beard trimmed a little, just as lovey likes it."

In a note the following day Nicky seemed to anticipate somewhat the refrain of a popular song of later years: "Me wants a tender kiss from your soft lips and me wants to rest my fevered head on sweety's shoulder." And a few days later he again yearned "to lean against a dear shoulder."

The future Czar evidently considered it quite amusing that the French people were taking an interest in his wedding. He writes:

My darling, I really cannot stand this separation any longer—it is slowly killing me. I have become a bore to everyone! I am frightfully absent and make nothing but confusion in talk and in deed also! Alixy, don't be deaf to your boysy's call! I send you this bit I cut out of the papers—killing idea the French people have got, to give us a wedding present!

The Czar's condition again gives Nicky concern, for he writes:

PETERHOF, Aug. 28, 1894.

My Own Beloved Alixy: Many thanks for your dear No. 82, which gave me such a great pleasure, as none came yesterday! So your poor leggies have again hurt you? Very naughty of them. I wish I were there to have rubbed them, at least!

I don't know, but I feel so frightfully low today and this evening, especially. I don't like dear papa's look at all, he coughs so much, they say it is an irritation of the throat. Then, he hardly can sleep for more than a couple of hours in the night, which of course wears him out completely for the rest of the day—to think that this is the result of having worked too much by night, sometimes even often, up to 3 o'clock in the morning! I cannot tell you, my darling, how this depresses me!

The Czar's "Sad" Letter

Анитчков Дворецъ
С Петербургъ.

My own precious little Sunny.

I awoke with your sweet name on my lips & prayed so deeply & fervently for your welfare health & happiness. My own little one my love for you is unspeakable — it fills me utterly & makes the darkness of these days — bright God bless you my Alixy yr own manny Nicky

"The darkness of these days," which he mentions, is due to the mourning after his father, Alexander III, who died a few days before.

The Russian words under the date line mean "Anitchkoff Palace, St. Petersburg."

How Nicky Dodged the Kaiser

Four days later he writes from the great Beloviezh Forest, where the Czar hastened in the hope of regaining his health:

Papa hates to have doctors fiddling round him (which I perfectly understand myself). This idea haunts him, of course. Today even he told me that he would feel quite happy, only when he could get rid of them.

Though this is far from being funny, I can't help smiling, when mama urged him to listen to what the doctor says—because his answers are so simple and yet so childish—it makes me love him still the more! But he won't take any narcotic, because he never used it before! Such things he answers. Well, and what is one to do? One cannot order him to take this or that!

In his letter the following day he has enlightening comment on his attitude toward the Kaiser:

BELOVIEZH, Sept. 2, 1894.

My Own Darling Alixy: I wrote to Toria today; they are already in Denmark. They did not look forward to their going there, poor things. Being quite alone is not very gay there. They wanted to go straight to Scotland, after leaving Russia! I DON'T THINK THERE IS A CHANCE FOR WILLIAM (the Kaiser) TO POUNCE UPON ME, because I go on purpose much more to the South—through Dresden and then Frankfurt, I think! But unwillingly I have cheated him; you remember he invited me to his maneuvers at Koenigsberg or Danzig in the beginning of this month, but I refused because our great ones near Smolensk were to take place at the same time.

And now—here I am, in the midst of a huge forest, in hopes of getting some sport, but longing most frightfully the whole time, for my own little bridy-sweet. Yes, my Alixy, I do long for you, madly, desperately and so deeply passionately! Me wants a kiss and heady wants to lean against a dear shoulder, where it always feels so quiet and so peaceful!

Loves His Daily Bath

A day or two later he gives some personal touches:

My Own Sweet Darling: I am just out of my beautiful big bath, where I kicked about and splashed as a real baby, and now feel refreshed after the shooting. You must not suppose that I don't take my bath every day, sweety—oh, no. If I have one quality, it is a passion for washing and to be as clean as I can be! But why did not I get any letter from Sunny since yesterday's morning?

Damn the electric light, it suddenly went out and left me in utter darkness! I had to poke about for matches and light the candles!

The doctors, it seems, were insisting that the Czar would have to go to the Crimea, the warmer climate, but the Emperor stubbornly refused to believe that he was sick, although his death was but two months off. Finally, in mid-September, he gave in and was persuaded to go there. But he was anxious for his son to see his sweetheart, as Nicky revealed:

Alixy, darling beloved one, I have just this minute asked my dear papa whether he wanted me to go with him to the Crimea, and he answered, no, as he was sure I was awaited by someone in Darmstadt—and no—oh! joy, less than a week today I will be with you, my own precious little girly.

Now I shall really go mad for joy; the bliss of seeing you again, of being near you. When I just now came into my room, I cried like a little child, from this unexpected joy.

Many tender kisses do I press on your dear forehead—and remain, Sunny adored one, your own ever-loving, devoted, faithful and most happy manny, NICKY.

"I Bring Bad Luck to People"

A little later he writes from Spala, in the great forest, of his complete subjection to Alix, which continued the rest of his life:

My Own Sweet Sunny: My sweet, precious Alixy, my love is growing still more powerful. Why would you look at me so sternly at the balls in 1889? I can't forget the impression the constant gaze of the "oceans" (her eyes) made upon me. I remember not being able to make out what it meant. Joy, despair, astonishment, shyness overcame me, but still the gaze went on piercing me through and through and burning me, stirring up hope and fear, joy and sorrow!

You were an enchantress then, my sweet one, now it is not difficult to pull poor manny in and completely absorb him in yourself! I am nothing any more, only a beam of Sunny, because I come out of you—what an end of a cowboy? Darling, beloved one, you see what rot I am saying, do not scold me for being so stupid, but this is a proof to you of the state I am in—a sort of gelatine!"

LIVADIA, Oct. 6, 1894.

My Own Darling Sunny Dear: How happy I was yesterday to get three sweet letters from you, my Alixy. I nearly cried for joy. Love sweet, were we but married now already and all the nuisances were left behind! Sunny, but that is quite impossible for me to remain till your Christmas—you forget my duty and my service—what a dream that stay might have been!

It is strange, but from the very beginning I was sure something was to come that would prevent us from seeing each other much and keep us waiting and longing vainly to meet hand in hand before the day of our marriage arrived.

I bring bad luck to people. I know that! I think you do to animals, you told me once. People will always say nonsense. I heard of a stupid rumor when I came back from England that you, my sweet one, did not want to come to Russia, and that you were already sorry you had given your consent. Isn't it too stupid? I got furious when I heard it and explained the reason why you wished to stay at home for some time more.

But tongues are made for chattering and repeating the greatest rot possible—that has always been and will for ever go on—so I generally spit at such things and don't bother myself a moment about those sort of rumors. I have not seen very much of life yet, but that which I already have lived through has taught me to take things or events from a philosophical point of view, which helps me to bear them easier!

All through the days of his epistolary courtship, Nicky has been anxious about the sad state of poor Alix's legs, as shown by repeated references, but at last, to his relief, he seems to have discovered the reason for her suffering:

There is no change for the better yet in father dear's condition; when the nights are good he feels gay and stronger, but as soon as he has no sleep he is a different man next day. Of course this change cannot come on so quickly, but I do hope so that the warmth and strengthening sea air will do dear papa some good at least.

Mother dear, too, is not feeling quite well—the pains still continue; she can't get up from her chair alone, etc.

Kaiser "Fidgets" About So.

Now I quite well understand the origin of sweety's sufferings in her poor legs. It is only the nerves they come from. Ach! If I could only be of any help to them, but in such cases I feel so absolutely ignorant that not a single idea will come into my rotten head. I sit there, after the meals, either reading or picking my poor nose!

A few weeks later he has some news for "precious Sunny" about Queen Victoria and Kaiser William:

I got a very kind letter from dear old granny, really she is most touching! Oh, what she wrote to me about my Sunny, she even copied out a phrase from your letter—tho thweet! I am simply bombarded by telegrams from everywhere, all the uncles and aunts, foreign Princes, Archdukes, etc., asking about my dearest father's health. It is difficult answering them, as I hate putting details in telegrams and yet I must say the truth.

William (the Kaiser) must be coming soon on his official visit to Ernie. I must say I would not like to be in his (Ernie's) place!

Nothing I hate so much as those visits and then dear William does fidget about so awfully! Still, if you see him, sweety mine, give him some messages from me.

Then came the joyful news that his parents, the Czar and Czarina, wanted Alix to come and visit them, so as to be near Nicholas. This was only a short month before the death of the Czar and Nicholas' accession to the throne. He writes:

LIVADIA, Oct. 17, 1894.

My Own Precious Darling: This moment I sat down to begin this letter. Mama sent for me, so I ran over to their house . . . to hear a delightful news: that they wanted you so much to come here and spend a quiet time in Livadia!

Fancy the joy and bliss of seeing my Sweety here soon, God grant! Dear papa was already in bed and he told me so kindly that he felt so sorry for me, that on account of his being unwell he kept me involuntarily away from you. I cannot tell you, my own sweet little girly, how deeply touched I was by those loving words of his—I saw tears in his eyes.

Oh, Sunny—Sunny, you will come to your impatient but deeply loving manny, won't you? It is to be my last letter—I think yes—they take ages to come. Is it not strange how we have changed our parts—you are coming to me now, instead of manny flying off to his bridy. God bless you, my sweet Alixy, and may He bring you safely to us and to your own ever and for ever loving and utterly devoted passionately adoring Petly, NICKY.

I love you daily stronger, fuller and purer!

After her arrival is this short breakfast note. The Uncle Bertie and Aunt Alix mentioned are the subsequent King Edward of England and Queen Alexandria:

LIVADIA.

Darling: Uncle Bertie and Aunt Alix have stopped for the night at Sebastopol. Probably it was too rough and he did not feel inclined to feed the fish! They arrive at 9:30 at Jalta, so perhaps my sweety will come at 9 to breakfast with her ever truly devoted and deeply adoring NICKY.

His Touch of Cone Philosophy.

Then came the death of the Czar, Alexander III, and the royal family in St. Petersburg is making preparations for the coronation of Nicholas and his marriage to Alix, so quickly on the heels of the funeral of the dead monarch. Nicholas writes her with a touch of Coue philosophy:

ANITCHKOFF PALACE,
PETERSBURG,
Nov. 16, 1894.

My Own Precious Little Darling: Only a line as I won't see you till 4 o'clock. Oh, my sweet one—me loves you too deeply and passionately for words. I cannot tell you how cruel it seems to have to take leave of you every evening, my own beloved angel. Thank you again for that pretty little image—how I prayed yesterday under its blessing. My love, my only one, bless you for the comfort, happiness and peace you give me when you are with me. "Better, better, every day." A loving kiss from your very loving NICKY.

Quickly on the heels of that comes another letter:

ANITCHKOFF PALACE,
St. Petersburg.

Sweety Mine: Bless you for the dear lines you sent me over, they overjoyed my aching and longing old heart. There are no words to tell you of my strong and ever-growing love and adoration for you, my own Sunny sweet, but you must feel it, my darling. I have been a little out in the garden—the weather is better, it is not so damp.

I look through the window with three lamps, but my eyes cannot, alas, pierce the walls of your house, so me cannot see Sweety until she comes this afternoon to her very own, ever truly and tenderly loving and devoted old manny, NICKY.

I kiss you, my precious one.

ANITCHKOFF PALACE, St. Petersburg, Saturday, Nov. 24, 1894.

My Own Precious Little Sunny: I awoke with your sweet name on my lips and prayed so deeply and fervently for your welfare, health and happiness. My own little one, my love for you is unspeakable—it fills me utterly and makes the darkness of these days bright. God bless you, my Alixy. Your own manny, NICKY.

NEXT SUNDAY'S INSTALLMENT—The letters now continue from the Czar's accession to the throne and marriage up to the eve of the World War. They continue reveal many intimate historic de- in the same passionate strain, but tails. Among many other things, they treat of the influence at the Russian court of a sinister forerunner of Rasputin and the Czar's impression of the Kaiser on his visit to Berlin in 1913.

Following these are letters of the greatest importance, during the war, which the Czar wrote with the utmost freedom.

Memorial to Mrs. Mary M. Anderson.

A stained glass window in memory of the late Mrs. Mary M. Anderson, wife of Charles H. Anderson of 4732 McPherson avenue, a real estate dealer, has been installed at Christ Church Cathedral. It is the gift of Anderson. The window is 62 inches high and 23 inches wide and shows a female figure kneeling at the feet of Christ, who is comforting her. Beneath is the quotation, "He giveth his beloved sleep," and above is a cross and crown. Mrs. Anderson was active in the work of the cathedral and was secretary of the Woman's Guild for years. She was an invalid for about 12 years.

INGROWN TOE NAILS

Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen Skin Underneath

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

The New Lloydalet

A Baby Carriage That Is Also a Stroller

You mothers know how rapidly baby outgrows his first carriage. This new Lloydalet combines the baby carriage which he needs at first with the stroller which he requires later on.

It is wide and roomy; almost as spacious as the largest carriage, yet it is lighter and smaller than any baby carriage made. Mothers find it easier to handle; and apartment dwellers find its modest size very convenient.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, these beautiful Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

Ask your dealer to show you Lloydalets.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand.

Don't accept a substitute. Find the Lloyd nameplate on the seat.

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of labor unions and the Communist and Socialist Parties, showing the trend of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

An Insult to Sacco.
(From the Seattle Union-Record, Labor.)

Adding insult to deepest injury is the only explanation of the action of Judge Webster Thayer in ordering an examination of Nicola Sacco's sanity as he lies upon his prison bed on the thirty-first day of his hunger strike.

Unimaginable as it may be to the stodgy jurist, there are still left in America men who will risk death for their convictions. Sacco was one of them.

It should be noted that the Boston Bar Association has interested itself actively in the Sacco case now, determined to see what kind of justice has been meted out to him and his companion, Bartolomeo Vanzetti. If there is any examination to be made, let it be made into the practice of American jurisprudence. The National Bar Association recently advised a complete overhauling of our judicial system with just such cases as the Sacco-Vanzetti trial in mind.

The imputation that, a man who hunger strikes in protest against the viciousness of a prejudiced trial is crazy is deeply insulting not only to Sacco, but to the millions in America whose causes have at various times been represented by hunger strikes. Our suffragists had to do this and with remarkable success. Probably the most noteworthy example in recent history is the hunger strike of Terence MacSwiney, which broke the spirit of the British Government.

The heart of labor is with Nicola Sacco today. Workers know that if he is insane it is because he has been driven so by a vile persecution, but in the absence of proof of insanity they care rather to level that charge at the social system, which seeks to break the Saccos and Vanzetti on its rack.

Why It Is Tyranny.
(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

Harding can go to Florida and enjoy himself—and the political prisoners can stay in jail and do time for exercising the traditional American right of freedom of speech. Harding could release them with a stroke of his pen. He does not do so—because he and his friends do not believe what the political prisoners said was true. Probably if we knew all they said we would not believe it either. But what difference does that make?

The essence of free speech is that you let the other fellow have the same liberty of expression which you claim for yourself, no matter whether you agree with him or not. It is this great fundamental principle which our officials have undermined—and, by doing so, have earned for themselves the names of tyrants. It is not mere idle use of language when we call them tyrants. Their actions are the quintessence of tyranny—and the appellation is accurate.

Back in the eighteenth century a French encyclopedist, Claude Adrien Helvetius, wrote a book—De l'Esprit, by name—which was condemned by the Parliament of Paris to be publicly burned. Voltaire wrote to him, "I wholly disapprove of what you say, and will defend to the death your right to say it."

That is the correct attitude. Neither the capitalist politicians who deny I. W. W.'s and communists freedom of speech, nor communists who deny Socialists and capitalists freedom of speech, have the broad-mindedness of Voltaire. Freedom of speech and press lies at the very basis of civilized society. Without these fundamentals there is no freedom at all.

Borah and Recognition of Russia.
(From the Worker, Communist Organ.)

There are several motifs driving for recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. Militant labor demands it, knowing it will be an aid to the Russian and the world revolution. Unthinking workers feel that it will provide more jobs, as it will, through the development of trade, so they are for it. Farmers, similarly, see an outlet for the surplus from their fields. Industrial overlords behold new opportunities to profiteer. And all the time the old party politician assures himself of an opportunity to make political capital for himself.

We give United States Senator William E. Borah credit for being sincere in his desires for the opening of trade relations with and the recognition of the Russian soviet republic. Yet his speech at Madison Square Garden left much to be desired. Since 16 different nations, among them Japan, have already cleared the way, it seems that a member of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, as Mr. Borah is, could make a much stronger fight for a thing in which he deeply believes.

Mr. Borah's address was more an apology to, rather than a defance of, the great capitalist forces in this country that have not only successfully opposed recognition of Russia's government, but have exerted their utmost strength in an effort to overthrow the first workers' republic.

It cannot be that Senator Borah is merely using the recognition issue as a political football to keep himself in the limelight. Those who have suspicions in that direction will watch closely his promised trip to soviet Russia. They will eagerly scan any statement of position upon his return. They will be watching to see whether Senator Borah will support his belief in recognition with the kind of a fight that will bring it about.

MAKING THE CONNECTION.
(From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

They have a congressional golf club in Washington and they sent out solicitors to induce rich men—nonresidents as well as residents—to join it and pay $1000 apiece for the privilege; 400 or 500 millionaires have availed themselves of the opportunity.

These millionaires will undoubtedly consider it an investment—and a very good investment at that. Personal familiarity with lawmakers goes a long way toward getting "the right kind" of legislation passed.

The rich have been very successful in getting the kind of legislation they wanted, up to the present time, without any golf club—but it will be all the easier when they come in close contact with the men who make the laws.

This snobbishness, however, is what the people vote for. They vote to have the laws made for the rich and against the common people. They can reverse this ultra-altruistic attitude at any congressional election.

On general principles, we believe in altruism. We want everybody to be unselfish. But it is only fool altruism that will hand all the good things over to a few rich hogs. The voters ought to think a little about their own children and the rest of the common run of humanity. That would be a species of altruism worth while.

SWEDES TO STUDY U. S. ROADS

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, March 10.—The complete modernization of Swedish roads, made desirable by the rapidly increasing automobile traffic, is being undertaken in earnest. The latest significant step in this movement is the establishment of a "Good Roads Institute" on the initiative of the Royal Automobile Club, which is now celebrating its twentieth anniversary.

American highways will be studied as models for Swedish construction. A Swedish expert highway engineer, Paul Wretlind, is in the United States for the purpose.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to comb or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it; then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you may have. This simple remedy never fails.

POLICE RELIEF CIRCUS TO OPEN TOMORROW

Two Performances Will Be Given Daily at Coliseum for 14 Days.

The fourth annual indoor circus of the St. Louis Police Relief Association, which will be given at the Coliseum twice daily for 14 days, will open tomorrow afternoon. The performances by David E. Russel, manager of the Columbia Theater, will have six platforms and in a ring, and will consist of many acts by recognized circus performers, assisted by the police band, police zouaves and police quartet. Five baggage cars and two sleepers were required to transport the talent and "properties" from winter quarters in Chicago and Peoria, Kan., to this city.

The show will open with a pageant headed by the mounted police, and this will be followed with a military drill by the zouaves, accompanied by the police band.

There will be head, teeth and hand slides by the flying Morales family of Mexicans, equestrain acts by some of the best known bareback riders of the profession, aerial performances on tight wires and trapeze, juggling acts, trained animal stunts, including a special feature by the "champion dancing horse," acrobatic feats of strength upside down by ringers, head and hand balancing acts and a score of novelty features. Comedy will be furnished by a troupe of 20 clowns.

Tickets sold by policemen in house-to-house canvass are $1 each, admitting two persons. Reserved seat tickets may be obtainable at 10 Olive street or at the Coliseum. The proceeds of the entertainment, which this year, are expected to exceed $100,000, will go to the Police Relief Association.

ORPHEUM CIRCUIT TO HONOR BERNHARDT BY A MEMORI

A memorial to Sarah Bernhardt is to be placed at the grave of the great French actress, who died last Monday, by the Orpheum Circuit, operating vaudeville theaters all over the United States and in Canada. Bernhardt's first appearance in American vaudeville was at the Majestic Theater, of this circuit, Chicago, in 1912. She toured the circuit that year and in 1918, stopping at St. Louis and presenting repertoires of selections from great plays.

The memorial, probably a bronze tablet, is intended to embody an expression of the affection which "the divine Sarah" inspired in those who knew her best, and to signify the place she held in the world of the theater.

There will be a contest, details of which will be announced soon, in which the design, conducted by the managers of the various Orpheum theaters, including that in St. Louis, a committee of nationally known artists will select the winning design. The winner will receive $250 in gold. There will be a second prize of $100 and three others of $50 each. Tokens will be given the winners and runners-up of sectional contests. It is suggested that the proposed tablet be about 3x4 feet. A statue or group of figures might be acceptable, however.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

An Expert Declares the "Peanut" Type Should Give 1000 Hours' Service.

By G. Y. ALLEN.
Radio Engineer, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co.

Considerable misinformation has been circulated from time to time on radio apparatus, its construction, use and application.

This is particularly true in the case of the WD-11 vacuum tube, the most popular tube on the market today and possessing the most attractive characteristics, to the average user.

The WD-11 tube is an excellent detector and when used in this capacity operates to best advantage at 22½ volts applied to the plate. Although values of grid condenser and grid leak are not at all critical, good average values are 2 megohms resistance for the grid leak and 250 micro mfds for the grid condenser.

All WD-11 tubes are exhausted to an extremely high vacuum and do not depend upon inclosed gas for their detecting properties. They are thus not critical in any adjustment either to filament current, plate voltage, or to the constants of the circuit in which they are used.

When used as an amplifier, the WD-11 tube may be supplied with plate voltages varying from 45 to 135 volts. Voltages upward to 200 volts may be used with corresponding increase in the volume without damage to the tube.

When using high voltages on the tube there appears at times within the cylindrical plate a blue glow that is sometimes mistaken by the uninformed as an indication of ionized gas such as would occur in a tube that has leaked or such as would be noted in a soft tube. This glow, however, in no way interferes with the operation of the tube and is thought to be caused by phosohorescence given off by the salts that are used to coat the filament.

On account of the low filament consumption of the WD-11 tube, the method of obtaining sufficient negative grid bias when the tube is used as an amplifier is an important factor. It so happens that due to the construction of the WD-11 tube no grid current will flow until the grid is from ½ to 1 volt positive with respect to the negative end of the filament. This gives the tube an effective natural bias of this amount which permits its use in amplifying circuits without additional grid bias when large volumes of sound are not required.

It is advisable, however, to obtain as much additional grid bias as possible, and in connecting WD-11 tubes in circuits the filament rheostat should in all cases be placed in the negative lead of the filament, and the filament end of the secondary of all amplifying transformers should be connected to the battery side of the rheostat. This will bias the grids to an extent corresponding to the drop in the rheostat.

Where great volumes are desired a C battery should be used to bias the grids, the voltage being from 3 to 5 volts with 100 volts on the plate.

The WD-11 tubes as now manufactured make very good radio frequency amplifiers.

Care should be used to see that dry batteries so connected are all fresh, and old batteries should never be connected in parallel with new batteries. A fresh dry battery will operate a WD-11 tube intermittently from 80 to 90 hours depending upon the length of intervals the tube is used. Of course, the battery current should always be turned off except when the tube is actually being operated.

The WD-11 tube is designed for operation from a single cell of 1½ volts standard dry battery. When more than one tube is used in parallel an additional standard battery should be used for each additional tube, all dry batteries being connected in parallel.

To indicate the manufacturers' desire to place the most acceptable apparatus in the hands of the public as conveniently as possible, they have arranged to furnish this same tube with a standard 6-volt base instead of the WD-11 base. This will permit owners of receiving sets provided with bases designed for storage battery tubes to obtain the advantages of the WD-11 tubes without using adapters.

Through processes that have been developed recently the WD-11 tube has been perfected to the point where, if not mistreated, its life is in the neighborhood of 1000 hours.

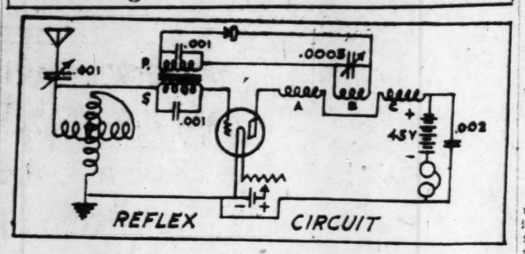
This new tube will be known as the WD-12 tube and will be absolutely identical in all of its characteristics and construction with the exception that it will be provided, as stated above, with a standard base.

GOVERNMENT ADOPTS NEW METHOD OF ASSIGNING CALLS

Mississippi River Is the Dividing Line Between the "K" and "W" Calls.

The Mississippi River is now the dividing line between the "K" calls of the West and the "W" calls of the East, as far as broadcasting stations are concerned. All new calls issued to broadcasting stations east of the Mississippi will begin with "W" and those west with "K," so the stations can be immediately identified as Atlantic or Pacific when the initial letter is heard. The stations already listed under "K" including K D K A, will retain their present calls.

A Single Tube Reflex Circuit



Simplicity of tuning and clear signals are claimed for this set.

Last Sunday, the Post-Dispatch published a diagram of the "Grimes" three tube reflex circuit. Interest in reflex circuits in the east seems to be rapidly spreading. Today, another form which requires only one tube, and uses a crystal detector, is shown.

"This circuit," says the New York Times, in which the above hook-up recently appeared, "because of its simplicity, economy in its vacuum tubes, and great amplifying ability, is one of the most popular radio circuits recently developed.

"Located in New York, this set has picked up loud signals from Iowa, Illinois, and as far south as Georgia. It is very selective and the tuning adjustments simple."

"The following parts are necessary: A standard variometer, one .001 mfd variable condenser, one .0005 mfd variable condenser, two .001 mfd mica fixed condensers, one .002 mfd mica fixed condenser, an amplifying tube, audio frequency amplifying transformer, crystal detector, "A" battery, rheostat, 45 volt "B" battery and phones. Coils A, B and C are wound on the same cardboard tube 3½ inches in diameter. No. 26 double cotton-covered wire is used for the winding. Coil A has 35 turns; coil B 50 turns; coil C 35 turns. Coils A and B are conected as shown in the diagram by a wire running inside the tube. A space of a quarter of an inch is left between the windings of coils A and B and between coils B and C. Tuning is done by means of the variometer and variable condensers.

"The signals produced with this circuit are exceptionally clear and free from distortion because of the crystal detector, which eliminates much of the noise created by tubes and batteries. The condensers in the circuit are extremely important. The coils should be made exactly as described."

RADIO QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Q. I have a variocoupler which I have been using with a crystal set. By adding a vacuum tube, batteries, etc., and variable condenser, could I hear distant stations? E. M.

A. Yes, provided a good aerial and ground is used.

Q. Which is the best for an aerial, aluminum or copper wire? T. M.

A. Copper is best to use because soldered joints are more easily made in copper than in aluminum.

Q. (1) Can an indoor aerial be used successfully with a crystal set? (2) Will a bottle serve the purpose as a form for winding tuning coils? R. B.

A. (1) Yes, but for short distances only. (2) Yes.

Q. I have a standard make of "peanut" tube receiving set. Would the addition of a loading coil increase the range of the apparatus? E. B.

A. It would increase the wavelength range, but not necessarily the range of the set in miles.

Q. Who invented radio broadcasting?

A. It was not "invented." It is the result of the development of and perfection of the radio telephone.

Q. Does the kind of "A" battery make any difference, that is, will a tube work as well with a dry cell as a storage battery? M. M.

A. Yes, the only difference is in the shorter life of the dry cell.

Q. (1) Could a fixed grid condenser of .0005 mfd. capacity be used in a hook-up calling for one of .00025 mfd? (2) What capacity should the phone condenser be?

L. F.

A. Yes, but do not expect quite as good results. (2) The phone condenser should be about .006 mfd.

Q. In your hook-up of a two-stage audio frequency amplifier two weeks ago, the rheostats were connected in the positive side of the filament circuit. Will it be all right to change them to the negative side for use with the new U V 201-A tubes? T. W. M.

A. Yes, this change should be made.

Q. Is the "fan type" aerial better for receiving than one long wire? R. M.

A. No, not for receiving, but it should be for sending.

Q. (1) Is there any difference between a "peanut" tube detector and a "peanut" tube amplifier? (2) Who handles the UV201-A tubes and what is the price? (3) Will the UV201-A's work on one dry cell? (4) Can a "peanut" tube be repaired when burned out? (5) What is the cost of a license to operate a small spark transmitting station? C. B.

A. (1) No, they are both the same. (2) They can be obtained from radio dealers whose names appear in the advertisements on this page. The price is $8.50 each. (3) No, they are rated at 5 volts. (4) Any kind of vacuum tube can be "repaired," that is, a new filament put in, by those equipped with the necessary apparatus. (5) The Government makes no charge for issuing radio licenses.

Q. Can a loop aerial be used with a single-circuit set? J. S.

A. No, not satisfactorily over any great distance, although signals can be heard locally with a large loop.

Q. Can a loud speaker requiring a local battery be used with a crystal detector? J. B.

A. Some types of loud speakers will operate with a crystal detector.

Q. When broadcasting concerts from places other than the studio in the Post-Dispatch Building, are the announcements made from the station or from the place the concerts are held? A. P. K.

A. In some cases the announcements are made at the distant point, while at other times, they are made from the station, depending on other arrangements. Symphony concerts were announced from off-stage at the Odeon.

Q. Where would a potentiometer be connected in a single-circuit regenerative set, using a 6-volt transformer P. K.

A. A potentiometer is unnecessary in a detector circuit. A 6-volt stepdown transformer will not operate tubes from the house lighting current, due to the alternating hum. This can be eliminated, but not without elaborate filters.

Q. Can an indoor antenna attract lightning, and is it dangerous?

D. B.

A. No, and they are not dangerous.

Q. Which is the rotor and which is the stator of a vario-coupler? E. W.

A. The rotor is the ball part and the stator is the outside frame which supports the primary winding.

Q. The leads between my storage battery and set are about seven and one-half feet long. Would it increase the efficiency of my set to shorten them. E. E. F.

A. No, not likely.

RADIO HAS IMPORTANT PART IN ICE PATROL SERVICE

Radio will play an important part in the international ice patrol service which will be begun for the summer when the Coast Guard Cutter Tampa leaves Boston, on March 14. The purpose of this service to which the cutters Tampa and Modoc have been assigned by the Coast Guard, is to locate dangerous ice near the transatlantic steamship lane, patrol the section and broadcast warnings twice daily on 600 meters. The ship on patrol answers to the call "K F O G" and gives information upon request.

Once each evening a radiogram is sent to the Hydrographic Office of the Navy in Washington, defining the ice danger zone. This information is re-broadcasted from naval radio stations at Arlington, Annapolis, Boston, New York and Norfolk every morning and evening.

Increasing Life of Vacuum Tubes.

There are three cardinal principles which all audion users should bear in mind in order to keep their bulbs operating as long as possible. These are: (1) Never turn up the filaments more brightly than is necessary to give satisfactory signals; (2) Never use so many plate batteries that a "blue glow" can be seen in the detector tube. (3) Never leave the filaments burning when the outfit is not in use.

Celluloid and "Celluloid Putty."

Sheet celluloid is as good an insulater as bakelite in making radio apparatus. The different parts may be glued together with "celluloid putty." This is made by filling a four-ounce bottle half full of equal parts of ether and denatured alcohol, and then adding all the "scraps" of cut celluloid that can be forced into the bottle. After 24 hours stir with a stick. Beware of fire, however.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE RADIO CONFERENCE

Wave Distribution May Require Several Months—Removal of Spark Sets From Ships Suggested.

Secretary Hoover believes that the universal need for more broadcasting waves will be fulfilled by the conference report. As soon as the distribution is decided upon, he will ask the President to issue an executive order assigning some of the Government waves for public use.

The plan of wave distribution presented by the radio inspectors to the radio conference was believed suitable for immediate application, whereas the compromise plan of the full committee cannot be put into operation for two or three months, it is understood, during which the already congested atmosphere may be precipitated any moment.

Composers and authors desire royalty for the use of their compositions when broadcasted. Mr. Rosenthal told the conference, asking the Department of Commerce to prohibit the stations licensed from using copyrighted matter without payment of fees. But the department replied that it might as well require licensed stations to pay rent and for the use of patented radio apparatus. Authors must go to court, it was decided.

C. Francis Jenkins, the Washington inventor of radio transmission of pictures, asked for a special transmitting wave, and predicted the practical distribution of still and moving picture within a short time.

Every time the transferring of the 300, 450 and 600 meter waves was mentioned, either Commander Bingham of naval communications, or Mr. Guthrie, radio director of the Shipping Board, jumped up and protested; they strove, not unsuccessfully, to preserve these waves for ship communication.

The suggestion that all spark sets be removed from ships was met with the statement from naval officials that an international question was involved and several years would be necessary for such a readjustment. One naval officer estimated that it would cost a million and a half dollars to replace sparks on naval vessels alone.

The preservation of efficient wave lengths for use in the mobile services, such as ships and aircraft, was voiced at the conference by naval spokesmen.

Fearing that the public was not included at the conference, one representative suggested the selection of a member of the radio receiving body, but Secretary Hoover said he was a fan and would protect the public interests.

The value of "bedtime" stories was questioned by Stuart Rogers of the Mail, who said that one fan told him his children spent the afternoon in constant agitation awaiting the evening story. During its reception they got so excited, they discussed extensively, asking questions for a long time thereafter, and get so nervous that they never get to sleep until nearly 10 o'clock, he said.

LINE TELEPHONE CARRIES K S D PROGRAM 121 MILES

Radio Fan in Toronto, Canada, Relays Broadcasting to Friend in London, Ontario.

A remarkable instance of relaying radio broadcasting over a telephone wire is told of in a letter to the Post-Dispatch from John A. Yarker of Toronto, Canada., who made the interesting experiment while receiving a concert broadcast by K S D.

Yarker writes: "You were very clear to a friend 121 miles west in London, Ontario, as I relayed you to him over the Bell Telephone wire."

To give his friend the benefit of the concert Yarker had only to call him up on the telephone and then hold one of his headset receivers to the transmitter of the Bell telephone.

In all of its voluminous correspondence Station K S D had never before been apprised of successful relaying of a broadcast program over a telephone line for so great a distance as 121 miles.

Aerial Acts as Lightning Rod.

A radio aerial, well grounded, makes an excellent lightning rod. Run a No. 4 copper wire down from the lightning arrester, as specified by the new regulations of the underwriters' code, and the house will be completely protected from lightning.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

MAKING ANTENNAE SAFE FOR THE SUMMER

Lightning Protector Necessary—Rules Issued by St. Louis Safety Council.

Directions for the proper installation of radio receiving sets in homes have been prepared by Girard C. Tennum, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Safety Council, and are being distributed.

They are intended to obviate the fire hazard which may be brought about through the improper installation of apparatus, and are timely, since the season is approaching when severe electrical storms may be expected.

Excerpts from the rules follow:

The receiving set having an indoor antenna is considered devoid of hazard. With many receiving sets the principal danger is from lightning brought in over the antenna to the equipment or to some part of the building. Because of this hazard the St. Louis Safety Council wishes to call to the attention of the public a number of rules governing the proper installation of radio sets before the spring weather, with its accompanying electrical storms, arrives.

In setting up radio equipment all wiring pertaining thereto should conform to the general requirements of the National Electrical Code for the class of work installed, together with the following additional specifications as approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters:

RECEIVING STATIONS.

Antenna.

1. Antenna outside of buildings shall not cross over or under electric light or power wires of any circuit of more than 600 volts or railway trolley or feeder wires, nor shall it be so located that a failure of either antenna or of the above-mentioned electric light or power wires can result in a contact between the antenna and such electric light or power wires.

2. Antenna shall be constructed and installed in a strong and durable manner and shall be so located as to prevent accidental contact with light and power wires by sagging or swinging.

3. Splices and joints in the antenna span, unless made with approved clamps or splicing devices, shall be soldered.

4. Antennae installed inside of buildings are not covered by the above specifications.

Lead-in Wires.

1. Lead-in wires shall be of copper, approved copper-clad steel or other approved metal which will not corrode excessively, and in no case shall they be smaller than No. 14 B. & S. gage except that approved copper-clad steel not less than No. 17 B. & S. gage may be used.

2. Lead-in wires on the outside of buildings shall not come nearer than four inches to electric light and power wires unless separated therefrom by a continuous and firmly fixed non-conductor that will maintain permanent separation. The non-conductor shall be in addition to any insulation on the wire.

3. Lead-in wires shall enter the building through a non-combustible, non-absorptive insulating bushing.

Protective Device.

1. Each lead-in wire shall be provided with an approved protective device properly connected and located (inside or outside the building) as near as practicable to the point where the wire enters the building. The protector shall not be placed in the immediate vicinity of easily ignitible stuff, or where exposed to inflammable gases or dust, or flyings of combustible materials.

2. The protective device shall be an approved lightning arrester which will operate at a potential of 900 volts or less.

3. The use of an antenna grounding switch is desirable, but does not obviate the necessity for the approved protective device required in this section. The antenna grounding switch if installed shall, in its closed position, form a shunt around the protective device.

Protective Ground Wire.

1. The ground wire may be bare or insulated and shall be of copper or approved copper-clad steel. If of copper, the ground wire shall be not smaller than No. 14 B. & S. gage, and if of approved copper-clad steel it shall be not smaller than No. 17 B. & S. gage. The ground wire shall be run in as straight a line as possible to a good permanent ground. Preference shall be given to water piping. Gas piping shall not be used for grounding protective devices. Other permissible grounds are grounded steel frames of buildings or other grounded metallic work in the building and artificial grounds such as driven pipes, plates, cones, etc.

2. The ground wire shall be protected against mechanical injury. An approved ground clamp shall be used wherever the ground wire is connected to pipes or piping.

Wires Inside Buildings.

1. Wires inside buildings shall be securely fastened in a workmanlike manner and shall not come nearer than two inches to any electric light or power wire unless separated therefrom by some continuous and firmly fixed nonconductor making a permanent separation. This nonconductor shall be in addition to any regular insulation on the wire. Porcelain tubing or approved flexible tubing may be used for encasing wires to comply with this rule.

Receiving Equipment Ground Wire.

1. The ground conductor may be bare or insulated and shall be of copper, approved copper-clad steel or other approved metal, which will not corrode excessively under existing conditions, and in no case shall the ground wire be less than No. 14 B. & S. gage.

2. The ground conductor may be run inside or outside of building. When receiving equipment ground wire is run in full compliance with rules for protective ground wire, in section under protective ground wire, it may be used as the ground conductor for the protective device.

DIRECTING SIGNALS ON 10 METER WAVELENGTH

Loop Used for Receiving From Parabolic Reflector of Cylindrical Type.

A possible solution of the problem of radio interference on point-to-point communication by means of directional transmission on very short wave lengths has been put forward by the Bureau of Standards in Washington as the result of recent experiments.

A parabolic reflector of cylindrical type designed for a 10-meter wave length was used. It was made by constructing a parabolic wooden frame with a 10-meter aperture. The frame was suspended in the air and 40 wires spaced one foot apart were suspended from it. The source located at the focus, consisted of a 50-watt electron tube. The output from the tube was coupled to an antenna, which was a linear oscillator of the Hertzian type, and was tuned to a wave length of 10 meters; the complete reflector system was arranged so that it could be rotated.

The receiving apparatus was located 170 feet from the reflector and consisted of a single turn loop antenna with a theremo-element in the loop circuit. A portable galvanometer was connected to the thermo-element.

Good directional transmission was obtained. With the reflector turned 20 degrees from the direct line to the receiver the received current dropped to one-half of what it was with the refelctor directed to the receiver. The larger part of the radiated power was confined to an angle or 20 degrees and there was practically no radiation over an agle of 270 degrees in a general direction away from the direction of the way the reflector was pointing. Good radiophone transmission was obtained over a distance of three miles.

Long distance work on short wave lengths has recently made such rapid strides that American, French and British amateurs are now bridging the Atlantic on 200 meters in code. If point to point radiophone transmission can be developed to carry long distance on very short wave lengths, experts believe it will eliminate much interference and competition with the present broadcasting wave lengths around 360 meters.

PLANS FOR REORGANIATION OF THE ST. LOUIS RADIO ASSOCIATION

At a recent meeting of the St. Louis Radio Association, it was agreed that reorganiaztion along somewhat different principles would increase its value to a greater number of people and improve listening-in conditions in and around the city.

The new plan, when carried out will result in an organization similar to the Automobile Club of Missouri, giving service to all members in need of help or advice for one year, the dues being $2.

It is hoped thereby, not only to increase the membership to several thousand, but to bring about closer co-operation between broadcast listeners and amateurs operating transmitting sets.

The next meeting will be held at Community Center, Grand boulevard near Park avenue, Friday evening, April 6. Nominations for president and vice president, as well as a discussion of interference and other vital questions will be had.

RADIOGRAMS.

The first radio experiments made in the United States were carried out by the navy in 1899.

More than 1800 amateur radio transmitting stations and 50 broadcasting and commercial stations are now licensed in Canada.

To radio amateurs, Baltimore is known as the deadest spot in the country. Its broadcasting stations are not even heard in Westminster, which is less than 25 miles away.

Because of the broadcasting of market news, radio has developed more rapidly in the Middle West, in the corn, wheat and livestock growing regions, than in any other farm sections of the country.

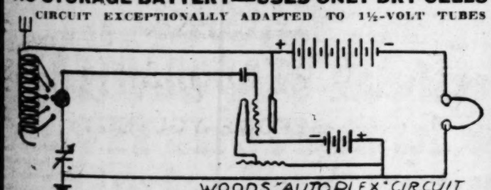
CIRCUIT EXCEPTIONALLY ADAPTED TO 1½-VOLT TUBES



WOODS "AUTOPLEX" CIRCUIT

This circuit has been devised by W. E. Woods of the Benwood Co., to fill the insistent demand of the Crystal Set users who desire to construct a long-range 1000-mile audion receiving set at a price that is within the reach of everyone. The high degree of efficiency and sensitivity of this circuit depends entirely upon its simplicity; only one control is utilized, this being a variable condenser. An inductance switch is provided for changing the wave length range. The set is fully regenerative over its entire tuning range and is an adaptation of the well-known Armstrong Circuit.

Exceptionally loud signals were received from all stations listed below. A fine degree of selectivity was obtained, one station being tuned out and another tuned in between one degree of the tuning dial. Louder signals were received than were obtained on the customary complicated three-circuit type of tuner. The action of the circuit depends entirely upon having the correct values of capacity and inductance.

Using a single wire aerial 100 feet long and 50 feet high, signals from the following broadcasting stations were heard on the night of March 22, between the hours of 7 and 11:30 p. m.

PAIGE-JEWETT SALES INCREASED 310 PER CENT

That sales of Paige and Jewett cars during the first three months of this year were 310 per cent greater than in the same three months of 1922, was announced Thursday evening by S. J. Andrews of the advertising department of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. before a meeting of Paige and Jewett dealers and salesmen in the salesrooms of the Newell Motor Car Co.

Andrews stated that leading lines in the industry are showing big increases in sales over previous years, but we believe that ours is above the average.

"That three times as many motorists have selected Paige and Jewett cars this year as during the same period a year ago is, we take it, convincing proof of the popularity of our product.

"When we placed the Jewett on the market early in 1922 we felt that it offered an unusual combination of sturdy strength, comfort and fine six-cylinder performance at a low price. We designed and built the car to sell in the $1000 class. Now after a year in which more than 20,000 of these cars have passed into the hands of owners it has proved itself to the public in the test of actual use.

"The new Paige models which we placed before the public with the opening of the year are our ideal of fine cars developed through years of fine car manufacture. We set for ourselves entirely new standards of quality and completeness. The demand for the new Paige in the above $2000 class has been in proportion to the demand for the Jewett in the $1000 field. They have combined to treble our business."

Andrews also told the dealers and salesmen that the factory insisted upon them using fair methods in selling the Paige and Jewett cars.

The meeting was attended by members of all Paige and Jewett city dealers and several from the nearby towns. James E. Newell, president of the Newell Motor Car Co., distributors for the Paige-Detroit products, presided.

DURANT TO BUILD NEW LIGHT CAR AT $525

Another car, as yet unnamed, but which will list at $525, is announced by Durant Motors, according to March 22 issue of Automotive Industries. It will be a four-cylinder job, powered with a Continental engine, and will be built at Flint, Mich. It will not make its debut until late in the summer, and at the present time no subsidiary company has been formed to manufacture it.

The plant at Flint is now in course of construction, the foundation being already it. It will be a duplicate of the other Durant plant at Flint and its cost will be $1,500,000. The capacity will be 30,000 cars a year, but no decision has been reached as to the first year's output.

It also is planned to build some of these cars in the Durant plant at Oakland, Cal. The Pacific Coast price will be $665.

This newest member of the Durant family is designed to meet Chevrolet competition. It has been under consideration for some little time, but it was not until W. C. Durant visited California a couple of weeks ago that plans for production were completed.

Outside the fact that the Continental engine will be used, no other units have been disclosed. The company has not settled on body styles, and up to the present only the chassis has been put out. A few of these are on the road and are being given thorough tryouts, so that when the Flint plant is completed the engineers will have fully decided what units will be selected.

With the addition of the unnamed model, Durant now has a line ranging in price from the Star at $348 to the Locomobile at $9500. In addition to the three already named, there are the Durant four at $890, the Flint at $1195, the Durant six at $1650 and the Princeton at $2485. Of these the Flint, Princeton and the Intecomer are not in production as yet.

PIERCE-ARROW SALES INCREASE 228 PER CENT

Sales of Pierce-Arrow passenger cars, and trucks to date this year are 228 per cent greater than the total sales during the corresponding period a year ago, according to an announcement made by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co.

"If the present demand is maintained—and there is no indication of any letup—the sales figures for 1923 will surpass that of any year since the first Pierce-Arrow was produced, 72 years ago," said Myron E. Forbes, president of the company.

VALLEY MOTOR COMPANY OPENS NEW SHOWROOM

The Valley Motor Co., recently organized to retail the Gardner and Auburn cars in St. Louis, held the formal opening of their new showroom, at 3660-64 Gravois avenue, yesterday.

The company also will retail Republic solid and Mechilin pneumatic tires; Mac-Dry batteries and McKay-Norris piston rings, and a line of new accessories. A "Pierce" oil and gasoline station will be maintained.

The officers of the Valley Motor Co. are Louis A. Schollmeyer, president; Milton F. Napier, vice president and counsel; Frank Albach, treasurer; P. Walter Sorber, secretary, and Harry F. Schollmeyer, general manager.

NASH PREDICTS PRICE INCREASE AND SHORTAGE

"Prices without doubt," says C. W. Nash, "are on the up grade. There is no question but that 1923 will be the automobile banner year and that the factories will reach the 3,000,000 mark, though motor car manufacturing is more than ever being concentrated in the hands of the few.

"As for the Nash Motors Co., though our orders would seem to warrant a production of 100,000 and our distributors are urging us to increase it to that figure, we will keep down our 1923 output to 60,000. I propose to build only as many cars as we can build well. My idea is to build fewer cars and build them right.

"There is now a tremendous shortage of cars at the automobile factories due to the long-continued blizzard, which has made it impossible to secure adequate railroad freight transportation. In fact, some factories have had to shut down through being unable to get enough coal to keep their workmen warm. This would seem to point to a shortage of all cars of the popular makes continuing all this spring."

NORDYKE & MARMON TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

While the manufacture of motor cars is popularly regarded as an adolescent industry, there are a few companies engaged in motor car manufacturing which are well past the adolescent stage. The Nordyke & Marmon Co. of Indianapolis, for example, is now looking forward to the celebration of its seventy-fifth anniversary.

Although the Nordyke & Marmon Co. is best known to the public by the Marmon car, it is best known in the milling trade as one of America's leading builder of flour and cereal mills. Its reputation in this field began in 1851 when Elbe Nordyke and his son formed a partnership for the manufacture and erection of mills. The mechanical ability of the Nordykes was supplemented by that of Daniel W. Marmon, who later became president.

Following the death of Daniel W. Marmon in 1909, his sons, Walter and Howard Marmon, succeeded to the management of the business, which by that time included the manufacture of motor cars as well as milling machinery. Walter Marmon, president of the Nordyke & Marmon Co. since his father's death, remains in the active management of the company today, while Howard Marmon, vice-president, is chiefly responsible for the engineering achievements of the concern.

Although there are other companies now manufacturing motor cars whose experience in this field are antedated by successes in other lines of manufacture it is believed that there are few if any others which have remained uninterruptedly under the direction of the same family of executives.

Several other executives and employes of the company have service records which parallel those of the Marmons themselves. The oldest executive in point of service is Herbert H. Rice, secretary, whose affiliation with the company began in 1886. The Marmon is distributed in St. Louis by the More Automobile Co.

BUICK ESTABLISHES FLAT RATE SYSTEM

The Vesper-Buick Auto Co. announces a new "flat rate labor charge system" for all repair work at the six Buick authorized service stations in the St. Louis metropolitan district, effective Monday, April 2.

Under the flat rate system a Buick owner can drive his car into any Buick authorized service station and can be told immediately just what the labor charge on his car will amount to for any job he may want. To the labor charge, of course, is added the cost of whatever parts are required to complete the work.

For over two years the Buick Motor Co. has been experimenting at their Flint factory to determine the minimum average time required for each particular service operation, and this has been rechecked against the experience of the service departments operated by Buick branches and distributors throughout the country. The country-wide average has been taken as the basis for the labor charges used in the newly announced system. In order to cut down the labor requirements on a large percentage of the different jobs, special labor-saving machines, developed by Buick engineers, in the Buick plant, have been installed by branches and distributors, and with many dealers, who are permitted to show the Buick authorized service emblem.

The six Buick dealers in the St. Louis metropolitan district who operate authorized service stations are as follows: Vesper-Buick Auto Co., Grand and Lindell and Vandeventer and West Pine; South Side Buick Auto Co., 3456 South Grand; Kuhs-Buick Co., 2837 North Grand; West Side Buick Auto Co., 5023 Delmar; Jakes-Buick Auto Co., Kirkwood, Mo.; East Side Buick Co., 325 North 10th St., East St. Louis, Ill.

HUDSON-ESSEX CARS ARE 90 PCT. FACTORY BUILT

One of the principal factors in the quality of both Hudson and Essex cars is that they are 90 per cent manufactured and not merely assembled, according to R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co.

"Both cars are made in the same factory by the same working force," said Frampton. "The materials are just the same in the two cars, and the same degree of care is exercised in manufacturing and inspection.

"Ninety per cent of the parts which go into Hudson and Essex cars are machined and finished in this factory.

"The Hudson and Essex plants are noted not alone for size, but also for a compact and scientific arrangement which permits an output of uniform quality with an economical working force.

"The layout of machinery and departments is such that when one manufacturing operation is completed the part under process is ready for the next step. The units pass from machine to machine in a steady, smooth succession.

CADILLAC CLOSED CAR WEEK ANNUAL EVENT

The Cadillac Motor Car Co. last fall inaugurated a system of setting aside one week in September for the showing of its closed models in all the principal cities of the United States. As the Cadillac company now produces more than half of its cars in closed models, this annual showing is particularly appropriate.

TOURIST TRAVEL IS SOURCE OF REVENUE

Tourist travel is a recognized industry in Colorado, where in 1922 visitors spent $42,000,000, according to a canvass made by the Denver touring bureau. It's the only known business wherein the purchaser literally uses the scenic goods, then puts it back satisfied, on the high shelf of the Rockies.

Good for Years of Service

The well built car and the poorly constructed car look very much alike on the salesroom floor. Paint and varnish can cover a multitude of weaknesses in closed car construction.

But you can't ride on the paint.

The superior product begins to prove itself on the first day of use and strengthens its proof every day thereafter. At the end of a year the one car is ready to be traded in at a big depreciation. The Studebaker may not even need a fresh coat of paint.

In a Studebaker Sedan the quality is built into the job. The body will not begin to rattle or squeak after thousands of miles of hard usage. It will continue to be comfortable and easy riding and will present a fine appearance month after month as when new.

The mohair velvet plush upholstery—which is all-wool instead of cotton as generally used—will not be worn "shiny," the windows will still fit tightly and operate smoothly and the fittings will still be firmly in place even after thousands of miles of use.

There are closed cars that do not include heaters. Yet, you cannot be comfortable unless you are warm. Every Studebaker Sedan is completely equipped including a heater.

Studebaker's quantity production of cars of quality is responsible for the low price of this Sedan.

COLE-EADS MOTOR TO HOLD FORMAL OPENING

New Company Succeeds Hutcheson Motor Co. as Cole Distributors in the St. Louis Territory.

The Cole-Eads Motor Co., recently appointed distributors of the Cole automobiles for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois by the Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis, will hold their formal opening this week in the showrooms of the company at 3021 Locust street.

E. C. Eads, president of the new company, stated that he had purchased the entire stock and equipment of the former Cole distributor, the Hutcheson Motor Car Co., and had taken over the lease held by that company on the premises at 3021 Locust street.

Eads, who recently came here from Kansas City, Mo., is an old-timer in the automobile business, having been connected with the sale of automobiles since 1908. From 1914 until late in 1921 he conducted the Eads Motor Co. in Kansas City. During his connections in Kansas City he handled at different intervals the Chandler, Premier and Reviere cars.

George Clark and F. A. Britton, who were connected with the sales force of the Eads Motor Co. in Kansas City for many years, have joined the sales force of the new company. William Neiheiser, who has been connected with the sales force of the Hutcheson Motor Co. for the past seven years, has also joined the Cole-Eads Motor Co.

During the past week the new company has received five of the latest Cole models, which will make up the display for the opening. The new models are the Cole seven-passenger sedan, seven-passenger touring, four-passenger phaeton and two four-passenger coupes, one with disc wheels and the other with wood wheels. The complete line consists, in addition to the above-mentioned models, a two-passenger roadster, four-five passenger suburban and a seven-passenger Berline-limousine.

Cole Merchandising Plan.

Eads stated that his reason for returning to the automobile business was influenced by the new Cole merchandising plan recently announced by the Cole factory.

In outlining the new Cole plan Eads said: "The automobile industry has been of such rapid growth, that there has grown up with it a practice both vicious and unfair to the purchasers of motor cars—the practice of accepting used cars at fictitious values as part payment on new cars. This practice has developed to such an extent that it has been necessary to inflate the list price of new cars in order to cover the expense of handling the used cars. To this first inflation has been added a second—a trading allowance, given by automobile manufacturers to dealers to enable them to offer seemingly attractive prices for used cars taken in trade. For both of these inflations the public has had to pay.

"The first inflation is completely absorbed in the necessary expense of handling the used car, the rent, heat, light, salesman's commission, advertising and other expenses that in no way increase the value of the car in question.

"The second inflation—the trading allowance—seemingly goes to the buyer in the form of an added allowance for his used car, but in reality the buyer immediately suffers an equal depreciation on his new car as this allowance had already been added to the list as a purely fictitious inflation.

"Under the Cole merchandising plan, where Cole motor cars are sold with no inflation added to the price, due to the 'no-trade' policy, the buyer not only saves all of the amount represented by the inflation, but he also buys an automobile, the initial depreciation of which has been more than cut in half.

"To this saving may be added the full amount you receive for your used car—whether you sell it yourself or avail yourself of the service offered by Cole dealers whereby they assist you in disposing of it.

POWER TRUCK COMPANY ANNOUNCES FULL LINE

The Power Truck and Tractor Co. of St. Louis, Mo., announces a full line of merchandise for the trade. From one to 10 ton capacity.

Due to the increasing daily demand for trucks, it has been predicted by John L. Foy, salesmanager of the company, that by the first of July motor trucks will be sold at a premium, and anyone contemplating the purchase of a truck should place their order at the earliest possible moment.

The motor truck, as everyone knows, is an absolute business necessity, says Foy, and the manufacturing industries in St. Louis, as well as the wholesale and retail houses, should consider seriously their commercial transportation problem and get ready for the big business.

The Power Truck and Tractor Co. was incorporated in 1918 for $2,500,000.

The company was originally located in Detroit, but two years ago moved to St. Louis and opened a large manufacturing plant on a 12-acre site, at Goodfellow and Wabash tracks.

INSPECT TAIL LIGHT.

A motorist should inspect the tail light of his car frequently. This light marks the position of his car for the driver coming in the rear, who may be facing lights of an oncoming machine.

Only An Unusual Car Could Carry This One Year Guarantee

The Gardner Four is truly the guaranteed car, for so far as a very thorough investigation can show it is the only automobile today that is guaranteed in writing by its manufacturer for one year.

The Gardner 5 Bearing Crankshaft
A feature found in no other make of four cylinder motor at any price.

On the road and in the hands of owners, the Gardner has proved its right to this title by showing how lightly time and distance touch an automobile so soundly built.

This one year guarantee expresses as nothing else could the strength and fitness of Gardner construction—the quality that forty years of fine vehicle building experience have put into this motor car.

Only because the Gardner Four is a really unusual automobile—unusual in the type of performance it delivers and unusual in the balanced value evident throughout—is it possible to pledge so definitely its ability to stand up under the pitiless test of year-round use.

As every motorist knows, an automobile that is sound in every part at the end of twelve months' driving has proved its lasting qualities. In guaranteeing the critical first year, therefore, Gardner is forecasting the long life of usefulness that can confidently be expected by every Gardner owner.

It is a further fact of decided interest to every intending car buyer that a car so well made and one capable of performance so remarkable as that of the improved Gardner can still be priced under $1000 at the factory.

LARGE GATHERING AT FORD DEALERS' BANQUET

What was probably the largest gathering of Ford dealers and salesmen ever assembled in St. Louis at any one time attended the banquet held Tuesday evening at the Statler Hotel. The banquet was the outcome of a sales contest among Ford and Lincoln dealers in St. Louis, East St. Louis and the county.

On Feb. 1 the Ford Motor Co., through C. S. Williams, branch manager in St. Louis, inaugurated a sales contest which terminated March 15. The dealers were divided into two teams, with provisions that the winners were to be guests at a banquet at the expense of the losers.

A scale of points based on the demand of each of the Ford products was set by the factory branch, the team scoring the higher number of points being the winners.

One point was allowed for the sale of a Ford runabout, touring car or four-door sedan and one subscription to the Dearborn Independent, Henry Ford's weekly. Ten points were allowed for the sale of a two-door sedan, 25 points for a Fordson tractor, 5 for a one-ton truck and 50 for any model Lincoln.

The South Side team, captained by Ollie Haupt, won the contest over the North Side team, captained by George A. Bilger, by 83 points.

North Side—Ayres Auto Co., 269; Bilgere Motor Co., 421; Brodhead Motor Co., 585; Downs Auto Co., 172; Kuhs-Wiemeyer Motor Co., 208; Mendenhall Motor Co., 551; Tevis Motor Co., 263; Walsh Motor Car Co., 302; Wellston Motor Co., 266. Total, 2982.

Several individual prizes for the salesmen of the various organizations who scored the highest number points during the contest were awarded at the banquet.

R. E. Gilmore of the Brodhead Motor Co. won the first prize of $15 for scoring the largest number of points of any salesmen in the contest, while J. Bert Williams of the Ollie Haupt Motor Co. won second prize, $10. These prizes were awarded by Branch Manager Williams.

Gilmore also won first prize in his own organization as the leading salesman for making the most sales.

Other winners were T. S. Carsens, Joe Mahoney of the Walsh Motor Co., Harvey Rassin, Elmer Ginner, M. J. McGinnis, E. F. Long, J. E. Palinisky, C. C. Hays, E. A. Morgan, R. F. H. Doering, W. W. Leathers and E. Long.

Several addresses were made by the captains of the two teams as well as by Branch Manager Williams and A. W. L. Gilpin, Chicago manager and supervisor of this district.

A courtroom sketch with the principal in the contest and with Gilpin as Judge also was held, followed by W. L. Lindhorst, a magician.

A committee, consisting of George A. Bilgere, William D. Walsh, Ollie E. Haupt, Harry P. Riefling and C. S. Williams arranged the event.

LAMBERT-GRAVES MOTOR TO HOLD OPENING

The Lambert-Graves Motor Co., Inc., recently appointed authorized Ford and Lincoln dealer, will hold the formal opening of their new building at Manchester and King's highway this week.

The company's new building is of concrete, steel and brick with stucco and terro cotta finish. The building has three entrances, one on Manchester and two in the rear that lead into Swan avenue. A special parking lot has also been provided in the rear of the building.

The offices and salesroom are at the front of the building, while the service and shop are in the rear. The shop is equipped with the latest types of machinery and overhead carrying system. Three overhead carriers and switches lead to the battery, tool and machine rooms.

The officers of the new company are Samuel B. Lambert, president; A. W. Lambert, vice president, and C. E. "Buzz" Graves, secretary and treasurer and manager of sales.

WAR ON GASOLINE PRICES TO BE RESUMED

Work of framing legislation necessary to meet the situation in regard to gasoline prices uncovered in the investigation of the various oil companies by the United States Senate Committee on Manufactures, headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, will begin in dead earnest as soon as Congress convenes this fall, according to a letter received by M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman of the A. A. A., from Gilbert E. Roe, special attorney for the Senate Committee.

Mr. Roe points out in his letter that there is much preliminary work to be done and expresses the hope that the investigation will tend to make the big companies hold gasoline prices fairly steady during the summer. In the meantime, at his request, the A. A. A. will continue to gather data in order to furnish the Senate with the utmost assistance in preparing legislation in the fall.

The A. A. A. has already gone on record as opposing the upward trend in gasoline prices and has asked the Attorney-General and the Department of Justice to use their best efforts to curb any tendency to fix prices on gasoline during the coming touring season. The association, through its member clubs, is also making the same request of the proper authorities in the various states.

NEW APPERSON SIX HAS MANY FEATURES

"The new Apperson six which was exhibited for the first time at the Auto Show," said A. J. Wicks, manager of the Apperson-St. Louis Motor Co., "is the result of a demand for a smaller car that would embody the same engineering as the big Apperson eight.

"In this car the factory incorporated certain feature which are absolutely new. The two most outstanding features are the leverless gear shift and the emergency brake lever on the instrument board. In the new Apperson there are no levers in the driver's compartment. You can get out on the side next to the curb just as easily as you can get out of the rear compartment.

"This new gear shift is controlled by a lever located on the steering wheel post just below the spark and throttle control. To shift gears you merely push the lever into the notch indicating the desired speed, throw out the clutch and the gears are shifted smoothly and surely. You can't possibly 'clash' the gears, because the operation is mechanical.

"I do not think there is any doubt but what many cars will eventually follow Apperson precedent and adopt this leverless gear shift, because it is a comfort and safety factor that it will not be long until the public will demand it on the car they buy. The new emergency brake works on the propeller shaft flange by pulling a lever that is located on the instrument board.

"The new six has a wheelbase of 120 inches; a specially designed frame; a new one-piece windshield; a permanent top that is tailored to each separate job with the side curtains stored in the back of the front seat.

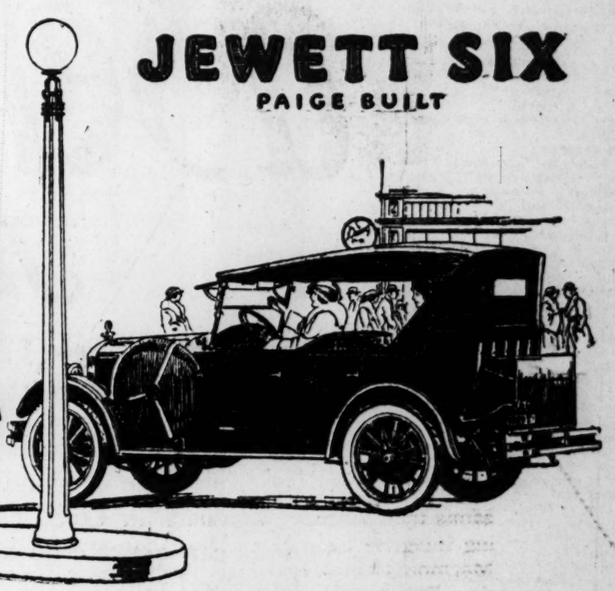
JEWETT SIX
PAIGE BUILT



310% Increase In Sales!

IN JANUARY, FEBRUARY AND MARCH, 1923

Three Times as Many People Selected Paiges and Jewetts as in the Same Months of 1922

AND we could sell twice as many if we could make them. For Paige and Jewett sales are governed only by what we can produce. As far ahead as we can see Paige and Jewett will go through 1923 with an increase in business never before witnessed in the industry.

It took the public nearly a year to find out how good the Jewett is. This Paige-designed, Paige-built, moderate size six is the huskiest built car of its size. It has the biggest motor ever put in a car of its size—50 horsepower. And so in spite of its sturdy construction it is the most active car you ever tried out in a speed brush—5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds. Try it.

Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Ball-bearing steering spindles. Springs 80% the length of the wheel base. Paige-type clutch and transmission prevent motor stalling and make gear changing so easy you can drop from high to second at 30 miles an hour. If you want to drive the best car $1065 ever bought now is the time to buy.

Our Ideal Paige—long the Most Beautiful Car in America—is now more beautiful and enduring than ever. Richness you can see and feel—not a piece of imitation leather in the entire car. The body made proof against squeaks and rattles by double strips of patent leather which prevent metal touching metal or wood.

The Paige 6-70 motor with silent timing chain and high-pressure oiling system possesses silence which will endure — power that will not diminish. With rear springs more than five feet long, Paige-Timken axles front and rear, ball-bearing steering spindles, and new clutch and transmission—our Ideal Paige rides and drives as no car ever could before.

Paige is equipped with two extra cord tires, two bumpers, shock absorbers, gasoline gauge on dash, motometer, automatic windshield wiper—everything you could think of. By far the finest car Paige ever produced, and fully equipped it costs only $2450. 1560

MOST ACCIDENTS ARE INEXCUSABLE

Traffic Committee Reports There Is Virtually No Such Thing as "Unavoidable Accident."

Investigation of a thousand recent motor smashups has convinced a committee of traffic officials in various parts of the country that there is virtually no such thing as an "unavoidable accident." FIRST AUTO DELIVERED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The automobile industry celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary today. A quarter of a century ago, April 1, 1898, this industry which has produced over 10,000,000 registered owners, changed the transportation of a nation, remodeled the planning of cities, and introduced the traffic "cop," struggled into being with delivery of the first American built car to a purchaser.

The first American car delivered to a purchaser was a single cylinder Winton phaeton and was purchased by Mr. Robert Allison, a mechanical engineer, of Port Carbon, Pa.

He visited the small factory then being operated by Alexander Winton at Cleveland, O., on March 24, 1898, and after being convinced that the horseless carriage actually would run, placed the first order ever made by a bona-fide purchaser, taking delivery one week later.

The first year's output of the Winton factory was 21 cars and one of the early purchasers was Mr. J. W. Packard of Warren, O., an electrical manufacturer. Two years later Mr. Packard organized the Ohio Automobile Co., which later on was moved to Detroit and became the Packard Motor Co.

The COLE "net price" basis a Sensational Success

Just What Does This Mean To You?

YOU save $1,000, from a comparative standpoint, on the finest car we have ever built.

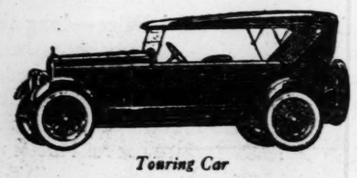
You get this saving through Cole's New Merchandising Plan of economic distribution. It lowers overhead costs for Cole dealers 50 per cent—which means they can operate on a smaller margin than ever before—and you get the saving.

In a word—we deduct the value of your used car from our List Price. This literally means that under our plan you get credit for your old car, yet it remains your property. We will help you sell it at the market value, and whatever you get is that much profit for you.

Your acceptance of Cole's Merchandising Plan simply saves you an unnecessary middle cost and shortens the distance between the factory and the buyer.

It means that you get the $2685 list price Cole Aero-Eight, with many added refinements, for a net price of $1885.

Two Ways of Marketing Automobiles



Touring Car

Seven Beautiful Body Designs

The same plan which makes possible the reduction in the standard Cole Aero 8 Touring Car is applied to the closed models as well, thus making it possible to have a custom-built closed car at a price commonly associated with open models.

The Cole body designs are so intrinsically beautiful that they please the most discriminating. For years they have been approved by people of refinement and good taste.

So basicly sound are the designs that they will endure for years, and never go out of style. Only one of the many reasons for Cole permanency of value.

The closed models are finished in various harmonious colors, while the interior fittings are most luxurious. The Cole is a fine car you may be proud of in any company.

The two tables above illustrate the list and the net method of marketing automobiles.

A moment of thought will convince any one that Cole's new merchandising plan is economically sound.

One of the chief burdens of the motor car industry has been the "trade-in practice." It piled up a National cost which ran perhaps in the tens of millions annually (for rent, heat, light, interest, insurance, overhead, and selling cost in the used-car department). According to national authorities this cost averages 20 per cent. on fine cars such as the Cole Aero Eight.

Cole's merchandising plan also saves the "trade-in" allowance said by authorities to average from $200 to $600—really a rebate in case an old car is taken in.

Cole's "No-Trade-In" policy removes this burden, estimated to be one-third of the cost of automotive distribution, and passes the saving on to the public. At the same time it provides a fair and satisfactory plan to help dispose of used cars.

What Cole Quality Means

For sixteen years the Cole has been recognized the world over as a fine car. Nothing has been taken away at the new price, which is made possible only by Cole's new merchandising plan, which has met with universal endorsement.

The outstanding features of the Cole Aero Eight are: 8 cylinders, 80 horse-power—insuring perfect performance under all conditions; 1 to 72 miles an hour in high. Such powerful brakes that the Cole is known as the safest car made. 33x5 Cord Tires which average 20,000 miles of service. 127¼-in. Wheel Base—a truly big car. Body designs so beautiful that they have been widely imitated. Complete equipment such as Waltham 8-day Clock, Boyce Motor Meter, extension jack, shock absorbers, etc.

And to this standard model have been added many additional refinements, at the net price of $1,885, factory.

A Permanent Value

The Cole "No-Trade-In" policy not only means that you get a truly fine car at wholesale and actual valuation, but that much of the usual first year depreciation has been removed.

The Cole plan means that your investment in a fine car is protected for years. This high used-car value is further enhanced by the Cole policy of permanent body design (the same style has been used for five years).

Do You Know How to Judge Automobiles

In the past many things have clouded the issue in buying a motor car. Personal prejudice—what friends said—the personality of the salesman and a thousand other things.

Now comes a new and scientific system—a standard by which you may correctly gauge the worth of any automobile.

With this simple system you can be certain of the worth of any car you are considering. The test is fair to all, and Cole will abide by your decision.

Make the Test that Tells

This system is known as The Test That Tells.

Regardless of your preference, make this test before you buy any car. Then remember that we deduct from our "List Price" the market value of your used car, thus giving you our "Net Price."

The "Test That Tells" is proving a revelation to many buyers who thought they knew all the "Ins and Outs" of motor cars. It opens a new era in automobile values. Call, phone or write for the "Test That Tells."

INDUSTRIAL LOAN PURCHASES SITE ON CHESTNUT ST.

Four-Story Building at Northeast Corner of Ninth Bought by Company for Its Future Quarters.

PRICE IS SAID TO HAVE BEEN $150,000

Third Large Transaction to Be Recorded on This Thoroughfare Since Bond Issue Passed.

By BERRY MOORE.

The most notable event of the week in the downtown district was the purchase yesterday by the Industrial Loan Co. of the four-story building and site at the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, having a frontage on Chestnut of 85 feet and on Ninth of 80 feet. The reported price was $150,000.

The transaction was made through the Cornet & Zelbig Trust. The former owner was the John F. Meyer Investment Co., which acquired the property several years ago on a much lower basis, when real estate on Chestnut street was comparatively slow asset.

Real estate offices and stores occupy the first floor of the building, while the upper floors are used for hotel purposes. The building was originally known as Pozonni Building.

Arthur Blumeyer, its president, said the purchase was made to obtain larger quarters for the Industrial Loan Co. It will be necessary for the company, however, to remain in its present quarters in the International Life Building, Eighth and Chestnut streets, until the expiration of its present lease, which has three years to run.

Will Be Remodeled.

The Ninth and Chestnut street building is to be remodeled and equipped to meet the future requirements of the concern.

The Industrial Loan Co. was established Jan. 2, 1913, with a capital of $200,000 provided by the late James Gay Butler.

The company has flourished from its inception. In 1913 its loans aggregated $400,000, and in 1922 loans were in excess of $4,000,000, while it now has resources approximately of $2,200,000.

The Industrial Loan Co. was organized primarily to make economy loans to individuals in the industrial field, as well as to professional and small business concerns unable to obtain requisite funds through ordinary banking channels.

It is operated under the Morris plan, but is distinctly a St. Louis institution, and has no interest in any other Morris plan company. It is one of more than 100 independent companies scattered throughout the country, each of which is being successfully operated under the Morris plan.

The directors of the company are Arthur A. Blumeyer, W. Fred Carter, Henry L. Cornet, F. B. Eliman, Robert McK. Jones, Charles Robstock, John L. Roember, D. Frank C. Rand, A. L. Shapleigh, H. L. Swarts, Frank A. Thompson, Lewis T. Tune and M. L. Wilkins.

Chestnut Street in Demand.

The transaction accentuates the fact that in Chestnut street as the theatre purchase on this thoroughfare west of Twelfth street since the approval of the $87,000,000 bond issue. The Industrial Loan Co. purchased the corner, it is said, under the impression that the Western Union was going to erect a towering structure on the southwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, 135 feet. A 23-story building is planned by the telegraph company, according to Blumeyer.

The Bell Telephone Co., which is affiliated with the Western Union, recently acquired the entire block on the north side of Chestnut street, from Tenth and Eighth streets, as a site for an automatic telephone exchange, the transaction being made through Isaac T. Cook & Co. The Title Guaranty Trust Co., of which Mark Anderson is president, recently purchased the six-story Sawyer Building at 806 Chestnut street, which it will occupy in the early future. Four-Story Building at Northeast Corner of Ninth Bought by Company for Its Future Quarters.

PRICE IS SAID TO HAVE BEEN $150,000

Third Large Transaction to Be Recorded on This Thoroughfare Since Bond Issue Passed.

By BERRY MOORE.

The most notable event of the week in the downtown district was the purchase yesterday by the Industrial Loan Co. of the four-story building and site at the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, having a frontage on Chestnut of 85 feet and on Ninth of 80 feet. The reported price was $150,000.

The transaction was made through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust. The former owner was the John F. Mayer Investment Co., which acquired the property several years ago on a much lower basis, when real estate on Chestnut street was a comparatively slow asset.

Real estate offices and stores occupy the first floor of the building, while the upper floors are used for hotel purposes. The building was originally known as Pozonni Building.

Arthur Blumeyer, its president, said the purchase was made to obtain larger quarters for the Industrial Loan Co. It will be necessary for the company, however, to remain in its present quarters in the International Life Building, Eighth and Chestnut streets, until the expiration of its present lease, which has three years to run.

Will Be Remodeled.

The Ninth and Chestnut street building is to be remodeled and equipped to meet the future requirements of the concern.

The Industrial Loan Co. was established Jan. 2, 1913, with a capital of $200,000 provided by the late James Gay Butler.

The company has flourished from its inception. In 1913 its loans aggregated $400,000, and in 1922 its loans were in excess of $4,000,000, while it now has resources approximately of $2,200,000.

The Industrial Loan Co. was organized primarily to make economic loans to individuals in the industrial field, as well as to professional and small business concerns unable to obtain requisite funds through ordinary banking channels.

It is operated under the Morris plan, but is distinctly a St. Louis institution, and has no interest in any other Morris plan company. It is one of more than 100 independent companies scattered throughout the country, each of which is being successfully operated under the Morris plan.

The directors of the company are: Arthur A. Blumeyer, W. Frank Carter, Henry L. Cornet, F. B. Eiseman, Robert McK. Jones, Charles Rebstock, John L. Roember, D. D.; Frank C. Rand, A. L. Shapleigh, J. L. Swarts, Frank A. Thompson, Lewis T. Tune and M. L. Wilkinson.

Chestnut Street in Demand.

The transaction accentuates interest in Chestnut street as the third large purchase on this thoroughfare east of Twelfth street since the approval of the $87,000,000 bond issue. The Industrial Loan Co. purchased the corner, it is said, under the supposition that the Western Union Co. is going to erect a towering structure on the southwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, 135x132 feet. A 23-story building is planned by the telegraph company, according to Blumeyer.

The Bell Telephone Co., which is affiliated with the Western Union, recently acquired the entire half block on the north side of Chestnut street, from Tenth and Eleventh streets, as a site for an automatic telephone exchange, the transaction being made through Isaac T. Cook & Co. The Title Guaranty Trust Co., of which Mark Anderson is president, recently purchased the six-story Sawyer Building at 808-810 Chestnut street, which it will occupy in the early future. This transaction was made by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, in connection with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., represented by William R. Cady, its real estate officer.

As the chief traffic center east of Twelfth street in the central business district, Chestnut street is destined to become a most important thoroughfare in connection with the proposed plaza, especially with the Courthouse at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets, as is now contemplated.

The Cravens-Brenner Realty Co. has taken a lease of the quarters comprising five office rooms on the fifth floor of the International Life Building, now occupied by Preston J. Bradshaw, who has leased the entire tenth floor of the same building, with exception of one building which the present occupant refuses to surrender.

The Cravens-Brenner Co. now has offices on the fourth floor of this building, but the new quarters will give it five times the floor area, which is taken in anticipation of a great expansion of the real estate trade. As was announced in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, Bradshaw has taken the larger quarters on the tenth floor of this building.

CURLEE CLOTHING CO. BUYS 7-STORY BUILDING

Structure at Twenty-First and Locust Streets Purchased From Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company.

One of the largest real estate deals of the week was the purchase by the Curlee Clothing Co. of the seven-story and basement building at the northeast corner of Twenty-first and Locust streets, from the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. The purchase price, it is said, was more than $200,000, which was paid for in cash by the Curlee firm, in line with that firm's policy. The Dyas-Shelp Realty Co. effected the transaction.

The building contains 120,000 square feet of floor space, all of which will be devoted to manufacturing purposes. For several months the firm has used parts of the building, but increased business made it necessary to take over the entire place.

Modern Equipment.

The factory will be one of the most modernly equipped in the United States. High-powered machines for the sewing of men's clothing which the firm makes have been bought and a series of boilers are being installed to supply steam to pressing machines. Approximately 1500 employes will be engaged when the capacity production of the new plant is reached.

This factory is one of a chain of manufacturing establishments the firm operates in St. Louis. The other principal plants are in the Curlee Building, Tenth street and Washington avenue, and in Wellston.

The Curlee Clothing Co. came to St. Louis in 1905 and began operations in a two-story building. During the 18 years the firm has been in business here it has expanded until it is one of the leading clothing manufacturing firms of the United States, selling its line in almost every state in the nation. The firm buys greater quantities of some materials than does any other clothing firm.

Curlee's Prediction.

S. H. Curlee is president of the company. In conjunction with the announcement of the purchase of the building, Curlee said, St. Louis, because of its superior facilities, eventually is certain to become the clothing center of the United States.

"Goods of all kinds which are made in St. Louis have always carried with them a guarantee that they are better made than are things produced elsewhere," Curlee said. "That is why St. Louis is the greatest shoe market and the greatest dry goods market in the world today. All of the lines for which the city now is world-famous were started here in a small way, building their prestige on real merit."

Curlee said other plans for expansion are being made by his firm, because even with the additional facilities that will be had with the new building, the output of the firm will not be able to keep up with the demand. He pointed out that, although the spring buying season has several weeks more to run, the business done by his company so far this spring far exceeds that of the spring season last year.

YORKLEIGH APARTMENTS ON WEST PINE SOLD

The Dougherty Real Estate Co. reports the closing of a deal involving approximately $325,000 worth of real estate, which includes the sale of the Yorkleigh apartments at 4954 West Pine boulevard. This is a 38-family apartment with a yearly rental of approximately $60,000. It was sold for Minnie Housam to E. G. Dean, who was represented by J. L. Sprague. Another transaction was the sale of 2637-39 Washington boulevard; two three-story stone-front dwellings, 3856 Delmar boulevard, a 10-room three-story dwelling, and a 2½-story house on Rose avenue in Kirkwood, and 300 feet of ground on Couch avenue, adjoining this property.

The Dougherty Real Estate Co. reports having sold other property to the extent of $300,000. These deeds are signed up but will not be closed until next week, and the details of them will be reported later.

The Dougherty Real Estate Co. reports loans in the past month of $150,000.

SAMUEL SIMON TO BUILD RESIDENCES IN AMES PLACE

Samuel H. Simon has purchased from the Bush-Burns Realty Co. five lots on Kingsbury and Trinity avenues in Ames place, on which he will erect five residences to cost approximately $25,000 each.

These buildings are being financed by Love, Van Riper & Co., Bank of Commerce Building.

NEW LOAN AGENCY TO ADVANCE MONEY HERE

The large surplus of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Springfield, Mass., will become available in the future for loans on real estate in St. Louis through Edward L. Bakewell, real estate and financial agent, who has been made the company's exclusive loan correspondent here.

This is taken as another indication of the favorable attitude towards St. Louis on the part of large institutions of this nature, which are ultra conservative and which confine their investments to real estate securities in the most substantial and progressive cities. The passage of the $87,000,000 bond issue has focused new attention on St. Louis, Bakewell declared.

O. G. Fifield, superintendent of the Massachusetts Life Insurance Co., was in St. Louis recently with A. F. Trueblood, manager of the Kansas City branch of the insurance company, on a tour of inspection of large cities. Both were impressed in no small degree by the progress of St. Louis.

The Prudential Insurance Co., represented by the Franciscus Realty Co.; the New York Life Insurance Co., represented by Hemmelman & Spackler, and the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., represented by Albert T. Terry & Co., have already established real estate loan departments in St. Louis.

$250,000 OFFICE BUILDING FOR GRAND AND OLIVE

THE Hewson Realty Co. has concluded financial arrangements for the erection of a six-story, high-class office building for the exclusive use of physicians and dentists. A site has been purchased on the north side of Olive street, about 500 feet west of Grand boulevard. The facade is to be of brick with terra cotta trim and cornice. Polychrome terra cotta, with an Italian renaissance spirit used in the detail, is a feature of the design. The brick is to be of a variegated color matt brick, laid with a raked joint. The estimated cost is $250,000, exclusive of the lot.

The Hewson Realty Co. will supervise the construction and have the management of the building when completed.

Two Corners Sold by McDonald.

The C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co. during the past week closed the sale of the southeast corner of St. Louis and Baldwin, two-story brick building, store and three flats, for the Beffa heirs. The company also sold the double flat, 3709-11 Mafftitt avenue, corner of Spring, for Patrick T. McGlynn and wife to Walter W. Petri. This sale was negotiated by William Eichenseer of the McDonald company.

The consulting rooms and the general office will be located on the sixth floor, while the drafting department, comprising 12 drafting rooms, and the general superintendent of construction will be situated on the fifth floor.

The Federal Home Building Corporation constitutes both contractor and builder, with complete building service, including financing. Contracts have already been closed with this concern for the erection of more than $600,000 worth of homes, including both large and small structures. The service of this corporation is applicable to large as well as small builders.

The concern has been occupying quarters on the fourth floor of the Carleton Building.

Why Not Start a Variety Store?

Our expert service men who cover all parts of the country are continually learning of locations that offer exceptional opportunities for the establishing of Variety Stores.

Variety Stores handle the kind of goods that sell at popular prices to the great, big mass of buyers.

They usually pay a bigger return on investment than any other kind of a store.

They are easy to operate—expert merchandise training or retail store experience are not essential.

We will show you how you can start a Variety Store with $2500 to $6000 capital.

We will show you how to pick the choicest location, help you select your fixtures, your stock, how to mark your goods to make a profit, how to trim your windows, how to advertise, how to get the people coming to your store.

Being originators of the Variety business, we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling Variety Goods at retail.

And helping others we have gained a vast fund of information which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field. Let us outline our complete plan.

A visit to our nearest house or inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strictest confidence and will place you under no obligation whatever.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

SUNDAY READER.—As you are two years behind with your rent he can make you move now.

L. J.—You can sue the firm for your salary up to Feb. 17 and possibly for a longer time. You should consult a lawyer.

DAILY READER.—There is no workmen's compensation law in force in Missouri at the present time. The injured man should consult a lawyer regarding his claim against the company.

VICTIM.—If you pay half the upkeep of the lot, he should permit your own family to be buried there also. If you do not want this, you can refuse to pay half of the upkeep of it.

ANXIOUS Q.—As he is 19 years of age, he could enlist in the Army without his parents' consent. If you apply for his release, it would probably not cause any trouble for him. He would not be punished for enlisting under an assumed name.

ANXIOUS WIFE.—Your husband can be made to pay the costs of the divorce, including your lawyer's fee. The Free Legal Aid Bureau will give you advice and you might also ask the Prosecuting Attorney's office to take action regarding your husband's failure to support you and the child.

CONSTANT READER.—The correspondence school will refund whatever profit they would have made on the full course, even though the student drops the course. The profit would probably be very nearly the full amount of tuition. The fact that the school is in another state would make no difference.

SAFETY.—You do not have to pay the increased rent if you prefer to take the chance of being forced to vacate. If there was any legal consideration for the landlord's agreement not to raise the rent, you could sue him for damages because of his breach of the agreement, but otherwise you have no remedy.

J. B. F.—The interest charged is usurious and you do not have to pay it. If they sue you or make any trouble, consult the Free Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets. As you are married, only 10 per cent of your wages, or $2.50 per week, can be subject to garnishment in any case.

A. B.—"Voting Stock" is stock which can be voted at stockholders' meetings for the election of directors, and in the control and management of the business. Preferred stock which is "cumulative as to dividends" must receive its full dividends at the specified rate, including all accrued or back dividends which were not paid in previous years, before any other class of stock can receive any dividends. Any bank or broker will give you more complete information.

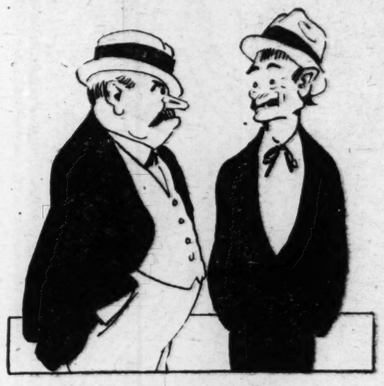
An Easter Maid of Long Ago

Drawn for the Post-Dispatch by Mildred B. Carpenter

DID YOU EVER HEAR THIS ONE?



Withee asked eagerly to what persons Freeman, his former enemy, had been magnifying Withee's wealth. "Well, sub," said Freeman, "they was the Board of Assessors."

An unfamiliar anecdote about President Lincoln is perhaps the most interesting in the following collection of good stories—But other humorous gems are related here by noted Americans who chose these as their favorites

PRESIDENT MORRIS McDONALD of the Maine Central Railroad writes: "I have drawn off and inclose herewith something which I think may be interesting, particularly to the readers from the State of Maine.

"We had in Maine a very well-known tavern keeper named Jim Withee. He had a neighbor with whom he had not been able to keep on the best of terms, and who seemed to have a capacity for saying sharp and ungracious things about Mr. Withee.

"One day a friend reported to Mr. Withee that this neighbor was making certain favorable comments about him, and the statement surprised Mr. Withee. So he sought out his neighbor, whom he accosted as follows:

"'Well, Freeman, I understand that you have been making some complimentary remarks about me.'

"'Yes, I have,' said Freeman.

"'What be they?' asked Mr. Withee.

"'Well, sir,' said Freeman, 'I said that you was a good deal more of a man than folks said you was; that you had a lot more property than was supposed; that your hosses was wuth more; that you had more money in the bank than folks thought you had; that your house was wuth more; that you had better wagons and harnesses than what you commonly represented 'em to be, and that, all in all, you had three or four times as much property as folks thought.'

"'Well,' said Mr. Withee, 'that's kind of you; did you say that to more than one person?'

"'Yes, sir,' said Freeman, 'I did. I said it to three persons.'

"'Who was they?' asked Mr. Withee, eagerly.

"'Well, suh,' said Freeman, 'they was the Board of Assessors.'"

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG writes: "Aside from certain gorgeous ones, I like, among others, the following:

"Lem Pratt, in a certain district in Maine, was up again for election as Selectman. He took his buckboard and mare and his notebook with the list of possible political supporters and started down the pike to line up his friends.

"Third on the list was Harry Littlefield. He saw Harry at a distance in his pasture and called to him as he drove alongside of the stone wall. Harry, with a begrudging manner, came slowly over to him.

"'Well, Harry, I'm up again for Selectman this year. I can count on you, of course?'

"Harry gave Lem a dirty look.

"'Lem, we've been saddled with some pretty low-down Selectmen in my time—incompetent, thievin', two-faced scalawags—but of all the half-witted, corrupt, unscrupulous, mean, lyin', hypercritical, thievin' skunks as ever sat on the Council, you, Lem Pratt, are the lowest! Vote for you, you dirty hound? I'd sooner vote fer a hyena!'

"Lem looked at Harry, took out his notebook and pencil stub, found the name Harry Littlefield, wrote one word, 'Doubtful,' after it, closed the book, put it in his pocket and looked straight down the highroad. 'Gittap, Bess!'"

SENATOR WATSON of Indiana: When I first came to Washington as a member of the House I lived with "Uncle Joe" Cannon.

Mr. Cannon in those days was, of course, a power in politics and was so absorbed with the various workings of the Government that he did not always pay full attention to his clothes. His overcoat got shabby, but he never would get another one. His daughter spoke to him about the overcoat repeatedly, but he just kept on wearing the old coat.

Finally, in desperation, his daughter spoke to me

"I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll buy the coat from you for $40." "I don't know of any way to make $5 easier," said Uncle Joe. "The coat belongs to you."

about the matter. She wanted me to use my influence with him to get a new coat, and I promised to do what I could.

We usually went to the Capitol together, and so the next morning I suggested that we walk. I did not bring up the question until we were near a clothing store.

"Uncle Joe," I said, "you look like the devil. That overcoat of yours is terrible."

"What's the matter with it?" demanded Uncle Joe.

"It's completely worn out," I replied. "Why don't you get a new one?"

The result was that Uncle Joe agreed to look at some of the coats in the store. He tried on several and finally found one he liked. He asked the price.

"Fifty dollars," said the clerk.

Uncle Joe took the coat off.

"I never paid more than $35 in my life for an overcoat," he said, "and I never will." So he walked out of the store.

That evening I told Mr. Cannon's daughter about what had happened. She thought of a plan, and I agreed with her on a program. She was to go to the store, pay the clerk $15 and then have him sell the coat to Mr. Cannon for $35.

I managed to get Mr. Cannon into the store again to see if they had any $35 overcoats. He tried on several, and finally we engineered it so that he bought the original coat for $35. He did not recognize it as the coat he had had on the day before.

So he walked off in the new overcoat. He was proud of it and was wearing it when he reached the Capitol. One of his friends there noticed the coat and tried it on.

"What did you pay for this coat?" the friend asked.

"Thirty-five dollars," replied Uncle Joe.

"Well," continued the friend, "it just fits me. I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll buy the coat from you for $40."

"I don't know of any way to make $5 easier," said Uncle Joe. "The coat belongs to you."

I never told Uncle Joe about it until long afterward.

MAX D. STEUER: The anecdote which has made the greatest appeal to me is one attributed to Abraham Lincoln, and is that of a story told by Abraham Lincoln to an applicant for a position in his Cabinet.

As it came to me many years ago, it was that the applicant called to see the President in person. The latter said that there was no vacancy, but that he would be glad to tell the applicant a story, which, on being asked to do so, he proceeded to tell. It appears that a very illustrious King, so the President said, was very fond of hunting, but was most careful not to go forth in stormy weather. For that reason he had a very learned astronomer in his immediate counsel. On one occasion he sent for his astronomer and stated his intention of going on a hunting trip for a number of days, provided his astronomer would assure him that the weather would be favorable. After making a study of the conditions the astronomer reported that the King could safely embark on his hunting trip, as the weather most certainly would be propitious.

The King, with his hounds, sallied forth. He entered a forest and there found a laborer who was gathering up his tools. Not far distant was an ass, to which was attached the ordinary laborer's cart. When this man observed the King, he saluted, and then, addressing him, said: "Your majesty, I regret to see you out at this time, because there is a terrible storm coming up which will soon overtake us." The King smiled upon his subject and assured him that no such thing could happen, since he had been advised that the weather would be favorable. "But," said the laborer, "yonder ass has just brayed, and when he does that a storm is certain to come on very shortly." The King laughed outright, and just as he did the ass brayed again. The laborer then urged the King to speed to the nearest place for protection, but the King went on, assured of safety, in reliance upon the advice of his astronomer.

Very shortly after he was overtaken by a terrific storm, thoroughly drenched and rendered most uncomfortable. Upon his ultimate return to the castle he sent

"Vote for you, you dirty hound? I'd sooner vote for a hyena!" Lem looked at Harry, took out his notebook, found the name Harry Littlefield, wrote the one word, "Doubtful," after it and put the book in his pocket.

"Do you know," the President was supposed to have mused, "ever since that time every jackass seems to think that he is entitled to a high place in the advisory councils of his nation."

"How much will it cost to do dat?" the negro inquired. "Twenty-five cents." "No, boss, don't do it, jes give me dis one, dey ain't dat much difference between dem niggers."

"I Can Teach You to Dance Like This"

Sergei Marinoff

"And you can study under my personal direction right in your own home"

FEW PEOPLE living outside of New York, Chicago, or the great European capitals have the opportunity to study dancing with any of the really great masters. And the private, personal instructions of even average teachers range upward from $10 an hour.

But now, the famous Sergei Marinoff has worked out a system of home instruction. You can learn classic dancing in all its forms—interpretive, Russian, ballet, aesthetic, Greek—at a mere fraction of the cost of lessons in the studio.

A Fascinating Way to Learn

It is so easy and so delightful. Just put the record on the phonograph, slip into the dainty little dancing costume (furnished free with the Course) and you are ready to start. Now comes the voice of Marinoff himself instructing you, telling you what to do, while the spirited rhythm of the music inspires grace and confidence in you. And guided by the charts, the photographs of Marinoff and his students and the easy text you master the technique of the dance.

Your progress is rapid and soon you develop confidence so that you are eager to dance before an audience. And you can be sure that you are getting the correct ballet technique — for Marinoff training is endorsed by the great Tarasoff.

You Will Learn These Dances

Butterfly—Gorgeous costume with huge wings.
Grecian—Simple white tunic and bare feet.
Spanish—Bright colored skirts and silk mantilla.
Oriental—Silk tunic, glittering girdle, ornaments.
Eccentric—Clever "Raggedy Ann" Doll Costume.
Chinese—Vivid Mandarin coat and pantalettes.
Classical Toe—Short, full skirts and tight bodice.

Charm and Grace

The natural beauty of the body is developed, an exquisite grace and flexibility cultivated by correct training in classic dancing. For better health — for greater beauty — for poise — for slenderness — dance! Dancing is the pleasantest form of exercise.

As a means of developing grace in children, dancing is unsurpassed. And with my method, mother and daughter can grow graceful together.

And Fortune—and Glory

For the theatre—vaudeville—the movies—civic and college pageants—for private social affairs—everywhere the dancer is in demand. Startling salaries are paid. And those who can dance for charitable entertainments or for the pleasure of their friends quickly become social favorites. In addition, one is so much more desirable as a partner in ball room dances when she has developed a sense of rhythm, and cultivated suppleness through classic dancing.

Write to Sergei Marinoff

Everyone interested in dancing should write to Sergei Marinoff at once and get complete information concerning his splendid system of home instruction in Classic Dancing. This information is free. Send the coupon today.

Challenging Death On The Roof Of The Wo

Men who conquer mighty mountains dare hunger, cold and fatigue with a laugh—Death in many forms stalks the venturer into the high silences of the peaks—A good climber may be dashed to destruction by the carelessness or inexperience of his companion—An expert tells of narrow escapes

PHYSICAL fitness, mental alertness, courage, experience and efficient companions, whether guides or amateurs, and proper equipment are the five essentials for crossing the most treacherous slopes and deepest crevices encountered in mountain climbing, according to George Leigh Mallory. Mr. Mallory was one of the leaders of the Mount Everest expedition, which attained the highest altitude ever trod by human beings. Mr. Mallory is now in this country lecturing, at the request of the Royal Geographic Society of England.

By KARL L. STEINMETZ.

"PERHAPS the most unpleasant moments of my life were caused by an inexperienced companion," Mallory relates. "We were on British rocks and I was asking too much of him. I had led over a long, sloping slab, having a nasty overhang and a fearsome drop below it and had reached a secure position. I had no reason to suppose that my companion would be unable to cross. The holds were small but good and as I was well above, though also some distance to the side of him, I could help a bit. At the very beginning of the movement across the slab he weakened. He lost his nerve completely and told me that he was sure to slip. I realized what the result might be. Once over the drop below us he would have to swing out over space by the connecting rope, unable to help himself, and I would be powerless to aid him; his dead weight, combined with the friction of the rope against the edge of the overhang, would prove too heavy.

"I dared not loose the rope for a second for fear of his slipping. I saw that something must be done to his mind. I kept very calm and cursed him with cold brutality, and then said: 'You needn't worry about the climbing; what you have to do is pull yourself together and consider yourself a man and not a double-dashed little worm.' He never said another word and climbed perfectly, but it was a near thing for both of us.

"In the early stages of his career a leader may be entirely without nerves and unconscious of danger. Sooner or later there will be a rude awakening. Three of us started on a difficult climb in the Alps at 2 o'clock one morning. We lost our way, due to a storm, but preferred to keep going, so we breakfasted on a glacier. While we ate the storm cleared away. We were encouraged to go on. We crossed a mountain and then tackled a long ridge to reach a further summit.

"All went well and we seemed likely to reach the top before dark, but were held up by a fearful obstacle. For half an hour I tried to climb an overhang without success. I came back and resolved to go over an impossible place. A companion held my rope over a corner of the rock. When I had advanced a considerable distance and was clinging to tiny holds, somehow I seemed to lose all connection with my feet. I no longer knew what they were doing. Then, with a warning cry to my companion, I fell. I went straight down, touching nothing until the rope jerked taut. Continued strain had caused the nervous tissues to give way. My companion, who later wrote the trip, said I fell 40 feet. It was a miracle that the rope held, for it was of a kind that was later condemned by the Alpine Club. However, I was pulled up and I led on, but in an opposite direction.

"We found a glorious view of the sunset from the top and fortunately an easy way down. I went over the incident in my mind and there is no doubt but that when I next climbed difficult rocks I had to begin again to learn mountain climbing; learn to do consciously what I had done unconsciously before.

"Rocks and boulders rolling down the slopes are a constant menace to mountaineers. I remember a climb in the Alps when we ran into bad weather on a pass and lost our way. We tried to get down a glacier and failed, and then were obliged to cross a slope at the side of it. In the thunderstorm there was an obvious danger on that slope. On easy ground we dashed across without being hit by any fragments of rock or ice. Later we were obliged to recross the slope lower down where the way was more difficult. Suddenly I saw a huge boulder detach itself from its bed and come hurtling down upon us. I shouted to my companion and we crouched against the rocks for protection. The stones came bounding down the slope. My position was such that I could observe my companion. Stones were flying over his head, missing him by inches. This noisy bombardment went on for about a minute. Any one of these great rocks might have killed either or both of us. Even a small stone hitting one of the party while they are moving may cause all to be dashed to the bottom. These rocks are dislodged by the rain or the morning sun. They are melted or thawed from their beds.

"In my first season I soon learned something of equipment. Our last expedition of the season was to cross Mont Blanc from the Italian side to Chamonix. This required a number of days. The weather was bad and we were compelled to stay at the hut at 10,000 feet while a fearful storm raged outside. Luckily, we found a prehistoric loaf of bread and a few fragments of cheese dating back to the Stone Age—it was hard as stone, at any rate. We lived on this until the storm passed. We then started up the [illegible] a few stale biscuits, some honey and a little [illegible].

"When we came out on the great ridges of the mountain a terrific north wind blew directly in our faces, driving before it particles of stinging snow. It was

The boulder bounded over our heads, missing us by only a few feet.

"Higher up the ground was [illegible] burst. Rain and snow were precipitated [illegible] soon every foot and hand hold was [illegible] guides would not go on. We let [illegible] ropes until we were standing on a [illegible] steep drop. The guides were above [illegible] rope to a huge boulder, preparing [illegible] down. This great rock gave way! [illegible] saved I don't know. Those of us who [illegible] the ledge stood there waiting to be [illegible] flies. It seemed hours. But the boulder [illegible] our heads, missing us by a few feet, [illegible] lessly into the drop beyond. Most [illegible] thrills!

"Incompetent companions are, [illegible] greatest dangers in mountaineering. [illegible] to keep ahead of them. In the [illegible] the climbs are short and climbers [illegible] take with them unskilled beginners [illegible] narrow escapes are frequent. You [illegible] often asked for trouble by yoking [illegible]

"The position most dreaded is [illegible] never to a position from which [illegible] either ascend or descend. I found [illegible] predicament one time, when climbing [illegible] Wales.

He never said another word and climbed perfectly, but it was a near thing for both of us.

"In the early stages of his career a leader may be entirely without nerves and unconscious of danger. Sooner or later there will be a rude awakening. Three of us started on a difficult climb in the Alps at 2 o'clock one morning. We lost our way, due to a storm, but preferred to keep going, so we breakfasted on a glacier. While we ate the storm cleared away. We were encouraged to go on. We crossed a mountain and then tackled a long ridge to reach a further summit.

"All went well and we seemed likely to reach the top before dark, but were held up by a fearful obstacle. For half an hour I tried to climb an overhang without success. I came back and resolved to go over an impossible place. A companion held my rope over a corner of the rock. When I had advanced a considerable distance and was clinging to tiny holds, somehow I seemed to lose all connection with my feet. I no longer knew what they were doing. Then, with a warning cry to my companion, I fell. I went straight down, touching nothing until the rope jerked taut. Continued strain had caused the nervous tissues to give way. My companion, who later wrote the trip, said I fell 40 feet. It was a miracle that the rope held, for it was of a kind that was later condemned by the Alpine Club. However, I was pulled up and I led on, but in an opposite direction.

"We found a glorious view of the sunset from the top and fortunately an easy way down. I went over the incident in my mind and there is no doubt but that when I next climbed difficult rocks I had to begin again to learn mountain climbing; learn to do consciously what I had done unconsciously before.

"Rocks and boulders rolling down the slopes are a constant menace to mountaineers. I remember a climb in the Alps when we ran into bad weather on a pass and lost our way. We tried to get down a glacier and failed, and then were obliged to cross a slope at the side of it. In the thunderstorm there was an obvious danger on that slope. On easy ground we dashed across without being hit by any fragments of rock or ice. Later we were obliged to recross the slope lower down where the way was more difficult. Suddenly I saw a huge boulder detach itself from its bed and come hurtling down upon us. I shouted to my companion and we crouched against the rocks for protection. The stones came bounding down the slope. My position was such that I could observe my companion. Stones were flying over his head, missing him by inches. This noisy bombardment went on for about a minute. Any one of these great rocks might have killed either or both of us. Even a small stone hitting one of the party while they are moving may cause all to be dashed to the bottom. These rocks are dislodged by the rain or the morning sun. They are melted or thawed from their beds.

"In my first season I soon learned something of equipment. Our last expedition of the season was to cross Mont Blanc from the Italian side to Chamonix. This required a number of days. The weather was bad and we were compelled to stay at the hut at 10,000 feet while a fearful storm raged outside. Luckily, we found a prehistoric loaf of bread and a few fragments of cheese dating back to the Stone Age—it was hard as stone, at any rate. We lived on this until the storm passed. We then started up the slope with a few stale biscuits, some honey and a little [illegible].

"When we came out on the great ridges of the mountain a terrific north wind blew directly in our faces, driving before it particles of stinging snow. It was almost unendurable! We [illegible] a little hut and cooked our [illegible] sence and prepared to tackle [illegible] ridge over the 'Camel's Hump.' "We went along a ridge in the [illegible] of the bitter blast, and all I [illegible] wearing was thin underwear and [illegible] tweed knickers. I made up my mind [illegible] then and there that the most important part of the equipment [illegible] wind-proof knickers. And [illegible]

[illegible] discovered what all Arctic explorers know: that two thin layers of clothing is better than one thick [illegible] My plan is to wear several [illegible] the best quality wool, according to conditions, either as underclothing, sweaters or flannel shirts [illegible] cotton, wind-proof material. [illegible] sort of clothing is extremely light and the spare clothes [illegible] carried. Boots offer a very difficult problem. They must not be too clumsy, and yet, if a number of socks are to be worn, they must be roomy. I have found that size does not matter so much if the boots fit well about the ankle and instep, and are sufficiently light and lined with [illegible] Spikes on boots must not project on the inner sole. The spikes [illegible] the cold too readily. Gloves should be of leather, lined with wool, without fingers.

"Perhaps a mountaineer [illegible] about nothing so much as about the weather. He has to be constantly observing it, for if he didn't he would certainly never come back alive. It is not only the cold but actual exhaustion which makes it impossible to endure extremes at times.

"I remember one storm which occurred on one of the steepest mountain faces in the Alps. Three of us, with two guides, featured in that [illegible] One of the guides had made one of the most brilliant leads up a rock that I have ever seen—up an exceedingly steep place two hundred feet high.

"Higher up the ground was easier until the storm burst. Rain and snow were precipitated upon us. Very soon every foot and hand hold was unstable. The guides would not go on. We let ourselves down on the ropes until we were standing on a ledge above a steep drop. The guides were above us, fastening the rope to a huge boulder, preparing to let themselves down. This great rock gave way! How they were saved I don't know. Those of us who were below on the ledge stood there waiting to be swept off the cliffs. It seemed hours. But the boulder bounded over our heads, missing us by a few feet, and passed harmlessly into the drop beyond. Mountaineering has its thrills!

"Incompetent companions are, perhaps, one of the greatest dangers to mountaineers. The best way is to keep ahead of them. In the British Isles, where the climbs are short and climbers are too ready to take with them unskilled beginners on difficult climbs, narrow escapes are frequent. Nevertheless, I have often asked for trouble by yoking on a layman.

"The position most dreaded is to execute a manoeuver to a position from which it is impossible to either ascend or descend. I found myself in such a predicament one time, when climbing alone, in North Wales.

"I had left my favorite pipe atop a mountain the preceding day and was determined to retrieve it. I planned my route and started up. None had gone that way before. I soon found myself climbing up almost sheer rocks, always landing on little, sloping platforms. Unconsciously, I began to think that I would rather go ahead than go back. The ground became steeper and I was forced to move to the right and struggle desperately.

"Here I made a move of that sort which may be made going up but not going down. I searched and discovered a series of little holes and after a perilous scramble, worked myself to where the little holes were sharp and I could grasp them with my fingers. I got the pipe."

The boulder bounded over our heads, missing us by only a few feet.

The Uncanny Senses of Willetta, 17, Blind and Deaf

Her phenomenal development of the faculties of touch and smell enable Wisconsin girl to distinguish colors, tell denominations of paper money, "read" newspaper headlines and "hear" conversations and music, according to recent stringent tests—Physicians who examined child predict fame and unique usefulness for her :: :: :: ::

Willetta Huggins "reading" newspaper headlines through her extraordinary sense of touch, during tests by physicians at Chicago.
—Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, Chicago.

"EVEN more marvelous than Helen Keller," is the verdict of distinguished Chicago physicians who put Wilmetta Huggins the 17-year-old blind girl of Janesville, Wis., through some rigid tests a few weeks ago. They agreed that this slender girl, totally blind and totally deaf, has a phenomenal development of the senses of touch and smell. Among the wonderful things she can do, although so seriously handicapped, are the following:

She can distinguish colors with startling accuracy, simply by touch and smell.

She can "read" newspaper headlines by means of the same senses.

She can talk over the telephone, enjoy music, carry on a rapid conversation and do many other things seemingly impossible for one who is blind and deaf.

She can tell the height of buildings when standing on the opposite side of the street.

She can "hear" a lecture or concert merely by holding a sheet of paper in the air and thus catching the vibrations.

She can tell the denomination of paper money by feeling the number.

She can distinguish colors by the smell. This she demonstrated with skeins of yarn and an assortment of paper flowers.

In the tests before the Chicago physicians, a glass tube was inserted in one of her nostrils and woolens of various colors were held against the end of the tube. She classified correctly more than 100 samples, some of them faded and impregnated with chemicals.

By placing her finger on the chest of a speaker, she can carry on a conversation without any difficulty.

Physicians who attended the tests at Chicago say that the girl has developed the sense of smell to an unheard of degree. They predict for her a remarkable career, not on the vaudeville stage, but as a teacher of the blind and deaf. President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern University stated that Miss Huggins' senses of touch and smell had proved too highly refined to be measured by the ordinary instruments in use in the psychological laboratories of the university.

Prof. Joseph Jastrow of the department of psychology at the University of Wisconsin, expressed the opinion that the girl had retained a remnant of sight and that this enabled her to distinguish colors, figures and the height of buildings. To offset this doubt, the experiments in Chicago were conducted in a dark room and the girl was securely blindfolded and every precaution was taken to avoid anything that might appear to assist her.

Physicians say that only two cases in recent years are at all comparable with that of Miss Huggins. One is Laura Bridgman, a pupil of Samuel G. Howe, and the other is Helen Keller. In the case of Miss Keller, it is pointed out that she was possessed of a high grade of intelligence, which, once put into communication with the external world, enabled her to surmount the great obstacles which blindness and deafness placed in her way. The mental and physical handicaps of Willetta Huggins make her attainments all the more remarkable.

In Willetta's case, it should be borne in mind that she possessed both sight and hearing for the first 12 years of her life. In October, 1919, following a severe catarrhal cold, she lost the sense of hearing over night and it has never returned.

Her sight had been failing rapidly after her tenth year and when she was 15, she had totally lost the senses of hearing and sight. Thus banished from the everyday world, she developed a morbid, uninterested and morose attitude toward everything. She grew listless and apathetic. Physically her condition was good and of normal development.

During 1920, Miss Smith, a teacher of the deaf at Eau Claire, Wis., told Willetta about Helen Keller's method of communication and the girl immediately became interested. Soon she began to show remarkable mental development and speedily piloted herself out of the darkness and into communication with the

The Truth About Paris Mannequins

Making 7000 changes of costumes a year is one of the ordeals of these goddesses of fashion—Reputed salaries rival those of Hollywood film stars, but they are not real—From gorgeous gowns to simple frocks at the end of a day's work, then home on a street car—Showing off a different gown every four minutes and the weird scenes in the dressing rooms ::

Tourist shoppers in an eager search for style and beauty.

TO THE woman who goes abroad at this season of the year one of the lures of Paris is the mannequin, that wonderful creature who lends her beauty, grace and charm to the exhibition and exploitation of those marvelous hats and gowns and wraps which the Parisian milliners and designers devise to intrigue the feminine mind the world over.

How many romances have been written around and about the Paris mannequin! If you will but listen to the vagrant winds of rumor you may easily be led to believe that these pampered goddesses of fashion, these modern Helens, take from Paris a veritable golden apple as the fitting prize for their manifold charms. Like the film actresses of Hollywood, these alluring models are forms upon which to drape stories of fabulous salaries, luxurious jewels, gorgeous limousines and romantic lives.

Does the American woman, watching the queenly mannequins pass in review in a Paris shop, ever stop to think that these stories of gigantic salaries are pure fiction?

Let her seek out and find, at whatever cost of effort, a truthful Parisian and ask him if it is true that the mannequin draws down a pay check of so great magnificence. The answer will be short and crisp, in those two eloquent words: "Mais non!"

When one stands in the Louvre and gazes upon a painter's masterpiece, only one side of the picture is visible. One does not think of the other side, which is dull, drab and very likely dusty and altogether unpresentable canvas.

Just so, the truthful Parisian will tell you, there are two sides to the so beautiful mannequin who intrigues Madame when she goes to buy a gown of never-to-be-equaled style or a bonnet three times chic.

These tales of so inflated salaries, he will tell you, are what you would call in America heated atmosphere. And then he will politely, but firmly, dissipate all your preconceived notions by mentioning the ridiculously small sum of $25 a week as being the maximum salary to which a mannequin may hope to attain. And to earn this modest sum she must change her dress 7000 times a year! It is of a sadness, but true!

Ah, yes! This mannequin is indeed a gorgeous butterfly, but she is a butterfly in borrowed plumage. Just the butterfly of a day, and when night comes she sheds her brilliant colors and clings with her poor bruised wings to a post or a strap in one of those so crowded subway cars and goes—to her luxurious apartment in one of the three-time fashionable avenues? Of a certainty, not! The end of her tiresome journey finds her in a room of the hall within reaching distance of the roof in some lodging house of an execrable cheapness. And it is to be whispered! Perhaps it is of a necessity that with her own hands she launder her lingerie before retiring, which, one must admit, is a sad bedtime story.

The lady of an impressive, or should one say oppressive stoutness, who sits, very appropriately, in an overstuffed chair in the display room of one of the so fashionable shops of Paris sees the mannequin butterfly only in her most gorgeous guise. Alas! She does not know how many times that butterfly has been impaled upon a pin. It is of a truth that the pin is the bete noir of the mannequin. Not in the sense of slang, but three-times literally, she is stuck up. Pin to her is the name of a dog!

Ah, yes, of a certainty she is a thing of beauty when she walks through the showrooms of the big store. She strolls, she saunters with a slouch of the shoulders and a carefully calculated swing of the hips. She is a very picture of beautifully gowned leisure, but if you will notice carefully you will see that the same mannequin, wearing a different gown each time, passes through the room every four minutes.

Ah, milady, could you but have just one little glimpse into the dressing rooms!

In one or two of the best houses each girl has a little toilet table before which she sits to revise her makeup. But in most the dressing room is only a cramped, bare affair surrounded by clothes closets. It is a pretty spectacle to watch but not a pleasant one in which to participate. Into the room full of twisting, slim, half-clad girls slips a mannequin who has just done the salons in a whispy, clinging evening gown that reminds one of Gunga Din's uniform.

"Nothin' much before, and rather less than 'alf o' that be'ind."

Before she is well through the door two little dressing maids are at her, unhooking, loosening, slipping the gown down so that she can step out of it. The wardrobe mistress has the next one ready, another evening gown with more beads in the trimming of what bodice there is. The mannequin puts her arms into the circle of the skirt like a swimmer taking the high dive. Down it comes over her head.

"Ouch!" she says, as the beads catch in her curls. The curl is loosened, the gown comes down a little further, filling her eyes. She stamps her foot and swears (all the rest of them are swearing, too). The many beads have scratched the soft skin under her biceps, already equisitely sensitive from scratches earlier in the day and kept so by continual scratches all through the season.

"What's that?"

A salesgirl has just thrust her head in the door.

"What?"

"A woman wants another look at your last gown."

"What! Have I got to put that on again? Sacred name of a dog! The miserable old bit of ragged lace growing in the gutter! Why couldn't she look at it when I had it on? Ouch! Stop scratching me, I say. Give me that Cologne water. B-r-r-r-r! How it burns. You have my hair all down again." And then, perhaps, a few swear words.

The dress half on is hurriedly slipped back over the high diver's arms. Head foremost, with a hair in her eye and another in her mouth, she plunges back into the dress that she has just finished with. Ouch! Wriggles. A slap at the dressing maid who pulls her.

"Gee! My feet hurt. Wait a minute. You ruined my face. See, you ninny, it's all streaked and some of the rouge came off on my arms. Oh, you idiot. Where's my powder? Sacr-r-r-e chien! Hook up my garter. My stocking's falling down. There! Lily-white! Ugh-ugh! All right, open the door."

And out into the first salon, slowly, gracefully, like a ghostly lily drifts out beauty, smiling reflectively as if meditating on the inferior lot of all the rest of humanity.

But behind her back, other grunts, other swearing, hurried changing of black stockings and shoes for tan or pink ones, dabbing of rouge and powder, often a different powder for each costume, dabbing of cologne water, straining of waist lines, grunts, and many more little curse words.

Your Parisian informant will tell you that if the mannequin's lot is a bed of roses it is one from which the thorns have not been removed, for, of a certain

Pretty To See But Tortured By Pins

You find them in the subway, still radiating style, but in simple black frocks.

Romantic stories are forever circling about these darlings of fashion, who, in truth, are kept so busy making 40 changes of costume a day that they are too tired for romance when night comes. One hears that this mannequin paints, that this other one writes verses, that still another makes a hobby of collecting diamonds. What vaporings! The only way in which a mannequin could collect diamonds would be a way that would be sure to cause her to make the acquaintance of the Prefect of Police. The public likes these stories and so do the mannequins, but of truth these tales have not so much as one might put into one thimble.

In fact, there is no uniform wage for mannequins. They have no union and the pay depends on the generosity of the employer or the exigencies of competition. These employers are shrewd fellows. They have sufficient insight into the feminine psychology to know that part of the average mannequin's compensation lies in the satisfaction which she gets from daily wearing gowns the most beautiful, a pleasure of which she is so fond that in order to indulge it she willingly undergoes the ordeal of the pins. And then there is always the chance that she may be one of the favored ones chosen to make the annual pilgrimage of exploitation to Deauville or the Longchamps races, though one may be assured that these are the richest plums which fall only to the very best mannequins—those who have reached the top of their profession and the $25 a week salary which goes with that so high eminence.

It makes no difference to her that she has more bosses than an office boy. She is at the beck and call of practically everybody in the style establishment. About the only person in the place who cannot give her orders is the woman who sweeps out at night. But, pouf! What cares the mannequin so long as she lives in a world of beautiful gowns and has at hand all those expensive, artificial aids to beauty which will best set off her charms? Such things are life to the Parisienne of the shops.

One of the mannequin's compensations is that she has complete freedom from responsibility. She bears not even the slightest worry in designing or selling the "creations" she wears or in the management of any phase or fraction of the establishment where she is employed. The boy who drops the company's letters in the mail box is a giant of executive effort in comparison.

At the Deauville races.

Just as house painters suffer from lead poisoning, as matchmakers used to suffer from phosphorous poisoning, as steel mill hands suffer from steel dust in their lungs, as oboe players suffer from high blood pressure, so these pretty and apparently carefree creatures have their trade maladies.

In common with street car conductors, policemen and others who stand on their feet to earn a living, they suffer from flat feet and varicose veins. In addition they dread other ailments, among which are numbered those that every woman standee reader knows, and a few more besides. There are in addition a few ills that other stand-up occupations escape, a few that are peculiar to the fashion trade. As has been explained, the mannequins complain bitterly of a liberal pin pricking all over their bodies and of scratched arms and shoulders.

Take the typical instance of one mannequin about whom romances the most fantastic have been written, one who year after year has been the most loudly applauded when she appeared gorgeously gowned at the great costume balls given by the big fashion houses in combination. Her title as queen of the models has been for many years unchallenged and she has won a score of beauty prizes.

This woman, whose name comes to mind whenever mannequins are mentioned, is 30 years old this year. She has been a mannequin 15 years. In that time she has stood up most of the working day, with the result that now she finds it necessary to take each year a two months' vacation, during which she stands as little as possible. Her malady, a distension of veins, may make it necessary for her to give up the only occupation she knows. She lives in a small and far from luxurious flat and when able she does her own housework, and economy forces her to make her own clothes—not the gorgeously beautiful ones which she wears when the eyes of fashion-hunting tourists are upon her, but the severely plain garments which she wears when going to and from her work.

Ah, yes! It is a glorious life. But not! It is a profession pretty to look at, but no fun to do. Think, if you can! Twenty costumes to a mannequin. Each one donned twice a day from February to September. That means changing clothes 6720 times in a season. And this does not take into account the many changes in the designing season, when the gowns are literally made and remade on the model's body.

when one rides home in the subway it is an occasion of sadness to make sure which of the passengers are mannequins by the way in which they divide their time between hanging on and scratching their multitudinous pin wounds. "As busy as a mannequin on a street car strap" might well be a Parisian simile. For all her life she is goaded by pins.

The fashion business is divided into two seasons. The designing and making season is in the fall and winter and the selling season is in the spring and summer, when travelers flock to Paris.

The torture of the pins begin in the early fall. This is the season when the mannequin is not a glittering, shimmering butterfly displaying her effulgence to the public view. Emphatically but not! Then it is that through long, weary days, weeks and months she is, as one would say, a human pincushion, only to speak truth, she is not treated as a human by those so ruthless dressmakers who have in their souls no nice regard for the comfort of others when sticking pins.

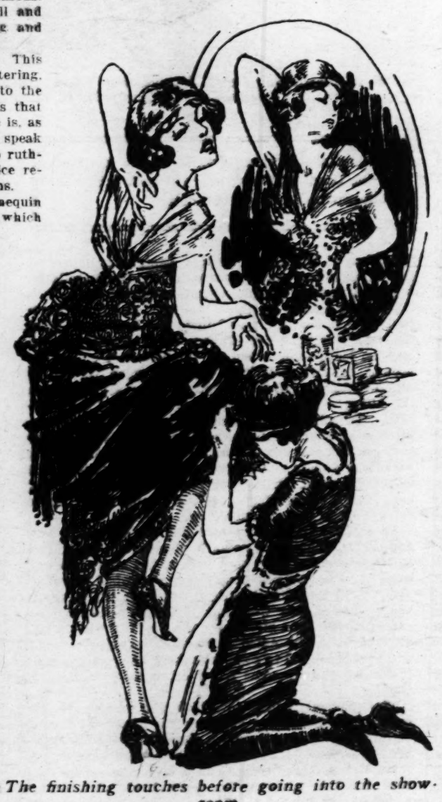
During this making season the life of the mannequin is one perpetual fitting, the discomforts of which every woman knows, except that the mannequin is shown far less deference than is shown to a client who is paying good money and who may go to another house through some small error of tact.

In general, the gowns are made on her body, first with pins, later with needle and thread.

All morning and all afternoon she stands while a temperamental, worried and hurried designer pins strips of silk, or wool, or lace, this way and that—turns her about with nervous fingers, takes the pins out, adjusts the cloth, and sticks the pins in again, repeats it again and again, all too often, the mannequin complains, sticking the pins into the living flesh. Eventually, in three days or a week or 10 days, the gown has assumed some sort of form and is ready for the approval or disapproval of the head of the house. In his boudoirlike office there is more pinning and unpinning, more turning and standing. If the design is acceptable to him the pins are withdrawn and the gown is hurriedly sewn together, again on the standing model.

This goes on until each mannequin has had from 15 to 20 gowns, capes, evening cloaks or suits built on her body. When the selling season opens these, with the hats, headdresses, shoes and stockings and parasols that go with them, will be her "collection."

The making season usually winds up with a feverish rush, during which everybody in the establishment works far into every night of the week, and the selling season opens with everybody more or less all in.



The finishing touches before going into the showroom.

"The OZARK BLUFF-DWELLERS," Mysterious Prehistoric Missourians of

A typical dry rock shelter such as the Ozark bluff dwellers inhabited.

M. R. Harrington (left), discoverer of the Ozark bluff dwellers, with his chief assistant, C. O. Turbyfill, in camp near Noel, Mo.

In rock shelters under overhanging bluffs along the Cowskin River in extreme Southwest Missouri, relics of a complete culture of a prehistoric race hitherto unknown to science have been unearthed by an expedition sent from New York by the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation — Skeletons of adults and infants found, in some cases bodies "mummied" by desiccation — Baby strapped in cradle lined with turkey-down slept 10 centuries or more. :: :: ::

Other photographs illustrating the discovery of the Ozark bluff dwellers will be found in the Rotogravure Section of this date.

A THOUSAND years ago, perhaps even hundreds of years earlier, a Missouri woman sat under the overhanging eaves of a bluff high above the banks of the Cowskin River in McDonald County, crooning a lullaby in an Indian tongue unknown to human history. Little Pappoose succumbed to the soothing melody and dropped off to sleep. As he slept, his mother's fingers flew deftly in pursuit of a labor of love.

The prehistoric Missouri mother was lining a "cradle" for her baby. It was not the type of cradle used by Missouri mothers of an era far later, the kind with rockers at the bottom. It was a carrier rather than a cradle. The foundation was a wooden frame of U shape, backed with weave-work of split cane. The weaving resembled that of a cane-bottomed chair, though not so closely woven; the pattern was ornamented with small circular holes. Attached to the frame was a hood or pocket made of interwoven bark and fiber. Into this pocket Little Pappoose was slipped when his mother, busy about her work of looking after the household, carried the cradle strapped to her back.

This early-day Missouri mother was quite at home in the rock shelter under the overhanging bluff. It was the only home the family knew. Nature had been the architect. Immemorial ages earlier the work of construction had started. First came the upheaval of the ancient limestone rocks, layer by layer interposed. Then, in a crevice or "fault" of the rocks, a stream of water began to trickle. Gradually the stream ate deeper. In time mighty torrents poured through the channel. Age after age the waters ate into the limestone. Then, slowly, the stream receded, became at last a gentle, purling river running far below the eroded bluffs, and when at last the white man came and discovered this crystal-clear water course in the Ozark hills he bestowed upon it the picturesque name of Cowskin.

The rock shelter up there was high and dry. From time to time stones big and little had broken off from the overhanging ledge—known to geologists as the Eureka ledge—and fallen in tumbled fashion to the ground beneath. Back of this irregular barrier of fallen rocks was left a space protected on all sides from the biting winds that blow in season along the Cowskin. Crouching down behind the barrier, the prehistoric Missouri family was fairly comfortable. There they cooked and ate and slept; and the women wove baskets and mats and sewed deerskin garments for the men, who went forth from the rock shelter to slay game for the replenishing of the family larder, or to catch fish in the stream below.

These ancient Missouri men did not hunt with bow and arrow. The bow was an implement not yet known to Missourians. They used spears, the shaft being of cane, five to six feet long, with hardwood foreshaft about eight inches in length, tipped with a flint spearhead. The spears were not hurled directly, but an extra impetus was given by use of a "throwing stick" or "hurler." The Aztec name of this device is atlatl, and it still is used to some extent by Aztec descendants in Mexico and by some tribes of Eskimos in the Far North.

The particular task to which the mother in her rock-shelter home was applying her talents at the indefinite period mentioned, a thousand years or more ago, was the lining of Little Pappoose's cradle with something soft and cozy, to help keep him warm. She used for this purpose the down from wild turkeys killed by her husband. When this love-labor was finished, she slipped her infant into the cradle pocket and smiled in pride quite pardonable. She was happy. 'Twas a most beautiful world down there in the Ozarks, with game and fish in abundance; the winds sang in the trees atop the bluff and along the slope, and the river sang below; the Great Spirit brooded over all.

But presently came tragedy into the home of these prehistoric Missourians. Death, the mighty mystery, invaded the household. Little Pappoose was the one chosen to go forth into the unknown. His burial was a solemn affair. Wailing and chanting vexed the song of the river. Between the ledge which it joined the floor of the rock shelter and a fallen rock the mourners scooped a shallow little grave. They used digging sticks of seasoned wood, or perhaps stone hatchets. Strapped into his cradle, with the turkey-down next his cold body, Little Pappoose was laid in the grave, the dry limestone dust was raked and scraped in to fill the hole, and on top was placed a flat rock. So there the dead baby was left to the protecting care of the Great Spirit.

And now, early in this year A. D. 1922, a thousand or more years after that pathetic burial, has come to the banks of Cowskin a learned man of the pale-face tribe—a tribe quite unknown to that ancient Missouri family. This learned man, writer of half a dozen books and reader of many volumes both written and unwritten, for his specialty lies in the perusal of the prehistoric past in America, has come to the Cowskin armed with a mason's trowel and a fine hairbrush, equipped also with a "dust-breather," which looks like something like a coffee strainer and is attached to the nose when the erudite paleface goes digging in the dust for relics of prehistoric Missourians.

The modern hunter thus quaintly equipped squats down on the ground in the rock shelter that was the home of the ancient mother who crooned a lullaby as she wove the turkey-down into the lining of the baby's cradle and burial casket. He digs with his trowel through the upper layers of long-accumulated dust, finding evidence of Indian life of an age [illegible]

the arrival of Columbus. He digs four or five feet below the surface, digger. He goes about his work quietly. Any moment his trowel might come upon some frail relic of prehistoric culture. In case the trowel does that very thing, the digger senses something important. As he removes some of the remaining dust he bends low to peer at the object thus unearthed. Then he blows away the dust that would otherwise protects his nostrils, thus avoiding breathing in with a fine, flying dust. It is by no means a pleasant job to be down there in that stuffy excavation. The archaeologist has no thought as to discomfort. The trowel laid aside, he takes from a pocket a soft camel's hair brush. With it he brushes away such dust as clings to the object he has unearthed.

The object is none other than the mummified body of Little Pappoose; and the fingers of the archaeologist move reverently along the inner lining of the cradle, soft and velvety with its turkey-down. Within a group of half a dozen tents, back from the rock shelter, the student of science has a little pappoose of his own. He handles most gently the dried-up body of the infant life, the little Missouri Indian who lived a thousand years ago.

Missouri's New-Found Prehistoric Race Described by Discoverer

By M. R. HARRINGTON

Chief of the Expedition from the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, New York.

WE REGARD our discoveries in the dry rock shelters of the Ozarks as particularly interesting, first of all because we have succeeded here in finding, thanks to the dryness of the deposits, practically everything the ancient "Ozark bluff dwellers" made or used, even to basketry, skin clothing, woven textiles and wooden implements, in addition to the articles of stone and bone usually found by archeologists in caves and mounds.

We will therefore be able to reconstruct, so to speak, the life of an ancient people hitherto unknown to science, and to reveal their agriculture, their manufactures and their arts, in a way that never has been possible before in a region so far east as Missouri or Arkansas.

Of especial importance also will be the information concerning the migrations of peoples in ancient America. The Ozark bluff dwellers, if we may judge from the coiled baskets, the spear-throwers, the basketry water bottle lined with pitch and the corn-grinding stones they left behind, probably came originally from what is now New Mexico, Arizona or even Old Mexico; although other articles they made find modern representatives in the hands of scattered tribes from Louisiana to Canada, and some things, such as the cradleboards woven of cane, have been unknown hitherto to students of Indian life.

As to the age of the specimens we have found, nothing definite can be said, for these people left no dated inscriptions like those of ancient Egypt or our own Mayas of Central America. However, all are prehistoric; that is, they date from before the coming of the whites. We may guess that the Ozark bluff dweller deposits, accumulated through many generations, may be a thousand or more years old, while the upper layer appearing in some rock shelters, left by a later and different people, must be at least 300 years old.

not many miles from the region along the Cowskin where the expedition began operations in February.

Mr. Harrington has discovered, in Arkansas and Missouri, indubitable evidences of a prehistoric race hitherto unknown to science. He has named this newfound race the "Ozark bluff dwellers," and after his researches are completed he will write a book about this ancient people.

Already he is author of several books resulting from his researches. "Cuba Before Columbus" is a title that tells its own tale. "Certain Caddo Sites in Arkansas" is a book of closer-to-home interest. "Cherokee and Earlier Remains on Upper Tennessee River" carries its own significance. "Religion and Ceremonies of the Lenape Indians" has to do with a New Jersey tribe. "Sacred Bundles of the Sauk and Fox Indians" is a mystery title requiring more explanation than space permits here. "The Last of the Iroquois Potters" needs no publisher's "blurb" to point out its engaging qualities.

These book titles indicate the wide range of researches made by the discoverer of the earliest-known Missouri inhabitants. Immediate photography on the

HOLLYWOOD RE-VISITED--NO. 3

The romance of Pola Negri and Charlie Chaplin two of the screen's greatest figures—What each has to say about it—They agree that it was a case of love at first sight—And so they will marry unless temperamental differences intervene to break up the match :: :: ::

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

NOT since the courtship of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, which has since faded in the dull respectability of marriage, had any love affair in Hollywood attracted so much attention as the romantic attachment of Pola Negri and Charlie Chaplin. For, while Oscar Wilde may have been correct in saying every love affair except one's own is ridiculous, there is no question that nearly everyone has taken some interest in this amazing match. This is only natural—since Charlie Chaplin is regarded as the greatest, perhaps the only, genius so far produced by the motion picture industry; and Miss Pola Negri is not only one of the greatest emotional actresses of the screen but also a most celebrated beauty. No other couple that ever fell in love, with the possible exception of "Doug" and Mary, is known to as many millions all over the world as these two film favorites. Consequently their reported engagement, which they both finally admitted, is one of the outstanding events in the gelatine world.

When and where Miss Pola Negri and Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin will become man and wife is a question that cannot be answered here—for the simple reason that they themselves have not settled these important details. But how they happened to fall in love with each other and why they love each other may be set forth. And the curiosity of their admirers may be satisfied.

I am not a prophet, nor do I believe in prophecy, but my guess is that Miss Negri and her fiance will marry before summer—unless they dissolve their engagement by mutual consent. I base this guess on the fact that Charlie Chaplin has been invited to accompany "Doug" and Mary on a trip to the Orient. This invitation is too wonderful an opportunity for a honeymoon to be neglected by anyone in the engaged class. Added to this is the coincidence that the comedian's new house at Beverly Hills will be ready by summer. So that if Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin are not "at home" next fall it will be because of temperament differences, over which neither love nor mutual forbearance can triumph.

There have been so many misstatements printed about Miss Negri and her legal ability to marry that it might be well to set forth the facts about her. And, having visited her for a month in Berlin last summer, as well as having seen her daily for a similar period this winter, I am able to clear up the "mystery" that has long surrounded her.

In the first place, Miss Negri is free to wed—not only having been divorced from her first husband, Count Dumbski, a Polish nobleman, but actually being possessed of an apostolic dissolution of marriage from the Vatican. From which it will be seen that Miss Negri is not a Jewess but a Roman Catholic. The stories that her real name is Schwartz and that she is a German are equally absurd. Her real name is Apollonia Chalupez—and she is Polish born and bred. It may be ungallant to say so; but she is 26 years old.

Before she came to America, last September, Miss Negri was known as the Countess Dumbski, but she wisely dropped her title when she reached Hollywood. She is a Polish citizen, of course, but she will become a British subject—for Chaplin is an Englishman, although he was born in France.

Long before she became a motion picture star Miss Negri was considered one of the greatest emotional actresses on the Polish and German stages, and here in America she became famous overnight for her remarkable acting in "Passion," as her famous Du Barry film was called. Charlie Chaplin and his love affairs are much more familiar to the American public. In the last six or seven years he has been reported engaged to a dozen different women, but it is a significant fact that, except in the case of Mildred Harris, whom he married, this is the first time he has ever admitted the truth of such reports.

Pola and Charlie, photographed just after they announced their engagement.

When he first sprang into fame, Chaplin and Miss Edna Purviance, who is still his leading lady in the films, were reported to be engaged. Major and minor film actresses like Claire Windsor and Mae Collins were rumored as possible Mrs. Chaplins. And the celebrated sculptress, Mrs. Claire Sheridan, was even reported to be his fiancee, but with the same result. Before Miss Negri arrived in Hollywood Miss Lila Lee, a screen star, daughter of a Chicago Alderman, was his companion on so many occasions that their names were linked together. And when that affair ended the comedian was so much in the company of Peggy Hopkins Joyce that their engagement was rumored.

In fact, Chaplin has been such a man of affairs that when the first rumor of his engagement to Pola Negri was printed the film colony refused to take it seriously. And despite the fact that they had rarely been seen away from each other, their engagement was not an accepted fact until Charlie publicly announced it at Del Monte while he was visiting Miss Negri there.

So now that the famous young people are engaged—it must be remembered that Charlie is still in his middle thirties—it is fitting that they should "tell the world" about their romance. And so they have.

HOW I FELL IN LOVE WITH CHARLIE
By Pola Negri

IT WAS a case of love at first sight. I really fell in love with my Charlie the night I met him at the Palais Heinroth in Berlin, a year ago last September, but I didn't realize it until I saw him a year later in Hollywood!

We spent four delightful days together in Berlin on the occasion of his first visit to Germany. I was completely captivated by his gayety, but as he did not speak more than three words of German and at that time I did not speak more than three words of English, our conversation was rather limited. In fact, I don't believe we thought of love. But now, as I look back on our meeting, I know that my love for him began on that fateful night at the Palais Heinroth.

When I arrived in Hollywood last September I did not write my Charlie. I felt it was his place to call on him that he gave not the least thought to the weapons which Guthrie certainly carried. He would choose a time when his captor would have to rely on his bare hands alone. He fell upon his meal with a better appetite.

Guthrie smiled.

"That's right; make the best of it. You can never tell—you may be lucky when you get into court. The Judge may let you off easy."

Court! Judge! These two factors had had no place in his calculations. Maynard would never be caught; that he had decided on the night that he had impulsively planned the crime. It could be done; it could be done safely, if cleverly enough. Cleverly! That thought had been his damnation. Had it been merely a question of lawbreaking, his instinct would never have permitted him to go wrong. But it had been a question of matching his wits against the wits of the creditors who would descend upon him in a swarm were they to get an inkling of the truth. And it had seemed, in those distant days, that his lie might pass without detection. Business was sure to get better. The bank, and the thin-lipped examiner who had checked his account, would never know how near he had been to destruction.

And then, somehow, business had failed to get better. Collections were bad; checks were not coming in. Yet he was compelled to settle his own accounts promptly; any other course would have involved fatal admissions. Slowly, relentlessly, inevitably, Maynard saw his downfall approaching. His principal competitor had given up the fight, had thrown himself on the mercy of his creditors, and was to be tided over. Bitterly Maynard reflected that had he not been so unnecessarily clever, he might have done the same thing. But his signature on the false statement had closed that avenue of relief. He was beyond the pale; for him there would be no assistance, nothing but a swift trial, disgrace and years in prison.

With characteristic calm he had turned his intelligence upon that latter subject. After the exposure, could he escape punishment? He had thought so until he had walked into Guthrie's arms. Now, after having made sure of the weakness of his captor, he felt confident of it.

A harsh, raucous sound from Guthrie broke in on Maynard's ruminations.

"Water!" gasped the man. "Water!"

His face had turned deathly pale; his huge form, suddenly risen to its full height, tottered drunkenly; his enormous hands clutched impotently at his throat.

Maynard jumped to the sideboard and brought him a glass. Guthrie tried to drink.

"Heart's bad," he whispered, as his prisoner, too surprised to profit by his sudden advantage, eased him into a chair. "Some day—doctor told me—it's going to quit ticking—like a busted watch."

Somehow Maynard found himself overflowing with sympathy for his late enemy. He tore open the man's collar; flung up a rickety window.

"I'm going for a doctor!" he heard himself saying.

But before the words had passed his lips he realized their futility. Guthrie had slumped to the floor, his arms spread wide, his head cocked at an impossible angle; and even as Maynard hesitated, the labored breathing ceased.

Guthrie was dead.

Had it been possible to help Guthrie, Maynard would have helped him, even at the cost of his own freedom; of that he was conscious, with a curious thrill.

He had planned to fight the man, to injure him, if need be, with what consequences might follow. A higher power had taken the matter out of his hands, had struck more forcibly than ever he would have dared strike.

Flight was out of the question. They had been seen to enter the restaurant together. Were he to leave alone, not 10 minutes would elapse before the beginning of the pursuit. Were he to run away, Guthrie's death would be laid at his door, and no amount of explanation could save him from this graver charge. Flight meant confession—confession of anything and everything.

But if he remained, his position would be hardly better. His version of the story might be accepted until an examination of the dead man's effects showed him to be an officer of the law and further investigation disclosed Maynard as a fugitive from justice. He was guilty of one crime; the law would hold him capable of any other.

The door opened suddenly. He wheeled. It was the waiter, bringing their coffee. On the instant Maynard's resolution was taken.

"Send for the police!" he commanded, gruffly, and slammed the door in the waiter's face.

He smiled as the footsteps died out along the uncarpeted corridor. The solution, the logical solution, had come to him as in a flash of lightning. Five hundred miles from home, Guthrie might be as unknown here as Maynard himself.

Swiftly he bent over the dead man, and emptied his pockets. Swiftly he exchanged their contents with his own. He sighed with satisfaction as in a trouser pocket he found the object he most sought, the little gold shield which identified the bearer.

Hardly had he finished when the door burst open.

Maynard exhibited the shield with a composure which he was far from feeling.

"I'm Guthrie, from Madison," he explained. "I arrested this man an hour ago. He's dropped dead."

The police officer nodded as calmly as if prisoners were in the habit of dropping dead every hour.

"Arrested him here?" he asked.

"Yes," said Maynard, "bumped into him on the street. Wasn't looking for him, but recognized him. He's wanted back home."

The officer scanned the dead man's face curiously. "No spring chicken, is he? Guess he's given the police enough trouble in his time."

Somehow, Maynard felt unable to join in the libel.

The police officer turned to him with interest.

"So you're Guthrie? We've been expecting you."

The officer nodded.

"We've got the man safe under lock and key, waiting for you to come with the warrant. And I don't mind saying," he added, emphatically, "that we'll be mighty glad to get rid of him. We've had some tough customers in this little town, but not many to touch this bird."

Maynard pulled out the sheaf of papers which he had removed from the detective's pocket and leafed through it with elaborate nonchalance. A large, official-looking envelope seemed promising. He opened it.

"That's right," said the police officer, taking the single document it contained from his hands. "'Original warrant of extradition.' You can't serve it any too soon to suit us."

Nothing remained for Maynard, the impostor, but to play the role through to the finish. He would accept custody of the man and escort him out of the city. Once safe from pursuit, he would turn him loose and resume his own interrupted flight.

A sudden thought came to him before he left the room. Guthrie had not quailed at the thought of guarding not one, but two able-bodied prisoners during a 500-mile trip!

A wholly involuntary phrase of admiration for the lion-hearted old man came to his lips: "By George, he certainly had nerve!"

The police officer caught his glance and smiled.

"Wait till you see Toselli," he suggested. "You'll need still more of it!"

Maynard's story was accepted without suspicion. The dead man, he explained to the local authorities, was one Maynard, a fugitive from justice. He gave cautious details. It had been a matter of juggling books; now the man had gone where such books as were kept might not be juggled with. The account was closed. And while his lips fo ...ed the words, his intelligence made careful note that Maynard, the fugitive, was now officially dead and the pursuit at an end. Tomorrow the man who passed for Guthrie would disappear, as also would the prisoner who had been confided to his keeping. The authorities would perhaps admit their unwisdom in having sent an old man upon so dangerous a mission. The prisoner, if recaptured subsequently, would be charged with an additional crime. But the Maynard case would be closed once and for all.

The Stirring Story of a Great Unexpected Fight

The men at headquarters led him to a small, white-washed cell.

"This," they explained, "is Toselli."

Maynard peered through the bars and saw a short, squat body, arms that were apelike in their reach, legs that were bowed and ungainly, and the whole surmounted by a cropped, bullet-shaped head, carrying a pair of small, malevolent eyes.

"Well," inquired his escort, "how would you like to meet him on a dark night?"

Maynard shuddered. Impersonally he had always been aware that there existed such as Toselli. This was his first meeting with an exemplar in the flesh.

"Not keen about him, Guthrie?"

"I've handled worse than that," said Maynard, feeling some such remark called for. "I'm not afraid of him."

As he spoke, the prisoner lurched heavily to his feet, and approached the bars. Maynard sensed rather than saw the apelike muscles rippling under the filthy clothing. With a curious thrill of horror he became aware that the man was silently appraising him, silently estimating his chances in a hand-to-hand combat, much as he, an hour previous, had estimated his own chances in hand-to-hand combat with Guthrie.

The movement was not lost on Maynard's companions.

Toselli grinned, showing his fangs.

A detective flung open the door of the cell.

"Here—come out where we can look at you!" he commanded.

Toselli, with the docility of a well-trained gorilla, shuffled silently into the corridor.

Maynard towered above his prisoner by more than six inches. In his hip pocket he felt the comforting weight of Guthrie's revolver. And for the first time in many months he had the sudden and sustaining feeling that the law was on his side.

With wholly unnecessary violence he seized the prisoner's right hand, repressing an involuntary shudder as his fingers closed on the scaly flesh. With a second abrupt movement he drew Guthrie's handcuffs from his pocket and clamped himself and his prisoner together.

"There!" he panted, surprised to find that his voice had a strange, convincing quality. "I guess that'll hold him!"

For answer Toselli looked into his face and grinned.

The last word of the men who had turned the prisoner over to him was: "Remember, he's dangerous. If he tries to get away, don't take a chance; shoot!"

Maynard smiled. The prisoner would get away, and there would be no shooting.

They were crossing the street. He looked up to see a heavily loaded truck bearing down upon him. He moved in his prisoner's direction to escape it, and felt the arm to which he had handcuffed his own suddenly turn to steel, and thrust him violently into the path of the onrushing danger. With a gasp he flung his weight on his prisoner, carried him bodily off his feet, and gained the safety of the sidewalk by a fraction of a second.

"You swine! You unutterable swine!" he cried.

Toselli looked up at him silently and grinned.

If he could only rid himself of his dangerous charge, turn the man loose! For the time being, it was out of the question. Street urchins, spying the handcuffs, were accompanying them in chattering groups. Pedestrians, catching the glint of the nickeled chain, were turning to stare at them curiously. Maynard hastened toward the railway station.

In the waiting room he seated himself on a long bench and dragged his prisoner to a seat at his side. His train would not arrive for half an hour. Originally he had planned not to release the man until far from the city. Now he desired nothing so much as to be relieved of his unwelcome companion at once.

He, Maynard, was a criminal. The law which he had violated proclaimed him one. The other man was a criminal, too, and Maynard became conscious of acute resentment at a classification broad enough to include them both. Alike fugitives from justice, they should have had much in common. The thought flitted through Maynard's mind and left behind it nothing but a sense of revolt. He would have reached for the key of the handcuffs at once had not the station been too crowded.

What had the man done? The papers which he had removed from Guthrie's pockets would tell the story. He leafed through them. A clipping from a newspaper contained the details of the crime. He began to read.

It had happened on a winter's night. There had been no question of robbery; malice had been the sole motive. For an affront, fancied or real, the man had broken his way through the window of the lonely cottage. His employer's wife lay asleep, her child in her arms. And the man, armed with a hatchet——

The account was made vivid with pictures of the victims.

Maynard suddenly felt sick. His hand leaped for the key which would rid himself of the foul thing at his side. He had placed it in the lock, when he heard the swish of a skirt. It was a woman with a child, passengers, hurrying to catch an earlier train. The woman was young; the child was laughing. It flashed through Maynard's mind that were he to turn the key, these two might be the next victims of the monster. Abruptly he tore it out of the lock.

When they had taken their seats in the train, Toselli shook the chain, pointed to the handcuffs suggestively, and grinned. As clearly as if he were speaking the actual words, the man was saying: "Take them off!" Maynard turned his back in horror.

"Take them off!" Half an hour ago he had been looking forward to the moment when he might.

"Take them off!" Freedom for himself, of course, but freedom, too, for the monster. Across the aisle unsuspecting passengers were settling themselves comfortably. Humanity! And the thing shackled to his wrist was but biding its time to prey upon it!

For the law itself Maynard felt contempt. He had broken it. But for those simpler laws which went down into the origin of man's being, the laws which proclaimed, "Thou shalt not kill!" he was conscious of intuitive respect. He had never thought much about them. It had never occurred to him that he might one day be brought into conflict with them. Yet chance had placed it in his power to kill just as surely as if his own hand wielded the weapon. If he liberated the thing that tugged suggestively at his wrist, and if the inevitable happened, would he not be equally guilty? Would he not be more guilty? His was the intelligence to foresee. Would not the responsibility be his?

The train was carrying him back to the place from which he had fled. It was reducing at the rate of 40 to an hour the precious miles between himself and his pursuers. Chance had undone the nearly fatal consequences of his first blunder; was he to blunder a second time?

"No!" breathed Maynard. "No!"

He must accomplish the impossible, the prisoner must be delivered to the authorities, and he must make good his own escape.

But it suddenly came to Maynard that his prisoner might be as quick-witted as himself. He glanced into the crafty eyes. The look that he received in return was almost friendly.

As the train slowed down and slithered to a halt at a station Toselli rose nonchalantly and jerked his head in eloquent suggestion that they alight here. With a violence of which he would have thought himself incapable, Maynard leaped at his prisoner and flung him back into his seat. Had the man read his thoughts? Here Maynard had hoped the two might leave the train; here, undisturbed by prying eyes, he had hoped to turn the key in the lock. Yet a single glance through the window at the pretty little cottages, the orderly white street, had totally unnerved him. It was for him to say whether tragedy and death were to be loosed upon the unsuspecting community. Liberty, absence of restraint, the right to come and go as one pleased—what was it all worth if it meant that he could never again take up a newspaper without dreading the news it might bring him? From his human pursuers he might make himself secure; but the news of the revolting deed for which he might make himself responsible would pursue him to the very end of the world!

His prisoner sat hunched together at his side, drilling him through with malignant eyes. He had not spoken yet. It was not necessary. The eyes spoke volumes. Here was bewilderment turned to suspicion; and suspicion turned to certainty; and certainty turned again to suspicion; and suspicion swollen into soul-scorching, soul-blistering hate.

The momentary struggle between the men had attracted the attention of other passengers. As the train started, an inquisitive traveling salesman rose and came nearer to [illegible] the prisoner.

"What's he done?" he asked genially.

"Murder," answered Maynard, shortly.

The traveling salesman moved away abruptly.

Maynard, watching out of the corner of his eyes, saw him imparting his knowledge to other passengers.

"No, there's no danger," he could hear him saying; "he's got him handcuffed."

Quite unconsciously, Maynard squared his shoulders. Maynard, the fugitive from society's justice, became Maynard, the protector of society!

Presently nervous travelers, in groups of two and three, found pretexts to wander to his end of the car, there to favor the two men with an impartial scrutiny.

He could overhear some of their remarks:

"See, they're handcuffed to—getfwy!"

"He's a murderer. The man said so."

"Wonder what he'd do if he got loose!"

An engaging flapper, tending an anxious father, surveyed them with interest.

"Which one's the murderer?" she inquired.

Maynard might have laughed had that not been the precise question he had been asking himself. Oddly enough, he could see nothing humorous in it.

The flapper, having been duly enlightened by her parent, favored captor and captive alike with a radiant smile and tripped on. The father, passing Maynard, nodded to him affably. Curious, he reflected, how all his fellow passengers had suddenly come to regard him as a friend! He was conscious of no reciprocal sentiment. By the merest chance the handcuffs were fastened to his left wrist instead of to his right. Had Guthrie lived things would have been otherwise. Guthrie, physical enemy, could have been outwitted—but now that something deep in Maynard's soul questioned and questioned and would not be satisfied.

He fell to counting the mileposts as they flashed by. With each his security lessened. With each the probability that he would be recognized by some new passenger increased. Quite impersonally, he began to wonder just when that would happen.

Darkness fell. The train rushed on.

They spent the night sitting bolt upright in the day coach. Guthrie would have taken a prisoner into the dining car for an evening meal. Maynard dismissed the thought. The opportunity for escape while crossing the swaying platforms was too obvious. A sudden push, an overwhelming strain on the slender links which bound them together, and freedom! Such an accident would take the responsibility from his shoulders, but not if he could foresee the accident.

During the night the coach gradually emptied. At each stop sleepy passengers nodded farewell to Maynard and disembarked. Morning came as the train neared their destination, and but for a few scattered passengers dozing in distant seats Maynard and his companion had the car to themselves.

It was then that Toselli spoke. He leaned toward Maynard and hissed the words into his ear:

"You—no Guthrie!"

Maynard was too weary to feel surprised.

"No," he admitted candidly, "I'm not Guthrie."

Toselli grinned.

"Then why you say you Guthrie, eh?"

Maynard's thoughts went crashing back to the scene at the jail. The detective had addressed him by the name of the dead man. Toselli had started. He had noticed it—then.

He waited for the man to continue.

"Guthrie—he arres' me—five years ago. I know Guthrie!"

"Well, what of that?" Maynard heard himself saying.

The man leered into his eyes. "Mebbe you kill Guthrie, what? Mebbe you kill Guthrie. All ri'. I no tell cef you le' me go."

"I'm not going to let you go," said Maynard, very quietly.

"You take me back, an' they arres' you!" threatened the man. "I tell. Sí—I tell!"

"So you would," smiled Maynard.

The murderer leaned toward him.

"Le' me go!" he hissed.

"No," Maynard said; and then, more positively: "No, Toselli."

He yawned, carelessly raised his manacled hand to his mouth. That action might well have been his last. In a flash Toselli's right hand darted over his head, dragging the chain mercilessly across his throat, and his free hand, seizing Maynard's shackled wrist, drew the chain tighter and tighter. Maynard struck out

The Problem of Longer Life as a Physician Sees It

By DR. GEORGE THOMAS PALMER,
President of the Illinois Tuberculosis Association, Springfield, Ill.

DURING the past 10 years the average length of human life has been increased five years and Prof. Irving Fisher declares that with education and the observance of the rules of health on the part of the people, the length of life may be increased 15 years. This does not mean that there will be more extreme old age. It does not mean that the man who now lives to be three-score-ten will live to be 90.

It means that the average duration of life will be increased largely through the prevention of illness and the prevention of death among infants, children and relatively young people. In 1910 the average length of life in the United States was 50 years. In 1920 it was 55 years. In the next decade we have reason to believe that the average span of life will be 60 years.

Part of this increase in the length of human life is due to the advance of science and of medicine. Within the past generation smallpox has practically disappeared on account of the general use of vaccination. Typhoid fever has become a rare disease in the better class of communities on account of better sanitation and better water supply; while the disease may be prevented by typhoid vaccination. Diphtheria has ceased to be a dreaded disease on account of antitoxin. Yellow fever has been wiped out by the destruction of the breeding places of the mosquitoes that transmitted it and this is likewise true of malaria. Human life has been increased by the progress of modern surgery.

To this extent, and perhaps more, we are indebted for our longer and more efficient lives to the doctors and the scientists. For the great part, however, prolonged life and better health are due to general education along health lines and better methods of living on the part of the rank and file of the people.

Within the past 17 years the mortality from tuberculosis has been reduced 50 per cent and this mortality is still going down. In times past, tuberculosis claimed more persons than all of the infectious and contagious diseases put together. Today, for the first time in the history of civilization, we have tuberculosis on the run, and if all of the people will unite against it there is no reason why the disease should not practically disappear in two or three generations.

The warfare against tuberculosis stands out the most encouraging, the most spectacular and the most glorious chapter in the entire history of preventive medicine and it is especially interesting because it indicates what may be accomplished through education and through better methods of living on the part of the people. Unlike smallpox, typhoid fever and diphtheria, there has never been discovered a preventive vaccine or antitoxin for tuberculosis, nor has there ever been discovered a definite cure for the disease. The prevention of tuberculosis is not merely the avoidance of a germ. The treatment of tuberculosis is not merely a dose of medicine.

As a matter of fact, most of the tuberculosis in adult life is due to infection acquired during childhood; this infection remaining dormant until something happens to lower resistance of the individual. Thus we see that tuberculosis is, in reality, a child problem. If we can protect the child from infection until after he is 12 years of age, the disease could be readily overcome. After childhood infection the question as to whether or not an individual will become tuberculous depends very largely upon the kind of life he leads and the general physical health which he builds up.

The reasons for the great decrease in tuberculosis mortality are many, but all have to do with the promotion of community and individual health. The better care of expectant mothers, the employment of competent physicians in place of ignorant midwives at child birth, the better care of babies, the control and supervision of public milk supply—these things have had much to do with the prevention of tuberculosis and also the prevention of infant mortality, which is still shockingly high.

Better baby conferences, child welfare stations, school nurses and the medical inspection of school children, have been factors in the extension of the span of life. Open-air school rooms and nutrition classes and, above all, the education of school children through such organizations as the modern health crusade, have laid the foundation for a generation of men and women who will live longer and live better than we or our forefathers have lived.

Going back a generation or two we find that the bath tub was not to be found in the average household and that bathing was not one of the favorite indoor sports. We find that there was a general belief that night air was dangerous and for that reason windows and doors were tightly closed. In that day there were any number of superstitions in regard to Health and the buckeye was found in many a trouser pocket, placed there to keep off rheumatism.

In the days of our grandparents a man of 60 or 70 put on a skull cap and dressing gown and sat in his unventilated living room awaiting the end. Today the man of 70 puts on a red necktie and a sport suit and becomes an expert at golf. In those days the woman of 60 wore a cap and spent her time knitting socks for her grandchildren. Today the young woman of 70 can hardly be told from her flapper granddaughter, if she is headed the other way.

Seriously, the world's greatest problem, greater than wealth, greater than fame, greater than industrial supremacy, is being solved by the education of the people in right methods of living, by adequate care for the mother, proper conservation of the child, fair consideration of the school boy and the school girl, as the nation's most valuable assets.

If there is a health association in your town or community, if there is a tuberculosis association in your community, or if you have a visiting nurse association, get behind these organizations and boost them to the limit. You will get the credit of being public spirited, but more than that, you will contribute to that kind of education which will give to your community and to you and to your household, longer, happier and more effective life.

me—yet he did not. After we met he told me he was afraid to see me because he knew he would meet his fate. I felt the same way. Something told me: "You will fall in love with Charlie Chaplin." And so I did not apprise him of my arrival, though, of course, he read about it in the newspapers.

It was not until some time in October that we actually saw each other. In fact, it was the occasion of the Actors' Fund Pageant that brought us together. I was selected to appear as Cleopatra in the pageant. Charlie Chaplin was selected to conduct the orchestra. Strangely enough, we missed each other at the rehearsals—it was not until the actual performance that I saw him wielding his baton. And as I walked toward him I looked into his face.

It was then that I realized that I had been in love with him for more than a year—without being aware of it. I could hardly wait until the pageant was over to see him. And later he confided to me that he had experienced the same feeling at exactly the same time.

Of course, after the performance we met. The following day he called at my home, and since then, except when business or social duties prevent, we have been inseparable. We understand each other perfectly, and I am sure we will be happy. For my Charlie is not only the dearest boy in the world, but the cleverest. He is a genius.

If it were not for my Charlie life in Hollywood would be unbearable—for after life in a great world capital like Berlin existence in a small community like Hollywood is very tame. But my Charlie has made my winter in Hollywood the happiest winter in my life. For my Charlie is my life.

HOW I FELL IN LOVE WITH POLA

By Charlie Chaplin

IT BEGAN back in Berlin, a year and a half ago. I fell in love with Pola the instant I met her and the only reason I didn't tell her so was because I was too bashful to confess it. I did tell her she was the loveliest lady I had ever met and I'm sure she must have guessed the secret of my heart.

But for nearly a year an ocean separated us—and an ocean is an awful bar to a successful love affair. So it was not until I saw her at the Actors' Fund Pageant at the Hollywood ball last October that our romance was renewed. I had purposely avoided her when she first arrived in Hollywood, for I felt that it would result exactly as it has. Isn't it strange how we instinctively feel the fate that is about to overtake us?

However, when I saw Pola in all her glorious beauty as she swept toward me the fateful day of the great pageant I could not resist her any longer. Something I cannot describe surged all over inside me. I felt like a drowning man—yet exalted as I never had been before. And it was not very long before I confessed my love, and so, to my happiness and surprise, I learned that Pola felt the same way about me.

I have always wanted to be married, to have a real home, with children. I have wanted this more than anything in the world. And for years I had hoped that I would meet the right woman—a woman with sympathy, understanding, affection and at the same time possessed of beauty, charm and intelligence.

Until I met Pola this ideal woman remained a dream. Today she is a reality.

I can understand my love for Pola, for she is everything I have ever dreamed of. But why she should love me is something I will never understand. I lack the physique, the physical strength that a beautiful woman admires. However, perhaps it is best that I do not question the gifts of the gods.

I will be a difficult husband to live with—for when I am at work I give every ounce of myself to my task. My wife will have to show great understanding—great sympathy. And my wife must trust me—there must be mutual trust, mutual freedom from suspicion, or there can be no happiness.

Understanding—that's the great thing in married life. And that is what Pola and I have in common.

I realize that she is a great artist—she regards me as one—and she knows what love means, for she has that perfect understanding that surpasses all other qualities of womankind.

The Ozark Bluff Dwellers, Ancient Missourians

spot is an important part of Mr. Harrington's work. Not all of the relics, or "specimens," as he terms them, are removed from the places where they are found, though all that have any special significance as keys to unlock the past are photographed. Outstanding specimens are taken up, boxed and shipped to the museum at Broadway and 155th street, New York City, where in future years any Missourian visiting the metropolis may inspect the remains of some few of the first Missourians of whom science now has a record.

The other day a staff writer for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine visited the Harrington camp, across the Cowskin from the picturesque village of Noel, in the extreme southwest corner of Missouri. The camp has six regular inhabitants, including Mr. and Mrs. Harrington and their little son, the latter's collie pup, "Bruce," and Mr. and Mrs. Turbyfill. The expedition probably will remain there until early in May.

Exceedingly human persons are these scientific researchers, camping out in the Ozarks for the glory of anthropological science. Flowing past the camp is one of those clear and tuneful brooks for which the Ozarks are famous. Save for the white tents and a pile of stovewood, the scenery is as wild and wonderful as it was when the mother of Little Pappoose probably bore him on her back as she wandered up and down that hollow in search of medicinal herbs or of cane and bark for weaving.

In a tent at the end of the row are collected the specimens found. From time to time a box is packed and shipped to the museum. This writer enjoyed the unique sensation, inside that tent, of sitting down upon a packing case filled with parts of skeletons of human brothers and sisters dead these 10 centuries or more, whilst Mr. Harrington removed from paper sacks certain portions of the remains of a prehistoric man he had dug up a day or so earlier from a rock shelter under Bonebrake bluff, near Elk Springs, about five miles above Noel.

One specimen was the lower jaw, with all but two of the teeth in place. Cave rats, it was explained, probably pulled the two that were missing. All the teeth were perfect. Mr. Harrington handed the jawbone to the writer, who turned it upside down. Two more teeth fell out. These were picked up and replaced.

A part of the deerskin suit worn by this ancient warrior also was shown. One could see where the ancient seamstress had done a very neat job of sewing the parts together, using some sort of fiber. The stitching was close and regular. A large piece of the dried skin of the ancient was inspected. Unfortunately, the skull had been gnawed by cave rats, the Missouri miscreants that correspond to the ancient tomb robbers of Egypt.

"We find now and then," said Mr. Harrington, "one of these rats, dried up, and we waste no sentiment over him."

But for the depredations of the ancient rats, according to the archeologist, much more nearly perfect specimens of prehistoric human remains and of articles of human use would be found in the rock shelters of the Ozarks. The absolute dryness of the shelters is set forth as the only reason anything of value to science is found therein. The overhanging ledges fend off the rainfall; and no water seeps through the rocks where the shelters are.

In Arkansas and Missouri regions where his researches have been made, Mr. Harrington has found seven or eight skeletons, men, women and children being represented. In some instances only parts of the skeletons were found. In each case the bodies had been buried in a posture of reclining on the left side, with the knees drawn up. Only portions of the dried flesh and skin remained. Such human remains as were not altogether fleshless have been described as "mummies," though that term pleads for explanation here.

"The three or four mummies found by our expedition in the Ozarks," said Mr. Harrington, "had not been artifically embalmed. Their state of preservation is due simply to the dryness of the dust deposits in which they were interred. This has dried the flesh. Where there has been the slightest dampness we find only fleshless skeletons. All these human relics belonged apparently to the same prehistoric people we have named the Ozark bluff dwellers. Though we have no way of determining exactly, it is quite probable that this people occupied the Ozarks a thousand or more years ago, being supplanted by tribes found in this region by white men."

The excavator explains that there are two "layers" of accumulations in the rock shelters. The top layer extends to a depth of about 18 inches. In this layer have been found relics of people possibly identical with the Osage Indians, though showing no trace of European influence. That means that the upper-layer people existed at least 300 years ago. The lower layer extends to bedrock, from five to six feet from the surface. In this layer all the specimens are of a people that lived before the age of the bow and arrow, which proves this race's ancientness.

Perhaps the most interesting specimen found is a primitive hoe, the blade being a big fresh-water mussel shell, the handle of wood. The thongs binding handle and blade together remain intact. With this implement the ancient people cultivated their crops. Some "digging sticks" also were discovered, probably the prehistoric Missouri-Arkansas "plow."

That this ancient people cultivated crops is proved by the discovery, in the lower layer, of corncobs, specimens of tobacco—no pipes, by the way—and of various other vegetable edibles.

"Another somewhat pathetic thing I came across in one of the rock shelters," said Mr. Harrington, who had told with some feeling about the finding of the down-lined cradle and its long-dead infant occupant, "was a bag of corn and one of squash seed, which no doubt some ancient woman had hidden behind a stone. She had put it there as seed for planting when spring came again. Then, no doubt, she had moved away, or perhaps had died, and so the unplanted seeds remained there in their fiber bags until we came on the scene so many centuries later."

Leaves and seed pods of tobacco were unearthed several feet down. The presence of the seed pods is taken as proof that the ancient folk cultivated tobacco, these having been laid up for springtime planting. Sunflowers also were excavated. Squashes were found. Two specimens of seeds not as yet identified are puzzling the discoverer. Gourds, evidently used as drinking cups, just as later Missourians have used them, were dug up in some of the shelters. Long necks of gourds seemed to have been in service for bottling purposes.

Fragments of woven basketry have been found in nearly all of these Ozark rock shelters where digging has been done. Some of these are of the large coiled-basket type, long known in Arizona, Utah and New Mexico. They are said to be the first specimens of this sort of ancient handiwork found east of those states. Mats woven of bark and grass fibers seem to have been abundant in the household economy of the Ozark bluff dwellers. Specimens which have escaped the cave rat indicate an enviable artistry. In most cases the human remains were wrapped in mats or in grass bandages, much of which material had disintegrated.

One of the specimens most highly prized is a stone ax still set in its original wooden handle. This was found by A. C. Weimer, one of Mr. Harrington's assistants, in a rock shelter along the White River in Benton County, Ark. The blade is of flint. Other ax blades have been dug up, but this is the only one still set in its handle.

Ashes of innumerable fires, where the ancient race cooked food and kept warm, have been discovered in the lower layer of the accumulations. Charred wood is seen here and there. Bones of various kinds of animals, including the bear and the deer, are littered through the layer. In many instances the bones were cracked to get at the savory marrow. One of the excavators remarked that the bluff dwellers seem to have used their own living premises as places for garbage heaps. Gnawed and cracked bones from the banquet were tossed to the ground and gradually buried under. Generation after generation, dwelling in the same shelters, added to the accumulation. The ashes of their fires are dead these many centuries, but the expert and persistent efforts of Mr. Harrington and his aids have breathed the breath of a living interest into the inert relics of the past.

Some of the excavators are merely amateur, though their interest in the work is so keen that they may be calculated to qualify as experts if they stay on the job. One of these is J. A. Truitt of Noel, known through the Ozarks as "the cave man." He used to conduct street cars in St. Louis, but about a dozen years ago he went to Elk Springs, three miles above Noel, and bought out and conducted a rural store. Just back of his store and home, on his own land, he discovered a commodious cave, with several large chambers rich in stalagmites and stalactites, from which discovery comes his description as "the cave man." He sold out for $10,000. Mr. Truitt was one of the diggers who helped to unearth the Bonebrake bluff ancient described earlier in this narrative, but when he found a moccasin in a state of excellent preservation he felt that he should be classed as a professional.

"Where the other moccasin was I can't imagine," he remarked. "Maybe that prehistoric person was a one-legger."

There are some diggers, recently developed, who hinder rather than help the cause. Some of these, Ozark natives of youthful energies, invaded the Bonebrake bluff shelter when the Harrington party was not present and used pick and shovel with such tragic result that science now has no further opportunity in that particular shelter. But there are many such rock shelters still to be explored. The famous overhanging bluffs at the edge of Noel extend for nearly half a mile, broken here and there. A smooth highway runs beneath the suspended ledge.

It was from a shelter beneath this bluff that one of the many summer resorters at Noel last season, digging probably for fish bait, dug up the remains of an Indian of ancient date. Mr. Harrington, who some years ago had marked out these shelters as probably fruitful ground, heard of this discovery with keen interest and pitched his camp near Noel early in February, with the valuable results hastily sketched here.

NEW METHOD HEALS RUPTURE

Kansas City Doctor's Discovery Makes Truss or Operation Unnecessary.

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of Dr. Andrews, 522 Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

THE WAY TO FREEDOM

blindly. It was useless. The demon was at his back, strangling him to death. With bursting lungs, with protruding eyes and tongue, Maynard struggled to his feet, bearing the whole weight of his assailant, and with a supreme effort flung the ghastly burden over his head.

Toselli struck the floor with a thump which stunned him momentarily. Then he rose, catlike, to his feet, jerked open the door, and leaped from the moving platform.

Maynard stood for an instant stupidly regarding the broken chain which dangled from his wrist. Then, so quickly that the dozen travelers in the distant seats never quite understood what had happened, he, too, ran to the door of the car and leaped after the fugitive.

* * * * * *

A curious procession moved up the main street of Madison. It was headed by what might have been a man, and might also have been a gorilla. Battered to a pulp, eyes blackened, spitting out teeth, the thing sobbed and begged for mercy as it stumbled along. Its arms swung helplessly at its sides, and on one of the wrists glittered the broken half of a pair of handcuffs.

Behind the creature, pushing it ahead whenever it faltered, came a man. His coat was split, his collar gone, his face torn and bleeding, and quite unrecognizable for the coal dust and cinders ground into it.

Yet there was something impressive about the man, something which made the growing crowd which escorted him give him plenty of room. Perhaps it was the odd set of his jaws; perhaps it was the strange light that radiated from his eyes; perhaps it was the fact that the other half of the broken handcuffs dangled from his own wrist.

Without slackening his deliberate pace, without glancing to the right or to the left, Maynard marched the prisoner into the police station.

"This is Toselli," he said. Half a dozen hands at once laid hold of the murderer.

Maynard glanced at the curious crowd which had pressed into the little room with him. He could have called man after man by name; yet in no eyes could he discover an answering gleam of recognition, so effectually had the cinders and coal dust disguised him. Even in that instant he noted that he was unidentified, that the way to freedom still lay open to him.

Yet he turned contentedly to the man behind the desk, saying:

"You might as well arrest me, too; I'm Maynard, the thief."

Uncanny Senses of Blind and Deaf Wisconsin Girl

world, transcending all records in the process.

When she was brought before the Chicago scientific men, they determined to make the tests absolute. One of the physicians placed heavy wads of cotton over both her eyes and both her ears and fastened them with surgical tape. Previously these pads had been tested under strong electrical lights and it was found no light could penetrate them.

Then Vari-colored handkerchiefs, stamps, bits of cloth, etc., were sealed in envelopes and Willetta was required to open and identify these colors in an absolutely dark room. As she named each color the article was numbered and placed in another envelope, and in every case her reply was correct.

She had some difficulty identifying the colors on a desk pad, one side of which was glazed, but a physician made some marks on a card with a blue pencil and handed it to her. She said at once that it was only a white card with some blue marks on it.

The different colored yarns used in the recent tests had been in service for 10 years in examining many thousands of railway employes. They had been washed repeatedly with soap and benzine, packed tightly in boxes so that one color frequently overlaid another, and the colors carrying the stronger odors had penetrated, submerged and, to a large extent, neutralized the weaker odors, but Willetta picked them out unfailingly.

She then was tested with several envelopes having differential weights of 0.2 gram, but she determined all of them correctly, and with amazing rapidity, placing the envelopes in their relative positions with regard to weight. Various powders were then mixed and she named the color of each ingredient as it was added. A cork tube, suspended by a camel's hair, was oscillated before her face and she told to a fraction of an inch how close it came to her nose in its swings.

A pair of calipers were held eight feet distant and opened and closed. In every instance she told how wide the calipers were open.

The physicians who conducted the tests say that they are convinced the girl is not abnormal in any respect, but has developed the senses of touch and smell to a degree not hitherto known. They reject the suggestion that she retains any vision whatever, and believe that, through her, science will be able to open new fields for all persons afflicted with blindness and deafness.

They agree that she will probably achieve fame as a teacher of those similarly afflicted. Her physical condition is perfect and she is highly enthusiastic over the possibilities of bringing relief to others handicapped as she was until she developed her remarkable senses of smell and touch.

DID YOU EVER HEAR THIS ONE?

for the astronomer and asked him what excuse he had to offer for what had taken place and complained of the great discomfort that he had suffered. The astronomer apologized and said that all the signs had gone wrong and that the conditions surely indicated that the weather would be fine and clear. The King summarily dismissed the astronomer as being utterly incompetent to fill the post, sent for the laborer and asked him whether he could part with the ass, as the King desired it for one of his positions. The laborer was glad, of course, to oblige the King and brought the ass to the castle, where he was duly installed in the place of the astronomer.

"Do you know," the President was supposed to have mused, "ever since that time every jackass seems to think that he is entitled to a high place in the advisory councils of his nation."

SENATOR KENNETH McKELLAR, Democrat, of Tennessee, has a story he told in his hot campaign with former Senator Luke Lea and former Gov. Hamp Patterson six years ago. He told his constituents that when it came to a choice between his opponents it was like the negro that asked his employer to buy him a marriage license.

"Boss," said the negro, "fetch me back a pair of dem marriage licenses from town."

The employer bought a license for his employe and Lucy Lee and read it to the negro.

"Dat's a mistake, boss, it's Mandy Patterson dat I wants to marry. I used to go wid Lucy, but Mandy's my latest gal."

"Well, I did not know that, John, but I can take it back and exchange it," said the white man.

"How much will it cost to do dat?" the negro inquired.

"Twenty-five cents."

"No, boss, don't do it; jes' give me dis one. Dey ain't dat much difference between dem niggers."

GLANDS NOW USED TO GROW HAIR

Baldness Quickly Relieved. New Scientific Method Restores Health and Hair Growth.

Now it is possible for any bald man or woman to have a full luxuriant growth of hair in a short time. Hair growth is now conceded by scientists to be dependent upon the proper functioning of endocrine glands—and baldness is directly traceable to disturbed gland functions. As hair growth is dependent on these endocrine gland secretions it makes possible the assimilation of those elements in the blood which are necessary to a luxuriant growth of hair.

Endocrine gland concentrates can now be administered to directly stimulate those glands which influence hair growth.
This discovery may be easily used in the privacy of your own home. Within a few weeks you will notice new, vigorous hair beginning to come in. With this growth you can quickly restore your hair to its former bright, healthy, color and fullness.

Nell Brinkley Has Chosen these Five Fashionable Modes of Hair Waving

Which is Most Becoming to You?

The Plain Bob is waved by winding the hair around the frame instead of the arm. Begin with the tips and wind upward to the scalp, catching in the ends of the hair as you start winding. The tips of the hair may be marcelled.

For a beautiful Marcel, part the hair in the direction the waves are to run. Holding the Nell Brinkley Waver rigid and close to the head, wind the hair about the arm in flat bands which overlap each other by half. Keep the hair smooth and firmly wound.

For the soft, loose ripples of the Round or American Wave, take thick strands of hair irregularly about the head and wind lightly about the Nell Brinkley Wavers. Comb out with the tips and of a comb for a fluffy effect.

To Water Wave naturally wavy or permanently waved hair, wet the hair thoroughly and follow the directions for either a Horseshoe Wave or Marcel.

Rounded Edges Cannot Break the Hair

WHICH of these five singularly charming modes of hair waving is most becoming to you? Which one enhances the curve of your cheeks—flatters your brow—deepens the color of your eyes? Which one did this famous artist intend for you?

The Nell Brinkley girl's coiffure is not merely an artist's dream, but an ideal that you yourself can attain. For no matter which of these waves you may decide upon as yours, your own hair can rival the charm of the picture.

Ringlets or Ripples — the Nell Brinkley Makes Every Wave

BECAUSE they are so flexible, Nell Brinkley Wavers will receive easily a thick strand of hair for a marcel wave, yet because of their four bars they will hold with equal firmness a lock of hair for a mere wisp of a curl.

Because of their extra length, these clever little wavers successfully wave a longer strand of hair than is ordinarily possible.

After combing the hair, moisten it as much as you judge necessary. Then take a strand of hair—its thickness depending upon the size of wave desired (the thicker the strand the larger the wave), and wind firmly around the center arm in accordance with the directions given for each type of wave. When arm is full, close and push the slide forward until it locks.

Because of their rounded bars, you may wind your hair as tightly as you please without fear of breaking.

Comfortable to Wear and Quick-Waving

IN twenty minutes Nell Brinkley Wavers will give the hair a lovely, lasting, rounded wave. Overnight, Nell Brinkleys are infinitely more comfortable than the usual waver; they are flexible and have no sharp edges.

The air spaces between the bars, which permit the hair to wave quickly, also keep it sweet and fresh when rolled up overnight.

Select YOUR Nell Brinkley Wave

THEN do up your hair on Nell Brinkley Wavers before dinner or bedtime. Follow the instructions given here for the wave most becoming to you. When you remove the wavers, your hair will fall softly and naturally into the lovely waves which Miss Brinkley would wish you to have.

Remember—only Nell Brinkley Wavers, because of their exclusive construction, can make the five fashionable modes of hair waving.

When the policemen of the blood turn cannibals—

"the curse of present day civilization"

READY at a moment's notice to fight danger anywhere, the millions of white corpuscles in the blood are the police force of the body.

They are our only real protectors against the lurking germs of disease. Yet thousands of men and women by daily neglect are transforming these white corpuscles into an army of savage enemies.

How constipation poisons these blood-cells

Every day the human body throws off a great quantity of waste, which gathers in the intestines and must be gotten rid of regularly. Otherwise the waste products decay and form one of the most deadly poisons known—phenol—which soaks through into the blood.

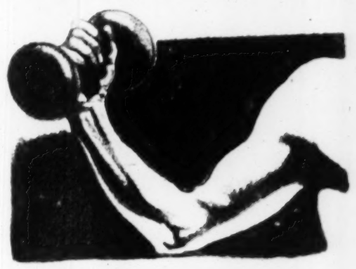
Read an eminent scientist's account of what happens then:

"When the white blood cells," he says, "are compelled to live constantly in an irritating blood stream filled with the poisons absorbed from the bowel, these policemen of the body become, as it were, intoxicated; and instead of performing their customary work of protecting the body against disease germs, they literally devour the body itself—actually eat up some of the brain cells, kidney cells, etc.!"

A body in such a state falls an easy prey to disease. Is it any wonder, then, that constipation is believed responsible for 50% of all our ills?' That is why the first thing your doctor wants to know—no matter what you consult him for—is: Are you regularly getting rid of these poisons—or letting them collect in your system?

Drugs only increase the trouble

Drugs and cathartics are worse than useless, for they force the intestines to act by nervous irritation, and require larger and larger doses in order to blast a way through.



What this does to the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does to the muscles of your intestines—gives them normal, healthy exercise

At last we are realizing that only by strengthening the weakened intestinal muscles, and gently encouraging them to act themselves, can we get rid of constipation and all its evils.

That is why physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active, and that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate, violent action. It is a nourishing food—not digestion-distubing medicine—and like any other food it must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.
